St. Louis Man Tells of His Week of Personal Service to the Pope

Edward V. Papin, Who Acted as Cameriere to the Pontiff, Gives Impressions Received When on Duty in the Ante-Chamber of Pius' Suite.

ONE week's service in the official household of Pope Pius X was the pleasant experience of Edward V. Papin in Rome last summer.

Papin has just returned from a journey abroad, of which his visit to Rome constituted the first part. He was there six weeks, with his wife and two children. Mrs. Papin was formerly Miss Marie Chouteau.

His appointment to the post of cameriere, one of the highest honors which the Pope can bestow on a layman, took place a year ago last spring. The first certificate of his appointment which was mailed from Rome did not reach him, and was believed to have been one of the articles of mail lost in the sinking of the Titanic. Another certificate was later forwarded.

"The Italian word cameriere (plural, camerieri) is not an easy one to define in English," said Papin to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "It is from the word camera, or chamber, and naturally suggests close personal attendance. But from my experience of the duties of the position, I would say that it corresponds to that of usher at a wedding.

"There are several hundred of the camerieri, but only about a dozen have been appointed from the United States. Each cameriere is supposed to serve one week each year, but those living in countries distant from Rome are not held strictly to this obligation. The office is held for life.

"During the week of my service at the Vatican, the first week in June, a Mr. du Mee of Philadelphia was on duty, and for the last day or two a Monsieur de Bossiere, from Belgium.

Papal Carriage Sent for Him Every Morning

"OUR duty was to remain in an antechamber of the Holy Father's suite, and to receive the credentials of persons invited to hold private audiences. These credentials we turned over to the monsignori who were acting as domestic prelates.

"Like the camerieri, the domestic prelates serve for short periods, and in rotation. The same is true of most of the Noble Guard. Thus it will be seen that the greater number of those in the Papal court are performing temporary service. Some weeks no names of camerieri appear in the official publication of the Vatican. These are the times when the Holy Father is receiving few visitors or none, and their services are not needed.

"During the week of my service, I continued to live at my hotel. Every morning the Papal carriage was sent for the camerieri. This ride to the Vatican is comparatively an informal affair. In the days of Pius IX, before the Italian Government occupied Rome, I was told, it was a matter of considerable ceremony, somewhat like the mounting of the guard at a royal palace.

"The uniform of the camerieri is a black suit in the general style of American evening dress, but with collar turned up, and with red velvet cuffs and diplomatic embroidery. A gold stripe runs down the side of the trousers. The insignia of the office is a red enamel button with gold border, bearing the Papal crown and keys and the Pope's name in gold letters.

"Our usual time of arrival at the Vatican was about 9:30, and we would urge the driver to make haste, that we might meet the Holy Father on his return from walking in the Vatican gardens, and might receive his blessing.

"Then our course lay through the Court of St. Damasus, the central area of the Vatican palace, upstairs and through many antechambers to our post of duty. This was at a place commanding a view of the hall, so that persons approaching are seen for a long distance.

"The others who attend the Holy Father are the officers of the Noble Guard and the camerieri participanti, or domestic prelates, who are monsignori.

Interesting Persons Come for a Private Audience

"THE persons who come for private audiences are, first of all, the cardinals and visiting prelates, who come on business. These come almost every day. Ambassadors of the courts which maintain diplomatic relations with the Holy See also are admitted frequently. The cardinals whom I saw most frequently in my week on duty were the Papal secretary of state, Cardinal Merry del Val, Cardinal Billot and Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli, who visited the United States a few years ago.

"Then there are the distinguished visitors who call to pay their respects to the Holy Father, and the persons of high standing in the church who, on the recommendation of their Bishops, receive invitations. These persons wait in the antechamber for the summons into the Papal suit, and while they wait, it is the duty of the camerieri to show them every possible courtesy.

"Without exception, it can be said that those entering the presence of Pius X show the cheering and inspiring effect of his warm, kindly personality. The change from the nervous tension with which some of them, even those of distinction, wait for the audience, is noticeable.

"Those visitors who do not speak Italian do not, as a rule, draw His Holiness into extended conversation. He understands French perfectly and can speak it very well, but prefers to speak entirely in his native tongue.

Pope Objects to Having His "Moving Picture" Taken

"BUT French is the language of the Vatican court, except in its local communication. This is because French is the language of diplomacy. Most of those whom the camerieri have to entertain speak French, and our conversations were largely in that language.

"The public audiences take place nearly every day, when the Holy Father is in good health. These sometimes take place in large rooms of the Vatican or, when there is a large gathering of pilgrims, in the courtyard of St. Damasus, at which times the Holy Father appears on a balcony.

"In these public audiences his usual custom is to make a short talk to the visitors of pilgrims, and to bestow his blessing. His speeches at such times usually refer to the country or countries from which the visitors some. In the case of a pilgrimage from the Pyrennes, for instance, he would speak of the historic fidelity of the mountains to the Holy See.

"On the occasion of his appearance and departure, it is the privilege of the camerieri to walk, with two members of the Noble Guard, in front of His Holiness. Those immediately accompanying him are the domestic prelates.

"At the end of these audiences, the Holy Father passes among his attendants and bestows a few words of benediction on each. This usually marked the end of our duties for the day. There was but one afternoon when, owing to an unusual number of audiences our services were required.

"Twice, when public audiences were given in the courtyard, I saw official photographs made with large cameras. But so far as I could learn, no moving pictures of the present Pope have been made, although such pictures of his predecessor, Leo XIII, were shown in St. Louis some years ago. It seems that the Holy Father, whose modest ways have never been overcome by the greatness of his station, does not like the idea of posing for moving pictures, and that, while many Catholics who cannot go to Rome would like to see the Holy Father in this way, no one has succeeded in persuading him."

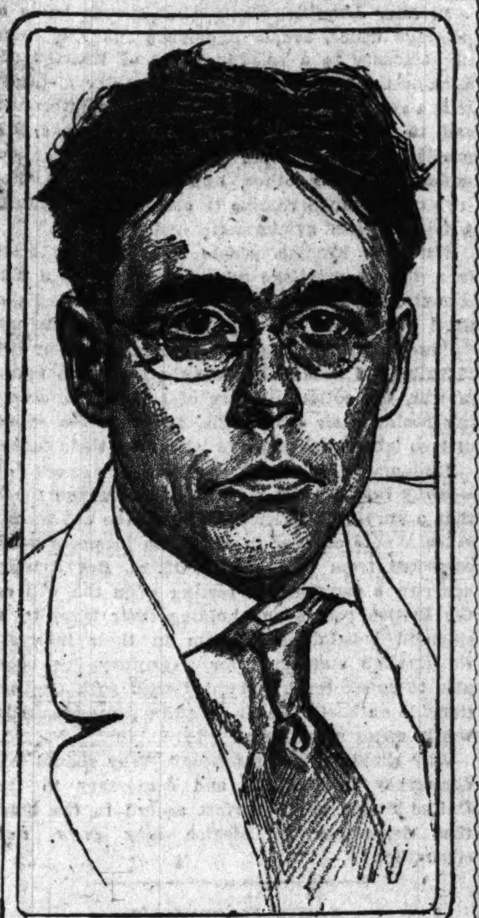
Papin is a half-brother of Theophile Papin, who went to Rome early in 1912 on a mission connected with the proposed canonization of Mother Duchesne, founder of the Sacred Heart order in America. He bought a ticket for his return passage on the Titanic, but was persuaded by Mgr. Bonzano, apostolic delegate to the United States, to accompany him on a German steamer in the Mediterranean service.

The honor bestowed on Edward V. Papin came, it was understood, at the time, at the suggestion of Archbishop Glennon.

Chief Censor of Moving Pictures Tells How 150 Volunteers Do the Work

John Collier, 28 Years Old, Who Came to St. Louis to Lecture, Describes Work of Unpaid Judges Who Pass on 400,000,000 Feet of Film Annually and, Out of This Vast Mass, Find but 500,000 Feet That They Cannot Approve—No Set Rules for the Task, Each Film Being Treated as a Separate Problem.

BY CARLOS F. HURD.



JOHN COLLIER.

IF those 19—or was it 29—Governors had all come here last week, as the good roads people hoped they would, I doubt whether any of them would have had a more interesting story to tell than did John Collier, 28 years old and with a just-out-of-college look, who was the Town Club's guest Thursday.

Few Governors have the chance to influence the general public so widely as does this young secretary of the New York People's Institute (Cooper Union), who is also chief censor of moving pictures for the United States. His work and that of his associates, in its final form, is familiar to everyone who has seen on a white screen the flickering words:

PASSED BY THE
OF CENSORSHIP.

Eight million persons a day see moving picture shows in the United States, those familiar with the business say. The revenues of the business are comparable to those of the custom houses or the railroads. Of the output of film which forms the stock in trade of this business, 95 per cent is censored by the National Board, of which Collier is secretary and executive officer.

Before his Town Club talk (in which, I am told, he did not make the silly assertion which appeared in one published report, to the effect that the saloon has done more for public welfare than the church) Collier told me, in sane, forcible manner, of the board's new work—how it began, how it has been carried on, and what its standards are.

How the Moving Picture Censorship Idea Was Developed

HE began by speaking of Cooper Union, the great people's forum of the New York East Side, and its larger growth, the People's Institute, which serves as a clearing house for settlement and civic work.

"Six years ago," said Collier, "we were up against the amusement problem as it applies to East Side wage earners—the lack of amusements, the bad quality of the amusements offered. This led us into the moving picture field, which was then beginning to show its commercial possibilities.

"The business was developing in a way decidedly unfavorable to public morals, even to public safety. There was much complaint and apprehension. Police censorship plans proved ineffectual. Police censorship, at best, is a Russian idea.

"It seemed to us at the institute that those paying their nickels and dimes to attend these shows ought to have some sort of protection. They had no idea, before going into the shows, what they were to see, or whether it would be good or bad. Something must be done to establish a standard, and to hold the business to the standard.

"Fortunately, the moving picture men saw the necessity, too. They saw that, to avoid general condemnation and police annoyance, they must find some means of standardizing and protecting their product. So they were ready, almost eager, to accept the idea of forming a co-operative body, representing civic organizations, which should delegate persons to pass on the films, and to agree to abide by the decisions.

"After three months of partial and local application of the plan, the managers themselves asked that the censorship be established on a national scale. We consented and organized a national board.

Censorship Board Is Made Up of Enthusiastic Volunteers

"WE decided that the censors should not be hired persons, but volunteers. The settlements and civic organizations have many men and women who are willing to give a part of their time to work for the public good, and this work appealed to most of them, so that it has not been hard to get competent and worthy volunteers.

"Submission to the censorship has been, with the managers, a purely voluntary matter. If a manager does not wish us to pass on his films, we do not pass on them. But we send bulletins to 250 centers of civic work throughout the country, telling them that this manager's films have not been submitted to censorship. The persons in charge of these censors are then at liberty to view the films, and if they are objectionable, to call on the local police to act. Soon the manager is found asking for the censorship.

"The expense of the board's work is $10,000 a year, including heavy postage bills and the employment of three secretaries. This is met only in part by the contributions of the moving picture men. They do not have to contribute at all in order to have their films censored, and some of them are disposed to let somebody else pay the bills.

"The trade ought to meet all the expense of censorship, as the packers pay for the Government inspection of meat, but there seems no way to make them do it without what would look like blackmail. So the deficit is made up from the revenues of the institute and of sociological foundations.

"The Board of Censorship every year keeps off the market about half a million feet of film, which, were it passed, the makers would sell at 12 cents a foot. But as the total output of films censored is 400,000,000 feet a year, it will be seen that only a very small part is lost to the makers. This loss, they consider, is much more than made up by the board's approval of the rest of their wares.

"True, most people who see moving pictures think we should kill more films than we do. Whatever we pass is likely to go everywhere, so if we make an error in judgment, we hear of it from a great many places.

How the 150 Censorship Volunteers Are Selected

"THE volunteers for the censorship work number about 150, and are drawn from the institute, the Public Education Association, the university and other settlements and the Episcopal and other church organizations for social service. No one in any way interested in the picture business can serve.

"They look at 150 films a week, in the producers' studios. No one person, no six or eight persons, would have the time or the eyesight for all of them. The films take 15 minutes apiece to run off, and whenever any question is raised about a particular scene, it has to be run over. If these is a dispute—and there frequently is a disagreement, just as there is in the United States Supreme Court—an Appeal Committee is called on.

"Since the system has got to running smoothly, I see few films myself. I simply keep the system going, and try to see that the right people are on the work, and that nothing is passed over or 'read by its title,' like bills in a legislative body. For we have found that we can't judge a film by its title or printed description, and that travel scenes have to be watched just as carefully as posed plays.

"Our object is not merely to cut out bad scenes, but to keep out crudity, vulgarity and sensationalism. It is not merely to keep the people from seeing a pistol fired in some scene, but to raise the entire level of film art. We don't aim to 'swipe the edition,' Anthony Comstock fashion.

Suicide Scenes in Great Disfavor With the Censors

"SUICIDE scenes, for instance, must have a very good and convincing reason for appearing in a film, or out they go. That doesn't mean that the play is destroyed—usually something else can take the place of the suicide. The suggestive effect of a suicide scene is obviously bad.

"We spent a whole afternoon arguing with the producer over one film which showed the suicide of a villain, who had blackmailed an innocent girl. He was seen holding a revolver to his head, and an instant later was seen lying dead, and the producer's defense was that the act of suicide was not shown. The first reviewers said that made no difference,—that the film showed a suicide, just the same. The Appeals Committee upheld them in this view. But we suggested that, instead of having the villain kill himself, he should be killed while resisting arrest. This was done.

"There might be cases in which a suicide would appear under such circumstances as to be passed, but in that particular case it was merely an easy way out of trouble, an alternative to jail, and it would have had no moral force.

"But we don't suppress the expression of people's opinions, in film form. Shortly before the McNamara trial, a film was shown to the censors, entitled 'A Martyr to His Cause.' The play was built on the ideas of some union labor people about the McNamara case, and showed an innocent man, a union officer, made the victim of a capitalist conspiracy to implicate him in crime. There was great pressure put on the board to condemn that picture, but we refused to touch it. We deemed it an expression on a matter which was a legitimate theme for public discussion.

"Then there was a burlesque on the work of the Purity League. The only change which we made in that was to require that the name of the league be not used, but that the film characters who were held up to ridicule be called the Uplifters, or something else than the actual name of an existing organization.

Malicious Mischief Barred but Slapstick Comedy Goes

"SLAPSTICK scenes, mother-in-law pictures and stale jokes in film form, we do not interfere with, unless there is actual vulgarity. Malicious mischief, particularly arson, whether intended as a joke or not, we rule out.

"Wild West pictures, as such, we don't object to. Ranch and prairie episodes are good for city people to see.

"But after nearly five years' work, we find that we have no rules. There are thousands of precedents, but every new film is a problem by itself. So far as we have a fixed rule, it is to do away with scenes which are generally bad, even if they contain no detail which would be condemned in itself, and to pass those which are generally good, eliminating any objectionable details they may have.

"The producers are getting educated. Most of them, in any case, would not set out to do anything that requires censorship, but, just as in many other things, the irresponsible minority, if let alone, will kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

I mentioned a remark which I lately heard a St. Louis minister make, that the films shown in the better neighborhoods are usually unobjectionable, but that in slum districts, bad films are likely to make their appearance.

Objectionable Films Most Likely to Go to Prosperous Theaters

"THAT is not the way it works, in any city that I know of," Collier replied. "The slums get the cheap, worn-out films, that have been shown previously in the better districts. The ordinary rent is $7 the first week, $5 the second week, $3 the third, and $2 for the rest of the film's life. After the first month, it is streaked and spotted.

"The objectionable, uncensored film does not go to a poor place. It is more apt to be seen in a vaudeville theater, or in a large picture show in a prosperous neighborhood."

Collier, a Southern youth, left Columbia University 10 years ago, to take up the task of interesting the South in the immigration problem. Everyone knew that something ought to be done to distribute immigrants to sections where their work was needed, and to keep them out of the teeming districts of New York. Collier tried to do it. He did not get it all done, but a Commercial Bureau is now engaged in carrying on the work which, in his nineteenth year, he started.

He returned from the South to New York to enter settlement work, and has been at Cooper Union ever since. His visit to St. Louis was a sort of a vacation, after an active participation in the late war on Tammany. His immediate errand here was to advocate neighborhood use of public schools, in which he regards this city as backward, and to investigate the public baths, which, since the completion of the Fairground pool, he believes to be among the best in the country. Miss Charlotte Rumbold, tireless civic worker, was his host at the Town Club, which, be it remembered, is a woman's organization.

President Rea of the Pennsylvania Discusses Public Ownership Idea

He Admits That Tendency Is That Way Through Excessive Regulation but He Believes Sober Judgment of the Country Will Assert Itself Soon in Favor of Giving Corporations More Latitude.

IN an interview published in the Post-Dispatch of last Sunday, former President Mellen of the New Haven railroad system, predicted that the day when the Federal Government would acquire the railroads of the land was not far in the future. Now comes President Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania system, who, in a letter to the New York World, decries the spirit that is embarrassing railroad development and holds that public opinion, though it may trend toward public ownership, eventually must become more liberal and generous in judging these great corporations which he believes will be given more latitude in the struggle for existence. President Rea's letter follows:

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD,
PHILADELPHIA.

THERE is bound to be a divergence of opinion regarding Government ownership of railroads. We are in a period of dissatisfaction and criticism of the entire political and social structure, and sound conclusions cannot be reached without clear thought and careful consideration.

There are two sides to the question. Government ownership is bound to come quickly if by continued state and Federal legislation and commission orders railroad control is assumed without the responsibilities of management. The results are evidenced by restriction of railroad earnings, by increase of railroad expenses over which the railroads have no control, by laws ordering extra and unnecessary train crews, elimination of grade crossings without the states or municipalities co-operating and participating in the cost, the public improvements demanded by way of steel cars, station improvements and better facilities, the heavy increase in taxes, higher wages and greater cost of everything pertaining to railroad operation.

Says Railroads Must Retrench Unless Regulative Interference Ends

THEREFORE, while the railroads have liberally furnished large amounts of capital for improvements, it is a fact that these large expenditures in the past few years have earned little, if any, return, and unless conditions change and the railroads are impartially and fairly dealt with private capital cannot much longer be induced to provide the tracks, terminals and equipment demanded by the business of the country. Railroads must consequently restrict their program of improvements and operations to accord with that condition. Then, whether the results are justifiable or not, a universal demand may come for the nationalization of railroads by compelling the Government to do what private capital can no longer be induced to do.

There is a strong other side to this question; the constructive side of the sober judgment of the country will reassert itself. Within a comparatively few years there would, in my judgment, be a demand to return to private ownership and management of the railroads of this country, because I believe the venture would be unsuccessful and wasteful, and because Government activities and credit would, in view of the world-wide demand for capital, be found insufficient to meet the pressing demands from every part of this large and growing country to improve living and agricultural conditions, foster commerce and other measures to insure national progress.

Public Ownership Could Do No More Than State Regulation Does

ALL intelligent citizens realize that Government ownership could not more effectively control the railroads than present strict state and Federal regulation, accepted and supported in good faith by the railroads. The nation at large will demand similar control by the Federal, state and municipal governments against the extravagant expenditures for non-productive projects which are afterward expensive to maintain. Public opinion will finally assert itself by repealing unnecessary, punitive and unwise legislation against the best interests of the railroads, their employes and the public. Time will bring a due appreciation of the great work and of the present honest and efficient management of the railroads, and their great share in making and continuing the prosperity of the country. I confidently hope that the earliest evidence of public confidence will be unanimous approval of the small rate increase now requested by the railroads.

SAMUEL REA,
President Pennsylvania Railroad.

COINCIDENTAL FACTS.

By Frank Putnam.

There are 17,000,000 unmarried men and women of marriageable age and condition in the United States. Eight million men over 18 years of age; over 6,000,000 out of 24,000,000 men of voting age—approximately one-fourth. Between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 women have won economic independence, or had it thrust on them; they are self-supporting and live singly.

While marriage, birth and death rates fall, the divorce rate rises.

Urban population increases rapidly; rural population barely holds its own.

Several hundred thousand immigrants enter our ports each year and nearly all stop in the cities. Most of them are farm bred and would prefer farm work here, but they come with little capital; the cities hold them with wages higher than they earned at home. Neither nation nor any state has an adequate agency to guide the newcomers past the cities to the idle land.

The United States has virtually ceased to export food and has become an importer of it.

Only one-third of the American farmers own their land debt free; more than one-third own no land; about one-third are lifting—or carrying—land mortgages, bearing over 8 per cent average interest. Absentee ownership joined with fertility-destroying and wasteful tenant farming increases steadily.

The vast bulk of city business has passed into the corporate form, regimenting the saved-up dollars of the many under the leadership of the ablest; the vast bulk of farm business is still transacted by individuals, in some sections loosely organized for marketing their crops.

American manufacturers and merchants successfully compete in foreign markets; American farmers fail utterly in competition with foreign farmers—America's acre-average yield of wheat, on rich new land, is 14 bushels, against 28 in Germany and 32 in England, on land much of which has been farmed continuously for 500 to 1000 years. Collectivism dominates the cities; farming is still individualistic.

Now that Federal and state regulation of urban corporations promises to hold their net earnings down to a fair but not especially attractive rate, perhaps some of the cities' industrial leaders will think it worth while to take hold of American farming and reorganize it on the corporate basis.

Collectivism in the corporate form (chartered and public), seems to have come to stay in urban business; there is no apparent chance of the restoration of small-unit individualism in the main lines of city trading.

Nations and states are trying, through farm colleges and other agencies, to prop up individualism in farming. Germany has done it with remarkable success during the past half century. There has been an enormous increase in the number of tiny one-man farms, replacing large estate ownership, thanks chiefly to two factors—cheap credit and technical education—both provided under governmental leadership. Great Britain is embarking on a like program, borrowing and in some particulars improving on German methods. In Germany (I quote J. Ellis Barker in the London Telegraph), 87 per cent of the land is cultivated by owners; in Great Britain, only 12 per cent. Sandy, lean farm land in Germany has a much higher value per acre than rich land in England; owners make it yield more than tenants produce from the English acres. Arthur Young, England's greatest writer on agriculture, wrote a century ago: "The magic of property turns sand into gold. Give a man the secure possession of a bleak rock, and he will turn it into a garden." Adam Smith in "The Wealth of Nations" said: "A small proprietor is generally of all improvers the most industrious, the most intelligent and the most successful."

What relation has farming to the falling marriage and birth rates?

Only the axiomatic relation of the birth rate to the food supply.

The Wilson administration is preparing to give serious attention to this problem in all its phases. It may be assumed, from the known bent of the President's mind, that he will favor legislation—if any be enacted—aiming to restore and strengthen the early system under which American farms were cultivated by owners, not by tenants.

But human development is not greatly controlled by man-made laws. Laws rather reflect (sometimes temporarily reflect) the evolution of society than guide it. It is therefore possible, even probable, the next generation will see a very large investment of urban capital and urban business talent made in the neglected business of farming. It is perhaps the most attractive field open to such investment, now that the state and national regulation of all forms of interstate corporation business seems likely soon to destroy the profitable city "melon-cutting" industry.

MISSOURI'S DISGRACE.

We have some facts concerning barbarities practiced in the Missouri Penitentiary and intolerable conditions existing there.

We know that convict Steve Willis was strung up 20 days to extort information from him concerning the smuggling of whisky into the prison.

We know that on information wrung from him by 20 days of torture, and afterwards repudiated by him as false, convict Wright was strung up two days to extort further information.

The information of the repudiation of his "confession" by Willis and the release of the falsely accused Wright was suppressed by Warden McClung until the fact was conveyed to the Post-Dispatch by "A Prisoner," through the "underground wire."

We know that since the "abolition of the whipping post," convicts have been whipped. Warden McClung admitted Wednesday that three men had been whipped.

Deputy Warden Gilvin admitted Friday that four men had been whipped.

It should be borne in mind that the four admitted whippings were witnessed and could not be denied.

"A Prisoner," who gave the information about the use of the lash and the names of witnesses to three or four, charged that brutal whippings were frequent.

We know that convicts are strung up daily for failing to do the minimum day's work prescribed by the Warden for the benefit of prison contractors. This admission was wrung from Deputy Warden Gilvin by Frank Putnam, special investigator of prison conditions for the Post-Dispatch.

Think of a factory where torture is used to compel men to do an allotted measure of work! Think of the possibilities of barbarous cruelty inflicted on the mentally and physically feeble, the unfit and the incompetent, prompted by the greed of contractors and the brutality of guards!

We know from the report of the special investigator for the State Tuberculosis Commission that the penitentiary is a tuberculosis factory.

We know that the torture system is admitted and justified by Warden McClung and his deputies.

We know that it is admitted and justified by the Board of Prison Inspectors.

We know that it is admitted and justified by Gov. Major, who feebly shifts the responsibility to others.

The doors of the penitentiary, a public institution, are barred to publicity.

Why are they barred?

Why does McClung fear the light within the walls where his will is law?

We submit these facts—this situation—to the people of Missouri. What will they do about this disgrace and reproach to the State?

DEATH RIDES THE GREAT LAKES.

The late storm on the Great Lakes goes into marine annals with one of the most disastrous records of recent times on any waters. The loss of life is placed at 275, nearly twice as many as perished on the Volturno. Sixteen large freighters were lost with a damage to property of $5,000,000 or more, enough to build a Titanic.

Those who sail these smiling summer seas on vacation outings do not appreciate their capacity for destructive anger. That vessel-owners and navigators did not appreciate it, either, or presumed on the amiability of vernal skies, is obvious. The completeness of the loss of life on vessels that succumbed is appalling. Lake freight boats, unlike lake passenger boats, are rarely equipped with water-tight compartments. A parting of seams on a vessel loaded with 10,000 tons of iron ore means her speedy extinction and if those aboard escape instant drowning, death by exposure at this time of the year is inevitable unless rescue is prompt.

Washington, of course, will give its attention to this harvest of death. Safeguards are possible which the vessel-owners, with property well insured, will not adopt except under Government compulsion.

FARMING THE SEA.

Harper's Weekly informs us Dr. Carl Alsberg, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry in the Department of Agriculture, purposes to reduce the cost of living by teaching the people to eat more fish, and kinds of fish not now commonly deemed edible.

The dogfish of the Atlantic, he says, is a clean feeder; its favorite diet is lobster. Its flesh is "sweet and delicate." Sea mussels are as good as oysters, and oysters are one of the most nourishing foods. The oyster, by the way, is unjustly accused, in most cases, of being a disease carrier. The fault is in mishandling the bivalve after it gets ashore. The department will map the coasts from Maine to Texas to learn where new oyster beds can be profitably planted.

Boston, which knows sea food better even than New York, has taken to the swordfish. Its steaks are highly regarded by epicurean eaters. Italians have made an east-coast demand for the ugly but succulent skate. Roasted tentacles of the terrifying squid, the devilfish of romance, are esteemed luxuries by some of the Southern peoples.

The common belief that fish is a "brain food," and lacks nitrogen, is erroneous. Fish is not a balance for steak, but a substitute for it.

"We have lived only a short time," we are told, "yet we have reached the fish era, long known to the economic history of other nations."

Since Jan. 1, 1907, beef cattle in this country have decreased in number from 51,000,000 to 30,000,000; sheep, from 53,000,000 to 51,000,000. Population in the six-year period has gained at least 12,000,000.

Business management of agriculture, cultivation of scores of millions of idle arable acres now non-productive because held out of use by speculators for a rise in value, or because undrained or unwatered would restore the balance between supply and demand in the American market for meats. Such management seems remote, for the most part.

Meantime, Dr. Alsberg's campaign for a larger use of the sea as a source of food supply may bring a measure of relief to worried housekeepers.

DEMOCRACY SPEAKS TO DEMOCRACY.

Premier Asquith's Guild Hall speech bears a message wider, deeper and more enduring than its reference to a passing phase of Mexican affairs or the tinsel fortunes of an Aztec dictator. It is a reminder to autocracy wherever enthroned and to privilege however intrenched that the people of England and the people of America understand each other, and "nothing can disturb our common resolve to obtain and maintain a friendly and sympathetic understanding."

With the English people this has long been true, though privilege misrepresenting them has sometimes worn a hostile face. Even during the Civil War when the ruling British aristocracy followed Dictator Louis Napoleon's policy of favoring the South and brought us to the verge of war, the cotton-spinners of Lancashire, starving beside their shut mills, felt that the cause of free labor against slave labor was their cause.

Diplomacy is in Europe an ornament of wealthy families. It may happen here and there that a surviving British envoy of the old school takes a note counter to American interests until corrected from the Foreign Office. But Britain has now a Government resting upon the will of the British people and holding their favor by a splendid legislative program in their interest. No English statesman for a century has been able to speak for his country with such unquestionable authority as Mr. Asquith possesses. His words mean something.

Why should it be otherwise? Why should not democracy in England and democracy in the United States be in perfect accord in the hope that democracy in Mexico may grow and strengthen?

JAMES HAGERMAN.

No higher integrity, no finer capacity, no larger nobility of character have graced the bar of St. Louis than were represented in James Hagerman. His professional distinctions were numerous. His principal public distinction, national in scope, was as president of the American Bar Association. Above the eminent counsel stood the man, beloved for great qualities of heart, simple, broad democracy, and true, generous fellowship with mortals. Tributes to many distinguished careers are paid in pomp and floral wreaths and oratory. Beneath these, the real tribute to James Hagerman is paid in the silent grief of strong men.

CULPEPER ANSWERS SENATOR STONE

Col. Culpeper issues the following statement:

To Whom It May Concern:

If my leading opponent for the Senate, Hon. William J. Stone, is correctly quoted, he has asked several Missourians in Washington, "Who is this confounded Col. Culpeper they are running against me for the Senate?"

For the enlightenment of my distinguished adversary, for whom I feel deep respect, but no fear, I desire to state that I am not confounded in any sense, but perfectly serene; nor are "they" running me. Nobody is running me. Nobody can. There is no cloud on my title to myself. The man does not live who dares assert a claim to me. The man does not live who will dare pretend he can influence me. I am free.

But I have moral frailties, not the least of which is susceptibility to flattery. I would be less than human if I were insensible of the genuine interest which my esteemed opponent pays me in inquiring, "Who is this Col. Culpeper?" It would be futile to attempt to express my gratitude by returning the compliment in kind, manifesting the same curiosity and asking, "Who is this Hon. W. J. Stone that is opposing me for the Senate?" I prefer to pay him the tribute of acknowledging that his person, antecedents, affiliations and his record are well known. It shall be my privilege to make them even better known before this campaign is over. I shall feel proud of the honor reflected upon an humble exponent of Democracy in celebrating the lustrous virtues of a great statesman.

Shall we make it a campaign between gentlemen, confining discussion to the issues, avoiding embarrassing questions and awkward pauses? Though for my part I must say there is nothing much in my past that I am afraid to have come out. If Mr. Stone prefers a campaign of full publicity, I will tell all, content to let the public choose between us.

Col. Culpeper's statement creates a keen interest in advance for whatever reply Senator Stone decides to make. Unquestionably the public will soon hear from the Senator, and undoubtedly in courteous vein, since he cannot well afford to let Col. Culpeper have all the good manners on his side. Some people manage to cover up their defects without the aid of good manners; but Senator Stone, aside from his gentlemanly instincts and sportsmanlike proclivities, is far too clever not to appreciate the value of politeness in a controversy where his very political life is at stake.

MERIT SYSTEM IN THE CHARTER.

It was befitting that one of the very first features of the proposed new charter on which the Freeholders reached a decisive conclusion was a provision for the merit system. Such a provision is unquestionably in accord with the desires of an overwhelming majority of the people of St. Louis. Those who oppose it are vociferous but numerically weak. A similar provision was one of the widely commended features of the charter draft submitted two years ago last winter.

APPLEBUTTER.

APPLEBUTTER! What a fine old country flavor
There is in that one-time romantic word!
And how the crisp Autumn air was wont to savor
Of old-time perfumes when the brew was stirred!
They make it now in factories and sell it
Like any other product of a mill,
But long ere that commonplace befell it—
Ah me! Sometimes I do believe I smell it
Still.

THERE never had been then a Doctor Wiley,
And no one ever thought of being drugged.
All applebutter was regarded highly—
Ah me! the sticks of firewood I have lugged.
It was at this time, I recall—November,
When the wine-red oak tree blazed upon the hill.
Heigho! How well—how fondly I remember—
Each wind-swept spark a bright upflying ember
Still.

That a man wuz made to be
A stumpin' er a slidin'—
A goin' "haw" or "gee."
There's some 'at 'lows a feller
That's a gettin' there on hoof,
An' a livin' in the cellar
'Stead uv settin' on the roof,
Uv life, must be a noddin'

But if 'twas them a ploddin'
Why, it wouldn't work at all.
It ain't no trick, I reckon,
To be a dishin' out
The ways to be a checkin'
An' a pushin' men about;
But I'm sorta set on thinkin'
That no matter what we do,
The stars 'll keep on blinkin',
An' the sun a shinin', too.
An' yet I keep on readin'
What these knowin' fellers say,
An' I've ketched myself a weedin'
Out my doin's ever' day—
Jes' as if 'at their decidin'
Wus the pint blank thing to do,
If we want to be a ridin'
'Stead a walkin', me an' you.
But whenever I'm a settin'
By myself I seem to be
Plum satisfied a whettin'
Up my mind on what I see
In the moon an' stars, a shinin'
Down on me, as if to say—
Some men wus made fer whinin',
An' some jes' the other way.

STORY OF COULTER'S HELL.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

At a recent gathering in Milwaukee a well-known minister was called on to tell a story, and this is what he told:

"Did you ever hear of Coulter's hell? Of the two men lost by the great Lewis and Clark expedition of 1803 on its long journey through the Northwest, one was a man named Coulter. He was captured by Indians, who stripped him and set him to running the gauntlet.

"Outrunning their blows, he snatched a spear from the last Indian, killed him with it, and ran into the mountains, naked and wounded, but at last free and armed. Wandering toward the southeast he presently found himself in a land where the forces of nature appeared to have gone mad together. Rivers from which he sought to drink ran hot water, boiling fountains gushed hundreds of feet in the air, volcanoes of black mud vomited at him, bubbling fountains of snow-white mud gushed around, with others of crimson and blue and green. A mountain of pure sulphur crystals rose on one hand, and from beside a stream rose another composed of black glass, almost as clear as a window pane.

"At last, escaping from the place, he was found by some trappers, who clothed him and took him to St. Louis, where they reported him as one whose mind had been wrecked by his experiences. Wherever he told of the frightful country which he swore he had seen, men roared with mirth at the yarn, and made him tell and retell it, till within a few years it went all over the west as an example of the effect of the horrors of being lost on the human mind. It was commonly known as 'the story of Coulter's hell,' and under that name it frequently appeared in the Eastern papers in the early '30s and '40s. Coulter himself finally died, regarded to the last as a hopeless maniac.

"And then, in 1869, some Montana trappers wandered into the region and came back with the astounding tale that Coulter had told the truth, and had never been insane at all. The Government immediately rushed soldiers and scientists into the country and before long it became the Yellowstone National Park. And that is the story of Coulter's hell.

"It strikes me, however," added the minister, "that the story has a moral—to the effect that there is a certain other hell, in whose existence some people still do not believe, but of whose reality they are likely yet to learn."

THE MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

—A DIGEST OF THE BEST EDITORIAL COMMENT AND INFORMATION ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE READERS OF THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.

Carranza Looming on the Mexican Horizon

WITH the practical disappearance from the American newspapers of the last of the Jingo spirit and a greater unanimity in supporting President Wilson's position on Mexico, there appeared during the past week a marked tendency to "play up" Carranza and to advocate the cause of the Constitutionalists. The inclination to "blow off steam" by abusing Huerta is also diminishing, all the hard words about him having been already used.

Carranza vs. Huerta.

Washington Times: It might very well be, probably it would be, that the United States would have to "encourage," in one way or another, the delivery to Carranza of abundant supplies of everything needed by such a revolutionary army to everthrow Huerta. It might be that arrangements would have to be made for such supplies to be sold to Carranza on indefinite credit or lent to him, or even given to him. It might be that such things would have to be because with President Wilson determined to put Huerta out, the alternative would be direct intervention—equivalent, no man can doubt to war by the fleets and armies of the United States. And in all likelihood President Wilson could make war against Huerta no less successfully and surely more cheaply through Carranza and other revolutionary leaders than with our own ships and our own troops.

"Give Arms to Carranza."

Philadelphia Inquirer: Once give the so-called Constitutionalists under Gen. Carranza whose state of Sonora has practically seceded and has set up a Government of its own, guns and ammunition, and the chances are that Huerta would go—and go at the point of Mexican bayonets. If Mexico were headed by a president recognized by the United States it would be the duty of this Government to prevent shipments of guns and ammunition to revolutionists. But President Wilson insists that Mexico is without a lawful government. If that is the case, why must we protect that unlawful government to the extent of refusing amunition to Carranza?

"Moral Support for Carranza."

Pittsburg Dispatch: The United States has the right to recognize and grant moral support to the Constitutional party, which holds a large share, possibly a majority, of the Mexican territory. We may hope, though not with absolute positiveness, that this party, if it should receive undisputed control, would give Mexico a good government. But the United States cannot either forbid the submission of the Mexican people to Huerta, or order them to accept the sway of the Constitutionalists without really assuming the direction of Mexican affairs.

To "Confer With Carranza."

New York Globe: The administration favors a constitutional government for Mexico, and it is acknowledged by practically every one that Carranza, former Governor of one of the most important Mexican states, is a sincere advocate of constitutionalism. Huerta would not be in power if those both able and willing to shoot him out had been allowed to buy the quickfirers and the artillery without which successful military effort is now almost impossible, no matter how many the number of a side's soldiers. The Huerta dictatorship is a consequence of the continuance of an executive order that was proper enough with respect to Orozco, but which 's improper with respect to Carranza. The despatch of a special representative to confer with Carranza suggests that the administration is at last beginning to recognize the illogicality of keeping alive an embargo against the Constitutionalists while demanding of Huerta that he become constitutional.

"There Would Be No War."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The best opinion in Washington seems to be that recognition of belligerent rights will be accorded to Carranza and his constitutionalist armies. The recognition may be followed by active rather than passive support. Instead of merely permitting Gen. Carranza to import arms, ammunition and provisions the United States may, without any violation of international ethics, greatly facilitate these importations. Moreover strong fleets may be maintained along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Mexico. They would be there for the protection of American interests, and for the protection of foreigners generally. But they would be discouragers of deviltry. If worst should come to worst a few ports might be blockaded. There would be no war between the United States and Mexico.

Carranza Against Intervention.

Philadelphia Record: Gen. Carranza, first chief of the Constitutionalist army, has repeatedly declared his opposition to intervention, even to intervention friendly to his cause, and has intimated that if it shall come he would "act as a Mexican patriot." By intervening in the interest of any party, therefore, we would probably gain nothing but the hostility of the entire Mexican nation. The Constitutionalists do not even wish to be treated with partiality. While an embargo upon the importation of munitions of war at the ports held by the Federalists would be very helpful to the insurgents, the latter desire merely equality of opportunity in this respect, feeling assured that with an adequate supply of arms they could end the struggle in a short time.

"A Bad Risk."

New York World: Though foreign speculators are disposed to back Huerta and to bargain for future concessions in payment of present loans, they must perfectly realize that, in view of President Wilson's stand, the odds would be all against him. British capitalists are not likely to gamble recklessly as a matter of sentiment on so bad a risk as Huerta, whatever terms he may be ready in his desperation to offer. The plea of Huerta—that he will restore peace and order—is the flimsiest of all. That is beyond his power. His presence in the seat of authority makes certain that civil war will not cease.

As Seen by a Poet.

New York Evening Sun:

There once was a young man called Huerta
Who said he would "betta da shirta"
That he "coulda lick
Da beeg Yankee Mick,"
And now he's going about arrayed in other garments.

"Intervention Is Unthinkable."

Philadelphia Ledger: The Administration is charged with the duty of employing emollients in the crisis. Rumors of intervention should be authoritatively denied, for intervention is unthinkable. Ultimatums that are not ultimatums should be revealed in their true character, so that the nation may not be rendered ridiculous by the constant ignoring of its demands.

What Uncle Sam Can Do.

Cincinnati Enquirer: The United States can elect a president for Mexico if it determines to do so. It can insure the election of its candidate in every state of that republic just as certainly as the sun rises and sets on the day it may name for the constitutional election. Yet to do this will require armed occupation of the entire territory of that country. A president of Mexico elected at such an election can maintain peace and order in Mexico, if supported by our military and naval forces for a few years.

"Behind the Flag."

Cleveland Leader: If force has to be used in Mexico the entire nation, without distinction of parties, sections or classes, will be found standing behind the flag and ready to follow wherever it may lead. The more thoroughly this vital fact shall be understood by the great powers of Europe the better it will be for the intelligent ordering of international affairs involving the United States, and hence for the peace of the World.

Huerta Losing Support.

Philadelphia Evening Times: Mexicans no longer retain their confidence in the strength of Huerta as a soldier and as a man. They know he has been weakened by the disaffection among his unpaid soldiers and by the success of revolutionary "armies" in defying him as perhaps they never could have defied him if his Government had been promptly recognized by Washington, and if he had been able to borrow the money he needed to pay the soldiers already under arms for him and to enlist still others. They favored the recognition of Huerta last spring only because he was the strong man. Now that he is the weak man—by very reason of President Wilson's policy—they don't think he could be saved, if the administration were willing to have him saved.

What Intervention Means.

New Orleans Picayune: It was a mistake not to have recognized Huerta at the start as the de facto executive, just as other countries did. Had that course been taken there would have been a much better chance to put down the various revolutionary movements. Our mistaken idea that constitutional methods must be adhered to in a country where the people have not the remotest notion as to what constitutionalism and representative government mean, has greatly augmented the evil and may yet cost us much blood and treasure if intervention be undertaken.

"Little Opposition in Europe."

Philadelphia Bulletin: When the United States Government shows itself ready to assume the responsibilities of the Monroe Doctrine, to maintain law and order in this hemisphere and to protect lives and property against anarchy and lawlessness, there is likely to be found little opposition in Europe to the prerogatives of that doctrine. The danger to American paramountcy has been at home, rather than abroad.

ACQUITTAL OF RUSSIAN JEW

THE acquittal of Mendel Beiliss, accused of ritual murder of a Christian in Kiev, has been universally hailed as showing Russia in a new light when a jury can be found to declare against the Government. It may be the last of such accusations, so common in the middle ages.

"Barbaric Bigotry."

Philadelphia Ledger: The acquittal of Mendel Beiliss at Kiev, Russia, of the trumped-up charge of ritual murder brings to a close one of the most extraordinary manifestations of barbaric bigotry known to the civilized world. The case has been terminated, but the savagery of benighted Russia is so real and the policy of the Russian Government is so inexplicably base that Jewish residents of Kiev tremble for their lives lest the Czar's official servile tools may incite the degraded and fanatic populace to a bloody massacre because the Government plot failed.

"Taking the World Backward."

Pittsburg Dispatch: It is to be recognized that to try any man of any religion on such a charge is taking the world backward to what in the minds of average civilized people was believed centuries ago. No man at all conversant with the subject will believe that another can be guilty of ritual murder because he knows that there is no such thing outside of the most degraded savagery. The religion accused of it in Russia has not ably kept up with civilization. It is an evidence of bigotry that such an accusation is possible; but we must do its jury the credit of saying that when the evidence failed to appear they acquitted the victim. For that much justice thanks are due.

An Old Lie.

Indianapolis News: It is related that in the early days of Christianity the pagans sought to check the movement by circulating the report that the adherents of the new faith murdered children and used their blood for sacrificial purposes. That was in the days of the Caesars. Yet, in its substance, the trial which has just come to an end at Kiev was the modern type of this pagan lie—only with the creeds varied. The orthodox church of Russia professes the most fervent loyalty to Christ. The Jewish denial of Christianity has led to the persistent circulation of the gross charge that Jews use human blood in the ritual services. It is difficult for a Westerner to comprehend the hold which this lie has had on the anti-Semitic mobs of Russia. Employed insidiously or ignorantly it embodies the attack which infamy ever makes on the truth. The human blood charge has been made against the Jews elsewhere, but the heads of all churches, Catholic, Protestant and Mohammedan, have, as the occasion arose, denounced it. The Jews of Russia are not the only ones to be congratulated on the outcome of the trial at Kiev. The world knew the charge to be false. Russia itself is to be congratulated.

"Has Saved Russia."

Philadelphia Record: In his concluding argument the counsel for Beiliss said that it was not his client who was on trial, but the Jewish religion. It would have been nearer the truth—but not safe for him to utter it—that it was not Beiliss, but Russia that was on trial.

The acquittal of Beiliss has saved Russia from a disgrace so great that it is almost inconceivable. In no other country in Christendom could a Jew have been tried on a charge of killing a Christian in order to get his blood for ritual use. The feeling against the Jews is so strong among Russians that it may be suspected that the Government had to use its potent and pervasive influence with the Court to save the reputation of the nation. Troops were massed at and near Kiev to prevent a "pogrom," and danger thereof is not entirely removed.

"Russia Acquitted."

Washington Post: The acquittal relieves an international situation which had become tense and strained. If Beilis had been convicted, it would have been difficult to convince those who have been following the case that the jury was not picked with a view to fixing guilt upon the defendant. Conversely, however, Russia must now be acquitted of the charge, so frequently made, that the jury was "packed" by the Government with deliberate intent to indict the whole Jewish race.

"More Than Ordinary Victory."

Cleveland Leader: The end of the trial is much more than an ordinary victory for justice in a criminal case. It is not only the man accused of murder who has been cleared of a foul charge. The Jews as a people have found the civilized world on their side against Russian suspicion, cruelty and race and religious prejudice and hatred.

"Light Is Breaking."

Milwaukee Leader: The jury has shown that while Russian orthodoxy is yet medievalistic and Russian bureaucracy utterly without consciene or scruple, the light of the twentieth century has not been wholly excluded from Darkest Russia. The acquittal was not an acquittal of the accused so much as it was an acquittal of Russia from the charge of incredible superstition that had been brought against it by the prosecutors of the poor Jewish workingman. The light is breaking in Russia. A nation from which has sprung the genius of a Tolstoi can not forever be held in bondage to the ignorance, the bestiality, and the superstition upon which czarism rests.

"Secret Persecution Impossible."

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: The Jew of Kiev appears to have been acquitted of a murder he did not commit only because the Government of the Czar dared not face the contempt and condemnation which an aroused civilization would have heaped upon it had the verdict been what St Petersburg at first planned. Atrocious miscarriages of justice occur nowadays only when the facts are kept from the world. Secret persecution is next to impossible in an age of the utmost publicity.

The "Black Hundreds."

New Orleans Times-Democrat: There is excellent reason to believe that the Black Hundreds were prepared to celebrate the unfortunate's conviction with a pogrom. While the jury deliberated upon the verdict they held services a few yards away from th courtroom, in memory of the boy-victim of "ritual murder." Troops were sent to Kiev in expectation of an outbreak. Will the Czar's Government now signify its acceptance of defeat in good part by suppressing any outbreaks that the Black Hundreds may incite?

"Great Progress."

Washington Times: If Beilis had been tried only a few years ago before a Russian jury on the charge of "ritual murder" he could have been convicted, sentenced, and executed, though there might have been a great deal of question as to his guilt and even as to whether there was ever such a thing as "ritual murder." Excited Russian mobs waiting to attack him after he was discharged were held back by the Russian police. His rights as a subject and a human being were protected not only in the courtroom, but in the public streets. This is progress, great progress, for Russia toward the higher planes of civilization.

"There Are Limits."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The verdict indicates that there are limits beyond which even Russian bigotry and prejudice will not go. From the outset of the trial it has been apparent to civilization that there could not be one iota of truthworthy evidence to connect him with the crime of which he was accused. That he should have been tried at all was sufficient indictment of Russia. Had he been convicted the justice of Russia would have appeared on a lower plane than that of Turkey or Tibet.

ASSOCIATE OF DARWIN DEAD

THE death in England of Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, co-discoverer with Darwin of the theory of evolution, "the survival of the fittest," has excited widespread comment, especially as he was the last of the generation of scientists associated with that revolutionary work.

"Great Breed of Men."

New York Evening Post: With the death of Wallace there disappears the last of that great breed of men with whose names the glory of the Victorian era is inseparably bound up. The reign of Queen Victoria extended from 1837 to 1901, but it is with a group of men all of whom were in the full vigor of their powers during the two decades from 1850 to 1870 that we associate the idea of the Victorian age as a distinctive epoch. If in the mind's eye, we could marshal the long procession of their departing figures, it would be indeed an impressive array. The line—unless we were to go back to Macaulay, who died in 1859—stretches back just half a century from the present date, for it begins with Thackeray, whose death, at the age of 52, took place in 1863; and then came in succession—to name only the most shining figures—Dickens and Mill and George Eliot and Carlyle and Darwin and Browning and Tennyson and Gladstone and Spencer. Wallace, surviving in the full enjoyment of his intellectual and spiritual energy to the age of nearly 91, is now no more, and he was the last of the line.

"Rotten From Top to Bottom."

Philadelphia Ledger: He had grown embittered, pessimistic. At "the last of life, for which the first was made," he seems to have found the earth a pestilential prison house. The entire social system he denounced as "rotten from top to bottom," and "the worst that the world has ever seen." But these acrid opinions are not what established his claim to be remembered by mankind. He shares with Darwin the credit of the so-called Darwinian hypothesis as to the origin of man. He was an indefatigable traveler in out-of-the-way places. Anthropologist, philosopher, student of religion and supernaturalism, political economist, he was as versatile as Ruskin and a more consistent, if a less inspiring expositor and disputant. The world will reject the pessimistic conclusions of a very old man as to the present state of mankind. But it will remember his example as a valiant protagonist of truth, and assimilate what is of permanent value in his teachings with profound respect for the teacher.

"Co-Discoverer With Darwin."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The death of Wallace removes a scientist who seemed peculiarly a link with the past. To many people the name means nothing; for many years only an occasional book or article testified to his continued mental alertness and interest in the world of affairs. Mr. Wallace deserves to be remembered as the co-discoverer with Darwin of the theory of natural selection. While in the East the young scientist evolved a theory practically identical with the one which made Darwin famous and, without knowing that Darwin had reached the same conclusions, sent his papers to Darwin for examination. The incident was curious. It illustrated merely one of the many activities which crowded a busy, useful life.

"Ranked With First Minds."

Evening Wisconsin: In the world of thought he ranked with the first minds of the wonderful nineteenth century. Independently of Darwin, he arrived at the theory of the development of species by the process of natural selection. His magnanimity is attested by the circumstance that he never fretted at the partiality of fate which gave Darwin instead of himself the credit for the discovery which each had made unknown to the other, but which Darwin happened to be the first to demonstrate to the scientific world; and the two great men became fast friends.

"Always Linked With Darwin's."

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: Wallace's name will always be linked with Darwin's as the co-discoverer of the great evolutionary principle of what has been called the law of "natural selection," or, more popularly, "the survival of the fittest." Goethe had dreamed of it at Weimar in the eighteenth century, and Lamarck had foreshadowed it in his investigations, but it was left to Darwin and Wallace in the nineteenth century to demonstrate it as at least a "working hypothesis," to use Huxley's modest appraisal of their wonderful discovery. Wallace's chief practical contribution to the demonstration of the law of evolution was in the realm of what is called bionomics, or the relations of animal life to the world around it. Darwin and Huxley, and particularly the latter, did magnificent work in the anatomy, embryology and morphology of animals. In the field of zoology Wallace was a supreme master, and his researches on the effect of geological and climatic changes on animal life were epoch-marking.

Sent It to Darwin.

Indianapolis News: History tells us that many great inventions are disputed when made known. Their origin is claimed sometimes by two or more individuals. Certainly there have been enough instances of this kind to establish the fact that coincidental inventions and the coincidental promulgation of scientific theories are probable. There seems to be something that causes great minds to flow along similar channels toward similar ends. So it was with the theory of evolution. While Darwin was producing his "Origin of Species," Wallace was thinking along the same lines. His mind scarcely left the subject for years, and it so developed that when he was once in a fit of ague in the tropics the idea fundamental to evolution flashed upon him. While still in the chill of ague and ache of fever he produced a manuscript which he sent to Darwin and which the latter gladly acknowledged as the most marvelous instance of a theory being worked out from independent sources. Rivals Darwin and Wallace well might have been, but their possible rivalry only developed a sweet and powerful friendship. Like all naturalists Wallace had obscure views on religion and in time abandoned all hope in revealed Christianity. Pessimism was his philosophy.

Survival of the Fittest.

Philadelphia Record: The new and revolutionary thought introduced to the science of biology by Darwin, and simultaneously and independently by Wallace, was that new species of living organisms were developed from pre-existing species through natural selection and the survival of the fittest. In the struggle for existence those individuals best adapted to their environment, and most capable to resist, or to escape from, hostile influences, would be more likely to leave descendants, inheriting their characteristics, while the less fit would ultimately die out. To Darwin and Wallace belongs the credit of first showing in what manner this stupendous evolution of living organisms might have been accomplished.

'QUEEN OF HOSTESSES' IS MRS. LEWIS HARCOURT.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—"Queen of Hostesses in London," is just the title that might appropriately be conferred upon Mrs. Lewis V. Harcourt, the American wife of the British Secretary of State for the Colonies.

She has often had the privilege of entertaining royalty. Society flocks to her parties whether in town or country. So successful have they been that a few seasons ago the "Government hospitality fund," amounting to $150,000, was put in her hands.

During the coronation season she easily took the front rank among hostesses. She was chosen as first to entertain the Prince of Wales on his entry into society. In the absence of Mrs. Asquith, the Prime Minister invited her to be hostess at his official banquet to the Colonial Premiers gathered from the world over two years ago at the Imperial Conference. These Premiers were also her guests at her magnificent home, Nuneham Park, the scene of numerous memorable garden parties.

So popular is she that she is the American woman selected to christian a British battleship, the monster dreadnaught, Monarch, launched at Elswick two years ago. When Emperor William visited London in 1911 she was the first American presented to him. Her husband, too, is a great favorite in political as well as social circles. Unionists as well as Liberals rejoiced when he was promoted three years ago from the $8000 post of First Commissioner of Works, to a place in the British Cabinet as Secretary of State for the Colonies at a salary of $25,000.

While that salary undoubtedly is acceptable, Harcourt does not require it to keep the wolf from his door. Aside from his own revenues, his wife has been well provided for by her father, the late Walter H. Burns, a New York banker, and her uncle, the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

Husband Abhors Militant Suffragettes.

Although Harcourt is exceedingly popular among those who know him, he is the pet aversion of the militant suffragettes. Once they tried to set fire to the wing of his Nuneham home where his children were. The outrage excited profound indignation, but the perpetrators of it never were discovered.

All the time Mrs. Harcourt can spare from her social duties (which are exacting since as the chief Liberal hostess she gives weekly receptions to distinguished statesmen), and from attendance upon her invalid mother at North Mymms, she spends with her children. There are four—Dorris, who was 13 years old last March; Olivia, 11 last April; Barbara, 8 in the same month, and William Edward, the only son, 5 in October. King Edward was sponsor for him.

Nuneham is one of the most beautiful estates in England. It is on the Thames just outside of Oxford, with a magnificent Jacobite house, full of paintings by great artists and wrapped in historical interest, standing in the midst of the loveliest lawns and gardens rich in shrubs and shade trees.

For the party to the Colonial Premiers a special train took from London a great multitude of guests. The scene of the grounds was extremely brilliant. The company wandered in and out of the reception room in the wonderful house, sat amid the flowers for which Nuneham is famous or went on the river in launches and skiffs. Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt were everywhere among their guests, indefatigable in doing the honors.

The late J. Pierpont Morgan was there and had a long chat with the Prime Minister and seemed to be much with Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George—who was quite as much taken with Morgan.

Mrs. Waldorf Astor's Pet Philanthropy.

Another highly popular and energetic American hostess in London is Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who is recruiting her strength in her old home in America. She devotes herself to social and philanthropic matters. Especially is she interested in Good Will Limited, a society started as a dressmaking business to provide regular, well-paid employment under satisfactory conditions for girls living in the East End and to counteract some of the evils arising from sweating and underpaid work carried out under the most unhealthy conditions. Mrs. Astor has helped this society by every means in her power, even lending her house on St. James Square, where they can display their beautiful gowns before society ladies and thus bring their splendid work into public notice. This autumn there was a special show of costumes and lingerie made by these girls.

Mrs. Astor's interest in these girls is steady and practical, not spasmodic as is so often the case with society people. She has given the workers picnics in her beautiful old world home at Cliveden, which is one of the prettiest places on the upper Thames, not far from Maidenhead.

Queen Victoria's Anonymous Letter.

The biography of the fourth Earl of Clarendon, the famous Cabinet Minister of Queen Victoria's reign, which has just been published here by Sir Herbert Maxwell, reveals that Queen Victoria once wrote an anonymous letter to the London Times. This was in April, 1864, after the London tradesmen had been making one of their periodical protests against the Queen's seclusion, which was ruining trade.

She had abandoned all court drawing rooms as well as most of the small entertainments of the society season. Her friends among the nobility followed her example and the dressmakers, florists and all shopkeepers in general suffered from lack of business.

The letter of the Queen was written entirely by her own hand and she gave it personally to her secretary, Gen. Grey, who took it himself down to the office of the Times and put it into the hands of Editor Delane.

The letter was a strong defense by the Queen of her retirement, which she explained was enforced upon her by the cares of State as well as by her own mourning for the Prince consort, and it stated that the Queen had not the slightest intention of resuming her social duties or bringing back the custom of the drawing room receptions. The letter was signed "Anonyma," and the idea prevails that the editor of the Times himself did not know that the Queen wrote the letter, as no mention is made of it in his own biography.

"FINEST TENOR I'VE HEARD," SAYS DE RESZKE

Former Operatic Star Predicts That Madrid Bullfighter He Is Training Will Rival Caruso.

The man who is to put Caruso in the shade has been taking lessons from Jean de Reszke at his country estate near here. His name is Ferkea, and until recently he was a toreador at Madrid. He is 36 years old, but looks years younger.

A friend of De Reszke heard him sing in a Madrid cafe and sent him away to be properly taught. De Reszke heard his voice and offered to train him for nothing. When the time came for the master to leave his Paris home for shooting in Poland, he said: "I must take Ferkea too. He shall have the lessons even when I am on a vacation."

There is still a chance for Caruso to keep his place unrivaled; for the ex-toreador is said to be indolent. As long as De Reszke goads him, ho works, but his master fears he will get slack as soon as he is left to work for himself.

"It is a pity," says the teacher, "for he has the most magnificent tenor voice I have ever heard."

Jean de Reszke has now gone back to Paris with his pretty wife. Edouard, who sang bass until a few years ago, has also left his Polish estate for the French capital; for Jean has far more pupils than he can possibly teach himself, and Edouard helps him. Marrie Teyte was one of his pupils.

"There are too many of them," he says. "So many women, especially American, finish at my school with first-rate voices that it makes my heart bleed to see them. They cannot all make careers. Many of the best never get heard. Why? Well, because, unless one of the rich men who run the Paris Opera takes a fancy to them and insists on their getting parts, they are just crowded out. And the worst of it is that the rich men never seem to fancy the best voices.

"Tenors are different. There are scarcely any tenors nowadays. But the toreador, that toreador! That's a voice for you. I wish I could get him to work a bit harder. All singers must remember that nothing can be done without hard work. Great hard work and a tenor voice. A man with these can take the world by storm."

HOT SPRING, LOST ABOUT 180 YEARS AGO, IS FOUND

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The hot spring at Matlock Bath, which was lost 180 years ago, has been rediscovered. Its source has been found to be in a lead mine that has not been worked for 100 years. The spring was first discovered by Dr. Short of Sheffield in 1733. Its rediscovery was the result of several months' search by D. Palmer Pearson of Matlock Bath, aided by cave explorers. They explored all the caves and mines of the district in their search.

FILM MAKERS SPECIALIZE IN PICTURES OF WEDDINGS

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The Daily Matin announces that a moving picture company has been organized here which will specialize in wedding films. Agents of the company will assist in the arrangement of weddings to get the best picture effects. It is expected to become popular, as every couple who can afford it will want to preserve the visual record of their marriage for their descendants.

THE LATEST STAR OF ITALIAN OPERA A MYSTIC.

ROME, Italy, Nov. 15.—Lina Chiesura is the latest vocal star on the Italian stage. She is just twenty, although she looks older, has an exquisite soprano voice and a magnetic personality. Her gift for interpreting dramatic emotion is inborn. Critics foretell a great future for her on one condition—that she lays aside mysticism and studies the art from a purely objective standpoint.

For Lina Chiesura has been a mystic since childhood. Doctors are at a loss to explain certain of her psychological peculiarities. Her parents might have made money out of these powers, but they stoutly refused to do so, and the child was never known to the outside world.

When only 6 years she was able to "see" persons in an adjoining room and describe their dress and appearance. This gift left her at an early age, but she continued to talk with invisible persons on subjects quite beyond those which ordinarily fill a child's mind. These visions too, receded, but the mystic spirit remained, and one night she was "warned" that her future lay on the stage if she would give her mind to developing her physical gifts as a singer. That decided her future.

She studied at Pavia, her native city, under the best local masters, went later to the Milan Conservatory and finally took lessons from Nina Carloni.

Her debut was made a few weeks ago in the provinces, when she was enthusiastically applauded. She is to appear at La Scala theater, the highest goal of the opera singer.

So far her repertoire is confined to Italian opera, and in this she is already ranked with some of the leading prima donnas of the Italian stage.

POST CARD POPULARITY IS ON WANE IN RURAL ENGLAND

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Decrease is noted in two items in the report of the Postoffice Department, just issued—post cards and unaddressed letters and packages. There were 8,500,000 fewer cards mailed last year than the year before, bringing the number from the United Kingdom to 899,000,000. The unaddressed particles of mail dropped to 408,000, against 477,000 the year before. The only part of the United Kingdom to show an increase in post cards was London.

The report shows that the Irish received 1,300,000 more newspapers last year than ever before and as an additional evidence of prosperity the Irish postal bank accounts averages $135, the English and Welsh $100 and Scotch $90.

AMBASSADOR PAGE STILL LIVES IN A ROMAN HOTEL.

ROME, Italy, Nov. 15.—Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page will continue to reside for the present at the Regina Hotel. Negotiations fell through at the last minute for the villa which he had intended to take and none other has yet been found which answers the requirements of an ambassadorial residence.

"I'm in no hurry," remarked Mr. Page, "and prefer to take my time looking around before I decide."

The problem of housing its diplomatic representatives still awaits solution at the hands of the State Department at Washington, and until it is solved the anomaly is likely to continue of an ambassador being compelled to live, for a time at least, like an ordinary hotel guest.

"MUTTS" AT SHAWS GARDEN TO-DAY

All the New Dances, Regardless of Their Figures and Steps, Are Called the Tango, and Now the "Castle Walk" Is Masquerading Under the Name of the National Dance From Argentine.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

This is the last gasp on the subject of dancing. Last year, when the turkey trot, the bunny hug and several variations of "rag" dances were taken up by St. Louis society, somebody, who had never seen the tango danced and who could not tell one dance from another, called them all the tango.

The turkey trot was a tango, the one-step was a tango—everything that was different from the old waltz and two-step was the tango.

The turkey trot was a tango, the one-step was a tango—everything that was different from the old waltz and two-step was the tango.

And now the last dance of all, the castle walk, is being called the tango by those who look on, and dances that have been dead and gone these many months are still being called "new dances." It seems time to awaken to the fact that everything that has been called a tango is not a tango. Last year's new dances have been replaced by this year's new dances, which are entirely different.

The tango, as has been demonstrated at the tango tea and at the charity ball, is a beautiful, graceful and dignified combination of steps, too intricate to be danced except on a floor where there are not many dancers, and so difficult are the combinations that few can remember all the steps and figures.

Some of the steps were borrowed, changed beyond recognition and went as the tango last year, just as a step of any fancy dance might be borrowed, changed and called by the name of the original dance.

The best proof of the tango's vindication is the fact that several of the dancing masters who refused to teach the dances of last year are teaching the real tango and several of the new dances this year, not because they have had to change their minds, but because the dances have changed their nature.

The real tango is one of the national dances of the Argentine Republic, comes from Spanish ancestry, is still danced in Spain, and it is as incorrect to call anything and everything the tango as it would be to call all dances a minuet or a polka.

Like all dances, it can be danced many ways, and like the Cuban danzon, can be a thing of beauty or not, all depending on who dances it.

The castle walk is one of the most ungraceful dances that has ever come to town and is pretty only when the dancers have "twinkling feet." It hasn't any of the hip movement of last year's dances—or should not have—but is boisterous and clumsy.

To an observer it appears that the girl is trying to get out of the way to keep from being stepped upon by her partner, who backs her half way across the room. Then there is a kind of dip and they "cut the pigeon wing." It looks like "lots of fun," but can never in the wildest flight of fancy be called a dance. It is all done on the balls of the feet and is so tiresome that the men complained, after the tea dansante last Saturday at the Ted Steedmans, and Mrs. Teichmann's at the Woman's Club, followed by the St. Louis Club dinner dance in the evening, that they were "nearly dead."

Some of the men threaten to stop because the town is more dancing mad than last winter, and everywhere they go, whether there are four persons or six or a dozen, they "turn on the music" and dance—principally the castle walk. Of course, the new waltzes come in for their share, but the walk is THE thing.

At the charity ball some debuntantes draped themselves over their partners' arms and were lost to everything in the world except the music of "Too Much Mustard," and gray-haired men and women with difficulty kept the pace.

People who have not danced for years and years are getting up little classes and declare they are having lots of fun.

You hear one girl tell another: "Jim Smith came to see me last night, and what do you think we did? Turned on the music and castle walked until we were breathless.

There is nothing the matter with the dances themselves and even the ungraceful castle walk can be pretty. It all depends upon who dances it.

Mrs. Andrew Johnson, Mrs. Herbert Cost, both recent brides and just as much belles as ever; Mrs. Jack Hart, Mrs. Leo Carton, Mrs. Lew Rumsey and some of the debutantes, Misses Margaret Gale, Elizabeth Overton, Adaline Capen, Nellie Tracy and Eleanor Dozier, are all wonderful dancers and anything they dance is beautiful.

The week will be one of various interests for society. Scheduled are several luncheons, many teas, two or three notable charity affairs, a wedding or two of more than ordinary importance, two dinner dances and Hospital Saturday, when the staid office buildings will be gay with matrons and maids, who will sell tags for the sick poor.

This afternoon Mrs. John F. Carton will give a large tea for her niece, Miss Marie Louise Benoist, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Benoist.

Mrs. Frederick R. Hattersley will give a small buffet supper in the evening, and Mr. and Mrs. Benoist are planning a dinner dance for her at the Bellerive Club in December.

Monday will be Mrs. Murray Carleton's luncheon at the Bogy Club for her debutante daughter, Miss Dorcas Carleton. The same afternoon Mrs. Cecil Dudley Gregg will open her new home in Brentmoor with a tea for her debutante cousin, Miss Marion Howard.

Tuesday evening will be the Kubelik-Melba concert at the Coliseum for the benefit of Kingdom House and will be one of the interesting musical and social events of the winter. A number of prominent women in society are working to make the concert a success and the cause is so good and the attraction so unusual that it will be a brilliant affair.

Tuesday the marriage of Miss Dorothea Scudder and Edward Hyatt will take place at the home of the bride's aunts, Misses Katherine and Mary Scudder. Miss Anna Lou Porter and Atwell Lincoln will wed at the residence of Mrs. Norman Lincoln, the bride's sister, the same evening.

Wednesday Miss Nan Woodward and Harry Papin will be married at the SS. Mary and Joseph Church, at high noon. Followed by a luncheon at the John Scullin home on South Broadway, where the bride makes her home with her sister, Mrs. Harry Scullin. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Bascom will give a dinner dance at the Bogy Club for Misses Carol Miller and Elanore Scott, two of the debutantes, and Mrs. John Bolland will give a dinner dance at the Woman's Club the same evening.

Thursday Mrs. George Fox Steedman and Mrs. Richard Boyle, two of the young matrons, will give a dinner dance at the Bellerive Club.

Mrs. William Barr of Orange, N. J., is coming on for Miss Margaret Wright's reception in the afternoon of the same day.

Friday Mrs. William Duncan. Mrs. Joseph W. Jacob and Mrs. Francis Low will be hostesses at a tea at Mrs. Duncan's residence in honor of Mrs. Henry M. Meier, and Mrs. Dorsey A. Jamison will have a tea for her debutante daughter, Miss Elizabeth Jamison. Misses Florence Dreer of Philadelphia, Mildred Hord of Nashville, Florence Carpenter and Margaret Fretta of Cleveland and Ann Peffard of Kansas City are all here for the occasion.

A reduction of 50 per cent on all hats with the exception of furs, at 25 per cent. Sally Meagher, 801 Century Bldg.

The Wednesday Club is always "hiding its light under a bushel" or rather it is the bushel wherein many lights shine and occasionally just the faintest ray reaches the outside.

Wednesday the poetic section met, and Mrs. Nathaniel W. Ewing read "A Little Dream" by John Galsworthy, to music. They say it was exquisite and anything but amateurish. Now who ever heard of Mrs. Ewing, who was Miss Marion Rumsey, knowing how to give a reading, so retiring has she always been.

It was the surprise of the day and has been the talk of the club and their few guests ever since.

Mrs. Willard Bartlett, one of the cleverest and most versatile of the young matrons, sang a group of songs by St. Louis poetesses, "When I Am Dead," by Miss Sarah Teasdale, set to music by Ernest Kroeger; "Pierrot," also by Miss Teasdale, with music by Miss Rubner, and "I Am the Wind," by Miss Zoe Akins, the music by Mr. Kroeger.

The young matrons and girls of the fashionable set are a constant source of surprise, with their varied talents that bob up in the most unexpected ways. Here is Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis, who has written the most charming children's book, called "The Next Door Morelands."

Miss Carol Miller, one of the debutantes and one of the most sought after, is a beautiful pianiste; Miss Marion Howard, an heiress in her own right, also one of the most admired of the debutantes, has a lovely voice and sings well.

So does Miss Margaret Gale, another of the buds who composes music, too. Mrs. Lewis Rumsey sings delightfully. Her voice has that rare violin quality and is beautifully trained.

Miss Virginia Morrison Carr can cook and sew and has all the domestic virtues. Miss Adelaine makes lots of her own blouses and does the finest kind of needlework.

And here comes the news that the Christmas numbers of Scribner's and the Century magazines will appear with poems by Miss Sara Teasdale. Scribner's with Sapho beautifully illustrated and Century with "The Carpenter's Son," also illustrated. Harper's has taken four more, and no less than 12 songs have been made of her shorter poems.

Miss Teasdale is now in New York and will return some time this week. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Teasdale of 38 Kingsbury place.

A new short gold hat pin, $2. Heffern-Neuhoff Jewelry Co., 805 Locust.

One of the most interesting affairs given for charity will be the "Afternoon of cards" at the Woman's Club, Wednesday, Nov. 19, at 2 o'clock, for the benefit of the "Little Helpers," the French order of nuns, whose good works have been so far reaching and are irrespective of race, color or creed.

It was to have been given Saturday, Nov. 22, but was advanced three days on account of Hospital Saturday and Sunday falling on that date.

Mrs. Howard A. Benoist is in charge of the arrangements and the women of the board are assisting her.

They are: Mmes. George S. Tiffany, William C. McBride, Ashley D. Scott, Edward Walsh, Guido Pantaloni, George W. Hellmuth, W. A. Bannentine, John F. Carton, Charles Farish, Alonzo C. Church, J. D. Perry Francis, George Weld, Amedee V. Reyburn and Miss Emilie Maffitt.

Special this week: Austrian Broadcloth suits, $40; $60 values. N. Balk, Jaccard Bldg., fifth floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Guido A. Doering of 6607 Virginia avenue have announced the engagement of their younger daughter, Miss Mabel Doering to William Thomas Mellow. The marriage will take place in January, and will be a quiet home affair because of the recent death of George S. Johnston, brother of Mrs. Doering. Miss Mabel Doering is only 19 years old, pretty and one of the most popular girls of the younger set of representative families of Carondelet.

The Wednesday Club will have a meeting Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, will address the club. Admission will be by invitation.

The Cabanne Sewing Club, composed of girls 10 years old, will give a bazar next Saturday at the residence of Mrs. William Merit Penniman, 5251 Cabanne avenue, from 2 to 6 p. m. Misses Marydel Woods, Marian Wilson and Catharine Penniman will be in charge, assisted by all the members of the club. Dolls, homemade candy and fancy articles will be on sale. The proceeds will be given to the Bethesda Foundling Home. All the children of the neighborhood are invited.

Mrs. Charles T. Malcolmson of Chicago is making a brief visit to her mother, Mrs. John C. Wilkinson of Woodlawn, Kirkwood.

Mrs. Hulda Schwarzkopf of 4000 Euclid terrace announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Ethel Virginia Schwarzkopf, to Edward Berg, formerly of Chicago. No cards. The marriage will follow shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Cary Davis Terrell have sent out cards for a tea, next Sunday, at their home, 6501 Waterman avenue, in honor of Mrs. Terrell's sister, Miss Frances Fuqua, a debutante.

The Consumer's League will give an exhibition tomorrow from 11 to 2 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Charles

How to be Beautiful

Secrets of Health and Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. Miss Ainsworth is noted for her marvelous beauty, as well as famous as a talented concert singer, and artists the world over rave at her beauty and have sought her for their masterpieces. She frankly admits that hers is a cultivated, but natural beauty—and no "make-up" is ever used. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Letters which I daily receive from girls and women indicate that my advice is appreciated and really wonderful transformations are made by the creams, emollients and toilet necessities which I have recommended. Many who have been indifferent are beginning to see the wisdom of aiding nature and caring for the skin and hair. It is a duty every woman owes to herself to keep young and beautiful. I wish to thank my many friends for their kind words, as it is impossible to reply to each one separately.

Millicent asks: "I am 18 years old and healthy, but my face, hands and arms are anything but pretty. My skin is dark, sallow and unhealthy looking. What shall I do?"

Answer: I will answer in such a manner that others may benefit by my advice. I do not advise the use of paint—do not "make up." You deceive no one but yourself. You lose the respect of all who see you. Study and work to possess a beautiful, natural complexion—few women have, and those few are the ones who take regular care and use the right methods.

First, discontinue using toilet soap to cleanse the face, hands and hair. Use a saponified vegetable oil called gloriot [illegible], obtainable in sealed tubes. Use it as a "water massage" and you will be gratified by its wonderful cleansing and softening effect on the hair and skin.

Each night before retiring use the "water massage" and follow it with a thorough patting and rotary massage, using gloriot emollient, which is a skin and flesh food unequaled for producing beautiful plumpness and color. Apply on face, hands and arms according to directions which accompany each jar.

The morning toilet should be made by bathing the eyes only with cold water. Then apply the vanishing gloriot balm and again massage until it is all absorbed. This is very fragrant, cooling and pleasant to use, and a fresh application should be made at any time before going out into the weather. Rice powder may be used lightly to deaden the shine, if any.

The foregoing is a scientific treatment which will in a short time transform an ordinary face into one of beauty—beauty of color, beauty of plumpness and beauty of health. A pamphlet to be found in the packages gives much advice which I thoroughly endorse.

Mrs. T. B. writes: "I wish you would be kind enough to give me the formula for a good home-made hair tonic. I am losing my hair and it looks dull. My scalp itches all the time."

Answer: I have many times advised the use of concentrated hairwand powder. Simply get one-half ounce powdered hairwand in a sealed package. Empty into a pint bottle. Fill the bottle with soft, pure water, shake well and apply with the tips of the fingers, thoroughly massaging the scalp. Also dampen the hair with it and you will soon note a most beautiful change. Avoid anything containing alcohol.

Alice M. asks: "Do you think it safe to take something to reduce obesity? If so, what is best to use?"

Answer: Very beneficial results are obtained by many of my friends who have used 5-grain phy-thyrin tablets, which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes. Physicians of my acquaintance commend these tablets, and I believe them to be the best reduction remedy extant. Be careful of your diet, and take vigorous exercise if you do not wish to take medicine.

Madam X. asks: "Please recommend something to take off or destroy superfluous hair? I have a small patch on my chin and it is very embarrassing."

Answer: I advise you to obtain a sealed vial of [illegible] powder. It is harmless and full directions come with it. It acts instantly and destroys the hair without harming the skin.

C. V. D. writes: "I am vain enough to want to improve my appearance by filling out the hollows in my neck and shoulders. Also would appreciate advice on how to round the bust and arms."

Answer: Dismiss the thought that you are vain. It is the duty of every girl and woman to always appear at her best. A regular massage with medicated [illegible] each night according to directions, which are to be found in each tube, will soon fill the hollow places and round out the bust and arms to normal. Use the patting and rotary massage movements. Many actresses and society women endorse this treatment.

Answer: The best and surest method is to treat the blood for its impurities by taking 1-grain tablets quinoxide, which may be obtained at most any well-stocked pharmacy. These tablets have a purifying and whitening effect on the skin and are perfectly safe to use according to directions in each tube. Massage the face with gloriot emollient each night.

Mrs. D. B. asks: "What can I do to keep my hair up? In spite of my care it comes down in short, ugly strands all about my face and neck."

Answer: Try using gloriot wavolene. I use it regularly, as do many of my correspondents. It keeps the hair in curl or wave for days at a time and is said by many to promote a natural curl and wave if repeatedly used.

Geo. D. asks: "My wife and I are afflicted with dandruff, itching scalp and falling out of hair. We have tried various remedies in vain. Will you kindly tell us what to use?"

Answer: Dandruff and itching scalp are due to disease germs and defective circulation, and this in turn causes the hair to die and fall or comb out. Use plain yellow minyol to massage the scalp once or twice a week, and in less than a month you should have no more trouble. To prevent a return use the hairwand tonic advised for "Mrs. T. B." in these columns.

Mabel S. asks: "My eyebrows are so thin and light that the expression of my face is spoiled. I dislike to darken them artificially. Can you recommend a treatment to increase their growth and color?"

Answer: The eyebrows can be greatly stimulated and in time darkened by applying a home-made balm every night before retiring. Obtain one-half oz. concentrated hairwand powder, use a level teaspoonful and thoroughly mix it with one ounce of white vaseline. Apply to the eyebrows and rub vigorously a few moments. Wash off the following morning. If used regularly this never fails to produce results.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Nothing complicated about them

It's perfectly true that in the past a woman could not always be sure of getting a pattern that told her simply and clearly how to work from it. In

Ladies' Home Journal Patterns

however, the method of supplying directions is unique. It is just as easy to follow as it is effective. All the fuss and worry, all the disappointment of mistakes and all the waste of materials are eliminated. The instructions are clear-cut, definite, precise. The results are exactly what you think they will be.

A Wonderful Coat Offering

A special purchase of finest $16.95, $19.75, $24.75, $27.50 and $29.75 coats—will go on sale tomorrow in two groups at $10.00 and $16.50

Over 600 Coats in this lot—the result of three important purchases made by our coat buyer while in New York a few days ago.

WHEN you see this assortment, you will stand and wonder how such beautiful Coats could ever be offered at prices like these—they come in all the various new lengths—many beautifully silk-lined throughout—and designed in plain effects, draped style, belted models with kimono, bat wing or regulation sleeves—some models with the new panel yoke—others in hip seam styles—and in practically every coating fabric shown this season—including

Two-tone and plain boucles, Ural lambs, broadtail, striped moles, Wurumbo chinchilla, brocaded velvets, brocaded plushes, wool brocades, silk bengalines, imported broadcloths, etc.

MANY of the models are fur trimmed—coats in all new colorings, including black as well as many in the lighter evening shades—values exactly as stated—$16.95 to $29.75 qualities—in two lots at $10.00 and $16.50.

Half-Price Millinery Sale

Will begin tomorrow morning—offering you

Any Trimmed Hat in the House
That sold from $10.00 to $50.00—including 50 Plume Trimmed Hats.

Any Untrimmed Hat in the House
Which sold at $1.95 up to $12.00.

Any Hat Trimming in the House
(Paradise and Plumes excepted.)

At 1/2 Price

We have aimed to make tomorrow, Monday, one of the biggest days of the year in our Millinery Department. Plan to be here—and be here early.

We are going to offer you choice of any of our handsome Trimmed Hats that were $10.00 to $50.00—including 50 new and beautiful Plume Hats—all at exactly half their marked price.

For the woman who prefers to select her Untrimmed Hat and materials, we have an equally wonderful offer.

With the exception of Ostrich Plumes and Paradise, which are already reduced, you may choose any Untrimmed Hat that sold at $1.95 and up and any trimmings in the entire stock and pay just half its marked price—and we will trim your hat for you free of charge.

None sent C. O. D.—and none credited or exchanged.

Special showing of the new
Fur-Trimmed Lace Waists

As well as 25 other styles—Monday special at $2.98

YESTERDAY'S express brought us a tremendous shipment of the newest Blouses of the season—those handsome fur-trimmed effects which we have reproduced from higher priced models—together with fully 25 other styles in shadow laces, French nets with various new trimmings and other distinctive creations—waists that regularly would sell for considerably higher prices—on sale tomorrow at $2.98—an offering that is decidedly unusual, to say the least.

An exhibition of the Needlwork Guild of St. Louis will be held Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the Second Baptist Church. The guild is a branch of the national organization, which was formed in Philadelphia in April, 1855, which was modeled after the society in England founded by Lady Wolverton. The object of the society is to furnish new and suitable clothing and household linens for the hospitals and charitable institutions. The guild is nonsectarian, and last year 12,472 garments were distributed in St. Louis. The annual contribution of two new articles constitutes membership in the guild, and a cordial invitation is extended to women of the city to become members. All contributions should be sent to the Second Baptist Church tomorrow morning to be arranged for the exhibit the following day. Mrs. John T. Davis Jr. is president of the St. Louis Branch of the Needlework Guild; Mmes. Henry C. Scott, Louis Marion McCall, John W. Day and E. A. de Wolf, vice-presidents; Mrs. Thomas H. West Jr., secretary; Mrs. Samuel Scott, treasurer; and Mrs. W. S. Stuyvesant, chairman of the Distribution Committee.

The Chix Country Club holds its first informal of the season at Clendennen's Academy Tuesday evening.

GIRLS IN TOMATO CLUBS DO THEIR OWN PLOWING

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Many stories of pluck and energy come to the Agriculture Department with the reports of the demonstrators who organize the Girls' Tomato Clubs, each member of which is required to cultivate one-tenth of an acre of tomatoes. One writes:

"One little Arkansas girl, with the aid of her sister, used a small harrow, such as is used for cotton beds, to harrow the space between the rows of tomatoes in their canning club plot. One girl took the place of the horse in the harrow while the other occupied the place of the driver."

A report from Georgia says: "A little girl of Upatore deserves special mention. She went to school, stood at the head of her class; did all the work of her patch except plowing, working morning and evening; borrowed money for canner and cans and has put up 500 cans of tomatoes and 300 cans of blackberries, besides a variety of sauces, pickles, jellies and preserves."

"Three-fourths of the members of the Girls' Tomato Clubs visited this week are regular 'hands' on their fathers' farms," writes an agent of South Carolina. "One girl is 12 years old and weighs 108 pounds. She told me she learned to plow two years ago, when her father was a cripple. She prepared her one-tenth acre with a two-horse plow, hauled her fertilizer, scattered, bedded, transplanted, hoed and plowed it without help. I found her tomato garden to be in a very productive state."

WOMAN DOES AS MOTHER, HUSBAND DID; ENDS LIFE

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 15.—"I am tired in the very soul," wrote Mrs. Albertine Mock, and then she did as her mother and husband did, ended her life by asphyxiation.

Mrs. Mock's mother was employed in the pension office in Washington and ended her life at her daughter's home. Mock ended his life after the couple had moved here three years ago.

"I am taking Berteen along; I could not leave her," wrote Mrs. Mock of her 11-year-old daughter.

Overworked Gown, and Wig.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—It has been decided to provide a new wig and gown for the Town Clerk at South Molton, Devon. The gown, it was stated at a meeting of the Town Council, has been in constant use for half a century.

BAITELLE SAYS WANTON PLAY IS BASED ON FACT

French Dramatist Declares "Phalene" Is Founded on Adventures of American Girl.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—In his quarrel with the critics over the repeated charge that his play, "Phalene," is wantonly immoral, Henry Bataille has declared that the plot is merely the recital of the experiences of an American girl in Paris. He declines to name the girl, but was trapped into admitting that her home was in New York and her name began with C.

She was the victim of tuberculosis when Bataille met her in the Latin Quarter 15 years ago, and he befriended her and aided her until she ended her life under circumstances as told in the play.

The story is that in her last feverish days the girl becomes a leader in many escapades in the Bohemian set and leads a scandalous dance which so fascinates a prince that he asks her to marry him. Knowing that her days are but few, she shoots herself instead of answering the suitor.

BAN ON FREAK DANCES LIFTED BY UNIVERSITY

But Freshmen Who Indulge in Them Must Do So Moderately, Says G. Washington Faculty.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The ban placed on rag time dances by the faculty of George Washington University a year ago has been raised on a pledge of the dancers that they will indulge in only moderate forms of freak exercises.

The ban was a result of the freshman ball last year and the lifting of it is due to this year's freshman social affair. Several members remained late at last year's ball and what they witnessed after the set program of waltzes and square dances had prompted them to close the after midnight, a move keeping with the plans of the next day the ban was

The freshman Ball Committee long and earnestly for a lifting of the ban this year and the members of girls' sororities have pledged that "decent" dances will be permitted.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Grace: Certainly that brittleness of hair and your dandruff are dangerous conditions and should be corrected quickly by a proper shampoo. Get some canthrox from your druggist and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, then pour this mixture on the head slowly and rub well. This makes an abundance of rich, cleansing lather, and rinsing leaves the scalp and hair wonderfully sweet and clean. These shampoos are very soothing to tender, itchy scalps and so invigorate the hair roots that a growth of glossy, fluffy, even-colored hair results. Canthrox shampoos are invaluable to the finest growth of hair and prevent as well as overcome all scalp and hair difficulties.

Lotta M.: Here is a simple, inexpensive treatment for hairy growths: Mix a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water. Apply to hairs not wanted and in two or three minutes rub off and the skin will be smooth and hairless. Then wash the skin to remove the remaining delatone.

Gloria: I always use a crystos tonic for my eyes when they are weak, watery and inflamed, or use it as an eye wash when I am going to dinners or parties and wish to look especially nice. I buy an ounce of crystos from my druggist and put into one pint clear water, then place two or three drops in each eye a few times a day until they are strong again. This eye tonic is also very good for granulated lids and will give a sparkle and delightful expression to dull, expressionless eyes.

Dolly: Your itchy scalp can be relieved and cured, as well as the falling hair, by the use of a quinine tonic which at least a dozen of my personal friends are using and making at home from an ounce of quinzoin dissolved in a half pint of alcohol, to which should be added a half pint of water. They use this regularly by massaging into the roots of the hair and they claim the itching stops immediately, and the tonic improves the growth of the hair and helps nature make it beautiful and healthy.

Hortense: Indeed, you can easily cure that tired, depressed feeling which is accompanied with such a sallow condition of the face. They are caused by sluggish blood (very common in the fall and winter months) which is not properly eliminating the poisons from the system. Try this blood purifier and tonic: Into one-half pint alcohol (whiskey must not be used) pour one ounce kardene, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take one tablespoonful of this old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling and restores the kidneys to normal action and the blood to a healthy condition. Its timely use will save much serious sickness.

Teacher: In your case the wrinkles and lines in your skin are probably caused by its extreme dryness. To remove them use this preparation which you can make for yourself, which will act rapidly and restore the softness and natural tone to the skin. Get an ounce of almozoin at the drug store and dissolve it in one-half pint cold water, adding two tablespoonfuls glycerine. Apply this before retiring and leave over night. This will remove wrinkles, prevent crow's feet and make your face soft and satiny. Since it has removed my crow's feet I use it to clear and whiten my skin.

Anna: No, don't make yourself miserable by unnecessary dieting or indulging in violent exercise to reduce fat. Make up and take this simple reducer and your weight will soon be just where you want it: Dissolve four ounces parnotis in one and one-half pints hot water; when it cools strain and take a tablespoonful before meals. This parnotis reducer acts gently, is quite harmless, and entirely satisfactory results are quickly attained.

Girlie: I have rejuvenated my complexion and again have the velvety rose-tint skin of my girlhood. I stopped using powder and now use this simple, inexpensive lotion: In one-half pint witch hazel or hot water dissolve four ounces spurmax, then add two tablespoonfuls glycerine. This lotion dries quickly after being applied and is invisible. Use it on the face, neck, arms and hands and it will impart to the skin that youthful purity and exquisite tint it is impossible to obtain any other way. It is excellent for chaps, cold sores and to protect against fall winds, and dispels the oily, sallow, rough condition in a very short time.

CHARLTON TRIAL IS SET

He Will Be Arraigned for Wife Murder in March.

COMO, Italy, Nov. 15.—The Italian judicial authorities having received from the United States documents proving the legality of the marriage of Porter Charlton to Mary Crittenden Scott of San Francisco, the prisoner will be charged at the trial with wife murder.

The trial is to take place at the end of March. Under the Italian code the crime renders the guilty person liable to a sentence from 22 to 25 years' imprisonment. Charlton has been confined in prison here since Aug. 22, when the preliminary investigation of the case began.

Reward of $300 for Man's Slayers.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 15.—Acting Governor Painter offered a reward of $300 today for the apprehension of the two unidentified men who lured Adrian A. Besoni of Springfield to Mount Vernon, Lawrence County, and killed him Oct. 24. Besoni was hired by them ostensibly to remove furniture from a house near Mount Vernon. His body was found in a shock of corn.

MAN BEST AT 85 DECLARES MAYOR RE-ELECTED AT 87

Joseph F. Dennis of Bellecenter, O., Proof That Young Men Often Err.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Nov. 15.—"I read in the papers, once, something about a man not amounting to much after he turned 40 years. That's all foolishness; why, a man ain't worth a cent until he's 75 and over," asserted Mayor Joseph F. Dennis, aged 87 years, of Bellecenter, this county.

Dennis believes he is the oldest Mayor in the United States. Nov. 4 he was elected to a second term. Bellecenter has nearly 2000 inhabitants. He is hale and hearty and, as he expresses it, "as spry as a cricket."

Mayor Dennis is not only Mayor, but he is the real political dictator of the township of Richland. When the offices of Township Trustee, District School Board members and such like are to be parceled out, the candidates present their claims to Mayor Dennis before entering too energetically into the campaign.

When Mayor Dennis reached the efficient age of 85 years he threw his hat into the ring of Bellecenter's municipal politics. This action caused loud laughter among those who then directed the fortunes of the Republican party in the town.

Butt of Many Jokes.

"Why, old Dennis has got one foot in the grave; he ought to be sitting by the fireside. His name is surely Dennis." All these and many other merry quips were the order of the day when the patriarch entered the primaries.

Then Joseph F. Dennis took off his coat, figuratively speaking, and sailed in. He kept right on sailing, too, and when the dust of that municipal campaign had settled the 85-year-old candidate was the Republican nominee.

And yet, the benighted of Bellecenter couldn't see it. They thought the nomination of Joseph F. Dennis an accident.

"It's a joke, and he'd die before he served a year," said political enemies.

They then marshaled their forces to brush aside this aged interloper.

Then occurred the hottest campaign that Bellecenter ever experienced. A three-cornered fight developed in the attempt to defeat Dennis. The aged politician whipped the Democratic and Independent candidates and was elected by eight votes.

He was sworn into office by using the old-fashioned Bible which has been in the Dennis family for 100 years. The ceremony was witnessed by half the village, together with the retiring and incoming city officials and Councilmen. The inaugural took place in the town hall, which Dennis had built and dedicated when he was Mayor of the village 25 years before.

Mayor Dennis gave the people of Bellecenter a mighty good administration. He has been on the job all the time. But his enemies thought he would be content, at his advanced age, with a single term. They were startled, therefore, when, two months ago, he publicly stated he would be a candidate for re-election.

Again Returned Victor.

At the age of 87 years Mayor Dennis proved he was even a better campaigner than when aged 85. He was, of course, given the Republican nomination for a second term, but the "young bloods" organized a Citizens' ticket and Dennis was opposed for Mayor by Dr. W. S. Phillips.

But the advocates of "the young man in politics" forgot to put Phillips' name on the Citizens' ticket. They blame the County Board of Elections for the oversight. In any event, the name of Dennis was printed on the ballot conspicuously.

Phillips' friends wrote his name on the ballot, but there were not enough of them. The final count was: Dennis, 108 votes; Phillips, 91.

On election day Mayor Dennis worked all day among his friends, urging them to visit the polls. After the polls closed he remained to hear all the returns.

"I am 87 years old, but I feel as spry as a youngster of 50," said Mayor Dennis today. "A man is just as old as he thinks—no older. All this stuff about being old at 40, and past one's usefulness at 60, is 'poppycock.' A man has just as good a chance in politics or any other endeavor at 87 as he has at 27. I expect to serve this second term and then I may run again.

"Young men in politics are right enough if they have any sense. But it looks to me like some of the young men are overreaching themselves in politics, and that the 'old men' will have to take another whirl. The saying that you can't teach an old dog new tricks is the truth, simply because there aren't any new tricks."

Mayor Dennis first served the town of Bellecenter as Marshal and Town Clerk. He was elected Mayor in 1870 and served until 1876 when he voluntarily retired. He again was elected Mayor in 1880. He served two terms. In 1886 he again was elected Mayor and served until 1890, when he was defeated by two votes. He waited patiently 21 years, until he thought the time was ripe for him to "come back." Then he ran a second time to prove the "come back" not an accident.

Prescription for Positive Results. Don't Experiment.

"From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half-pint of good whiskey. Shake well. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children, according to age." This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to the medical profession. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half-ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top sealed case. If your druggist is out of stock he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Don't fool with uncertain mixtures. It is risky. For the past six years this has had a wonderful demand.

For Indigestion—Mix one ounce Catandir Compound; two ounces Essence of Pepsin; three ounces Syrup of Ginger. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after meals. This is said to have no equal. Catandir is that new compound, any druggist has it or will get it. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago.—ADV.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Old Soldier" writes: "I would like to know what to do for rheumatism, as I am so crippled that I cannot walk. Please answer at once."

Answer: Here is the best remedy for rheumatism that is known, and if taken according to directions you will soon be out again and be strong and well. Get 2 drams of iodide of potassium, 4 drams sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla comp. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again before going to bed.

* * *

"Laura" says: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cold and cough. I have tried many remedies, but they do not seem to help me at all. I wish you would advise me what to do."

Answer: What you need is a laxative cough syrup, one that will drive the cold from your system. The following prescription will check your cold and cough: Get a 2½ oz. package of concentrated essence mentho-laxene and make according to directions on the bottle. Take a teaspoonful every hour or two or until your cold is better. This will relieve you in a very few days.

* * *

"Stenographer" writes: "I can scarcely do my work on account of the terrible distress in my stomach after eating. I have a heavy feeling in my stomach and gas forms. I am also constipated."

Answer: This condition if neglected may cause appendicitis. You should begin at once and take tablets triopeptine, which can be bought in any drug store at small cost. They are packed in sealed cartons with full directions accompanying the package. I am sure many cases of appendicitis could be prevented by the use of triopeptine.

* * *

"A. H." writes: "Please send me a prescription for a good tonic. I am weak and languid all the time, have no appetite and cannot sleep at night."

Answer: Obtain the following ingredients from your druggist and take for several weeks and you will be strong and healthy. Syrup of hypophosphites comp., 5 ozs.; tincture cadomene comp., 1 oz. (not cardamon), and take a teaspoonful before each meal. Shake well before taking.

* * *

Miss Beatrice asks: "Will you please prescribe for one who is too fleshy so that about 30 pounds can be taken off?"

Answer: Obtain of any well-stocked druggist a tube of 5-grain arbolone tablets and take regularly as per directions accompanying same. Many of my patients have reduced at the rate of a pound a day without any ill results.

* * *

"Unhappy May" writes: "I suffer constantly with headaches, indigestion and kidney trouble. My skin is pimply and oily."

Answer: Three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets) is the best known remedy for the blood. They are made from sulphur, cream of tartar and herb medicines which act directly on the blood, purifying it, thus causing the pimples to disappear and the skin to become fresh and healthy looking. These sulpherb tablets are packed in sealed tubes and can be bought at any drug store. They will also relieve your kidney trouble and indigestion.

* * *

"Mrs. O."—The best remedy for your children is to give them 10 to 15 drops in water before meals of the following: Tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhus aromatica, 2 drams, and comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.

* * *

"Andry" writes: "For the past year I have suffered greatly with catarrh. It has affected my blood, stomach and bowels to such an extent that I suffer constantly. Can you tell me a cure?"

Answer: I heartily recommend the use of antiseptic vilane powder for the relief of catarrh. First ask your druggist for a 2 oz. package of vilane powder, then thoroughly cleanse the nostrils with the following wash: One-half teaspoonful of the powder to a pint of warm water. Use this several times a day by snuffing the water from the palm of the hand through the nostrils; after which make a balm by mixing a teaspoonful of vilane powder with one ounce of lard or vaseline and apply to the nostrils daily. Internal treatment for the stomach, bowels and blood should be used. Syrup sarsaparilla comp., 4 ozs.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; fluid ext. buchu, 1 oz. Mix and shake well and take a teaspoonful four times a day.

* * *

"Sorrowful May" says: "My scalp is covered with dandruff, my hair is oily and straggling. Please help me so that I may look like other girls."

Answer: You can very easily "look like other girls" if you will get at the drug store a 4 oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and use it regularly according to the directions given. It will stop your dandruff and make your hair soft and fluffy and make it grow. This treatment differs from all others and I have actually seen the most wonderful transformations when people have used this only two or three times.

* * *

"Ann" writes: "Could you prescribe something to increase my weight? I am tall and thin to such an embarrassing degree that I am frequently subjected to slighting remarks."

Answer: Hypo-Nuclane tablets have been prescribed with great success as indicated by gratifying letters from hundreds of girls who suffer as you do. These tablets can be purchased in sealed packages from any well-stocked drug store and full directions are given inside. These should be taken regularly for about two months, and you will be surprised to note the color in your cheeks and lips and your weight should increase from 15 to 30 pounds.—ADVERTISEMENT.

COMEDY TO RULE THIS WEEK AT THE LOCAL PLAYHOUSES

Lew Fields at the Shubert and "Broadway Jones," a Cohan Success, at Olympic.

Entertainment in lighter vein will be provided in large measure at the theaters the coming week. Comedy in vaudeville and comedy at big play houses—and lots of it. Lew Fields—in sailor garb—at the Shubert and a George M. Cohan success, "Broadway Jones," at the Olympic; really, several hours of laughter there. And still another bit of laughter at the La Salle—"McFadden's Flats." Fairly attractive programs are offered at the vaudeville and moving picture houses.

"BROADWAY JONES." Olympic. Thomas V. Emory in a George M. Cohan success. The story of the play deals with a young New Yorker who squanders a fortune in trying to "do Broadway," and at the end of his rope, looks about for a wife, engages himself to a rich widow old enough to be his mother, and then meets the "only girl." The advance terms it "Cohan's biggest success."

"ALL ABOARD." Shubert. Lew Fields, the Dutch comedian, "in his right mind," a condition promising real entertainment, comes in a "musical panorama." He is said to be in command of a capable company of comedians and comediennes and, yes, a pretty chorus. The piece, built around an old tar who dreams of becoming ship commander, is said to permit lavish mountings and costuming and a wide range of music.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Miss Irene Franklin, singing comedienne, is the feature attraction for the bill beginning Monday matinee. Among the songs she will offer will be "I've Got the Mumps." Pat Rooney and Marion Bent in "At the News Stand"; Mlle. Domini Mariana, leading in a repertoire of classic dances; Willard Simms & Co., in a sketch, "Flander's Furnished Flat"; Hilda Hawthorne, ventriloquist; William Sisto, "The Italian Statesman," in "His First Speech"; the Blessings, equilibrists, and moving pictures complete the program.

"McFADDEN'S FLATS." La Salle. Musical farce, in its sixteenth year, but a new production is promised from a scenic, humorous, musical and novelty point of view. The cast is said to include 60 persons, counting the chorus of 20 girls.

VAUDEVILLE. Hippodrome. Two headline acts are "Hiram," a rural musical comedy, and "Patricola, Queen of the Cabaret." Others on the program: Elliot and Mapes, funmakers, in "A Clean Sweep"; the Three Flying Kays, aerialists; La Selma and company, in "A Day at the Art Gallery"; Arthur Whitelaw, Irish comedian; Rudolph and Lena, comedians and yodlers.

BURLESQUE. Standard. The Rose Sydell company, with Johnnie Weber, surrounded by comedians, dancers and singers, will offer "The Rising Sun." A scenic picture is promised, with Norma Bell, Pearl Turner, Florence Nicoll and Clara Stinson among the principals. Chorus of 25 girls.

"TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE." Shenandoah. Photo-drama beginning Monday night. A sketch, "Two Girls at the Piano," singing, comedy, talking and acrobatic acts complete the bill.

"IN OLD KENTUCKY." American. An annual visitor in St. Louis nearly every year since its first presentation, here 21 years ago. A simple story of the mountain regions and the bluegrass section of Kentucky. Thrills and laughs have made this play popular. Miss Maude Parker is the season's heroine as "Madge Brierly."

BURLESQUE. Gayety. Hughey Bernard and the "Honey Girls" in two acts of musical comedy. Cast of entertainers includes Barrett and Dunn, Hughey Bernard, Thomas Barrett, Dave A. Hoffman, May Belle, Percie Judah, Marie Revere and Carrie Young.

TRAVEL TALK. Odeon. Modern London will be the subject of E. M. Newman's travel talk Thursday evening.

PICTURES. New Gem. "The Streets of New York," opening Monday.

Augustus Thomas "Indian Summer" a Failure, Ripley D. Saunders Writes From New York

Mere Platitudes and Melodrama

Post-Dispatch's Dramatic Critic Declares That Former St. Louisan Does Not Show in Current Philosophical Production Any of the Convincing Dramatic Ability of His Earlier Efforts.

RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS, the Post-Dispatch's dramatic critic, is in New York for a two-weeks stay, during which time he will witness and review for the readers of this paper the principal new plays, many of these will come to St. Louis later in the season.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.

QUITE a grievous disappointment awaited me last night when I went to the Fulton Theater to see "Indian Summer," the new Augustus Thomas play in which Charles Frohman has essayed to star John Mason, supported by Martha Hedman as leading woman.

The new drama is not really a drama at all. It is, instead, a futile blend of occasionally pretty sentiment and always wearisome philosophical platitudes which Playwright Thomas has either neglected or scorned to buttress with the firm and vitally necessary strength of a convincing dramatic story. The play cannot live. The ominous marks of early death due to lack of red blood and healthy bone structure already are discernible in its footlight visage.

It was not through any narrow and provincial sense of loyalty to Augustus Thomas as a former St. Louisan that I had chosen his play as the first of my New York seeing this season. In justice to the playgoing public a play may not fairly be judged on the friendly and weakly partial basis of its author's nativity and loyal kinship. But there was a time, culminating about three seasons ago, when well-qualified commentators on this country's current making of theatrical history were almost unanimous in naming Augustus Thomas as the foremost American dramatist. This truth made it imperative that I should see and study any new play of his which boasted the distinction of a Charles Frohman presentation.

Stars Worthy of Note.

THEN, in addition, the continued association of John Mason and Martha Hedman as the jointly featured players in a Frohman production intensified the importance of the offering, more especially because of the increasing value of Miss Hedman's art in its fine employment on the English-speaking stage.

MARTHA HEDMAN in "INDIAN SUMMER."

Charming Actress Whose Fine Art Fails to Save Augustus Thomas' Newest Play.

St. Louis playgoers doubtless will remember that I reviewed their work in "The Attack" during my visit to New York last season and that I accorded to Miss Hedman the first place in my verdict as to their completed achievement. This gifted young Swedish actress, a former protege of Strindberg, the great, though unwholesomely morbid, Swedish dramatist, is headed for American stardom just as certainly as the sparks fly upward.

But the sparks in "Indian Summer" do not fly upward. They flicker and die into dull oblivion, only a few windy inches distant from the interminable orations which Augustus Thomas places in the mouth of John Mason as the elderly artist in love with the charming young girl of Martha Hedman's playing.

Playwriter Thomas was first jack-o-lanterned from the solid ground of drama to the bogs and morasses of futile and shallow philosophy in "As a Man Thinks," the dullest play of his writing until "Indian Summer" reached the footlights. If now he does not retrace his steps to the drama proper he is lost beyond redemption for any further creditable employment of the rich dramatic talent which once, at any rate, was his in undeniable and ample degree.

Becomes Crude Melodrama.

THERE are moments during the progress of "Indian Summer" when one is led to hope that this talent again is to be brought into effective use by Mr. Thomas, but the hope thus aroused is permitted to vanish unrealized. In the place of plausible and self-sustaining drama the best that is attained in the present play's story is unplausible and crudely obvious melodrama, degenerating finally into a confusion of noisy action and overstrained situation which leaves one utterly skeptical as to the play's sincerity and openly contemptuous of its lack of anything like fidelity to real life.

This secondary disappointment is born of the injection into the story of the episode of a murder committed by a youth, supposed to be the illegitimate son of Frank Whitney, the elderly artist, Whitney having accepted the stigma of such paternity in order to shield the boy's real father, a "magnetic" clergyman of fascinating but unstable personality. This "complication" is developed with curiously ineffective art in dramatic construction and with such shallow complacency and easily satisfied craftsmanship on the part of the author that it is small wonder it comes limping across the footlights to its unmoved audiences.

Unhappily, too, the play's last act is given over almost exclusively to a straightening out of the peurile tangle thus created for the sake of sustained interest, and that act's curtain terminates 30 minutes of as sheerly mechanical melodrama and transparent "happy ending" devices of cheap play-making as ever the "ten-twenty-thirty" kerosene circuit could boast at its palmiest period.

Miss Hedman's Art.

OCCASIONALLY touches of appealing sentiment are encountered in the autumnal and vernal love story of the elderly artist Whitney and the girl, Katherine Harvey, who has seen fit to make Whitney the more or less chilblained god of her idolatry. But here it is the potently revealed art of Martha Hedman that gives utterance to the appeal thus voiced. Miss Hedman makes one feel that Katherine Harvey really loves Whitney, her father's contemporary—her father, now dead, having been the "magnetic" clergyman of easy morals whom Whitney had self-sacrificingly saved from exposure as a Don Juan wolf in clerical sheep's clothing.

The girl's love for Whitney is quaintly forlorn in the main, with something of humor now and then, and Miss Hedman's admirable work makes it seem genuine and authentic at all times until the play's climax and culmination in tawdry melodrama renders even her best efforts unavailable. As for the elderly artist, Whitney, one is always unfortunately too sure that he does not love Katherine Harvey one-half as much as he loves his own verbosity and the sound of his own voice lifted in the pompous delivery of a ceaseless stream of fatuous platitudes concerning life, art and everything else that comes into his presumably profound thought for the moment's saying.

Clever Company Plays It.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS "posed" mightily in conceiving this character and John Mason poses mightily in its playing. The result is a diadactic monster of such double-barreled, unparalleled, long-distance and allround possibilities of boredom that one shudders even in an aftermath contemplation of its almost unearthly dullness and long-winded self-complacency.

"Slain by the jawbone of an ass" is the one and only epitaph that should be placed above the grave of "Indian Summer," already in the sere and yellow leaf of inevitable decay and death.

FINE VARIETY IN THE PROGRAM FOR MELBA - KUBELIK

Joint Appearance of Stars in Notable Event in Local Musical Season.

One of the notable events of the musical season will be the appearance of two stars of the first magnitude, Mme. Nellie Melba, the Australian songstress, and Jan Kubelik, the violinist, in a joint program at the Coliseum Tuesday night, for the benefit of the Kingdon House Settlement.

They will be supported by Edmund Burke, who for three years sang the important baritone roles in opera at Covent Garden; by Gabriel Lapierre, pianist and a famous operatic coach of Paris, France; and by Marcel Moyse, flutist, the youngest member admitted to the French Academy within a quarter of a century.

This company of artists is on a tour of the United States, which will take them from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and in which they will give 80 concerts within six months. Their every appearance has attracted large audiences, that in the Hippodrome in New York setting a record of attendance. The same enthusiasm greeted them in Pittsburg and other Eastern cities.

Mme. Melba's Fight to the Top.

The simultaneous appearance on St. Louis platform of Melba and Kubelik, both in the foremost rank of their professions, recalls the contrasting circumstances of their careers. With the soprano it was a case of fighting the way step by step, while with the violinist success came at his first public appearance, as if it were his birthright.

Until 1886 Mme. Melba's professional experiences had been confined to a few appearances in concert in Melbourne and other Australian cities and it was with but meager resources and plans wholly vague that she went to England to embark on a professional career. She had a letter to Sir Herbert Parry, but even that failed to get her a hearing, while the best encouragement the late Sir Arthur Sullivan could give her was the promise of a small part in "The Mikado" if, after a year's study, her vocal accomplishments would warrant it.

Signor Alberto Randegger declined to take her as a pupil and it was not until a chance meeting with the famous Mathilde Marchesi brought her under the tutelage of that celebrated teacher that her initial step to the distinction she has since attained was really taken.

Kubelik, on the other hand, never knew the struggle for recognition. At the age of 18 his name was a household word throughout Europe, and two years later his fame as a virtuoso had spread throughout the civilized world. He was patronized by royalty and invited to play in one court after another.

This led to his first American tour, which he considered complete only after he had played his violin on both sides of the equator. As a child he was a prodigy and appeared in public at the early age of five. Three years later he had mastered the technical difficulties in the most exacting measures Wienisawski and Vieuxtemps had written.

Pleasing Variety of Program.

The program, an engaging combination of the classical and the popular, was designed to give full scope to the power and sweetness of Melba's voice and to the virtuosity which is synonymous with Kubelik's name. It is as follows:

Aria—Benvenue Cellini .... Diaz
Edmund Burke.
Concerto No. 2—D Minor .... Wieniawski
Allegro—Moderato—Romance—Finale.
Mr. Kubelik.
Song—Lo! Here the Gentle Lark....... Bishop
(Flute Obligato by Marcel Moyse)
Mme. Melba.
Songs—
(a) When Dull Care (Old English). Leveridge
(b) To Anthea .... Hatton
Edmund Burke.
Aria—Il re Pastore .... Mozart
(With violin obligato)
Mme. Melba and Mr. Kubelik.
Songs—Irish Melodies—
(a) Meeting of the Waters.......... Moore
(b) Minstrel Boy .... Moore
Edmund Burke.
Song—Se Saran Rose .... Arditi
Mme. Melba.
Violin solo—
(a) Spanish Dance .... Sarasate
(b) Humoreske .... Dvorak
(c) Witches Dance .... Paganini
Mr. Kubelik.

PADEREWSKI TO BE IN ST. LOUIS, DEC. 3

Paderewski was 28 years old before the world realized that in him it had the greatest pianist of his time. His talent had shown itself when he was very young, but it had no chance to develop. He was in his 'teens before he had any real instruction in music, in Warsaw, where he studied the piano with Janotha and harmony with Roguski. When he was 16 he made his first concert tour in Russia, a complete failure from every point of view.

He was desperately poor, this fact having urged him to try his luck with the public. It was winter, and he had neither sufficient clothes nor sufficient food. Moreover, he confesses that he was in no way prepared to play in public. His technique was so wretched that whenever he came to a difficult passage he was forced to improvise to get through it.

Utterly discouraged, he returned to Warsaw feeling that he had no future as a pianist. He became a teacher in the Warsaw Conservatory and threw himself into the work of teaching and composing.

Despite his determination made to abandon the piano, it still called him, and in 1884 he went to Vienna to study with his countryman, the famous teacher, Leschetitsky. Twenty-four is late for a man to prepare for a virtuoso's career, but Paderewski undertook this huge task and accomplished it. Lacking the invaluable training of childhood, technique did not come to him easily, and for two years he devoted 18 hours a day to playing scales.

In 1887 he made his debut as a professional pianist in Vienna and took that old, conservative city by storm. That was the beginning of a career that has had no parallel since Liszt. The following year he played in Berlin and Paris and in the spring of 1890 London bowed before his genius. He has made eight tours in America.

No pianist has had success in the United States comparable with his. No musician, save possibly only Adelina Patti, has made such a fortune in this country.

REAL PIANO BARGAINS

NO OTHER WORD FITS

"Bargain" in Our Advertisement Has Always Stood for Extraordinary Values

Study over these prices—come look at the pianos, and you will know why the plain old-fashioned word "Bargain" is the only word that fits—trade ethics may call for a nicer word, but it will take another Webster to coin a better one.

THE WORLD'S BEST MAKES AT REDUCED PRICES

THE SALE YOU HAVE WAITED FOR

We recently closed several branch stores and a number of agencies—concentrating our organization more and more in the large city stores.

These instruments are of the types sold by us to the best homes in America—the kind you would like in your home. This is your best chance to save $50 to $150 on a piano or player. We have cut the prices deep—every instrument in this stock is affected, except the Fall shipments of holiday goods. This don't happen often—we seldom have a special sale, but this one is forced upon us. You will profit if you hurry.

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY

We seldom hold a Clearance Sale—never, unless conditions compel us to. This is your opportunity now—we simply cannot care for our incoming holiday stocks unless we clear these pianos and players out.

We prefer to offer these goods at tremendous reductions now to holding them in our warehouse 'till after Christmas for the usual Annual Sale in January. We are giving January Clearance prices now, and have cut even deeper in many cases.

VERY LOW TERMS OF PAYMENT

You can buy a good piano on very easy terms, as low as 20c a day on some styles—35c a day pays for a nice player-piano—but the low term pianos will go first, do not delay—be one of the first, especially if you want low terms.

When this sale is over, we doubt if you will ever be able to secure a reliable piano or player-piano with a ten-year guarantee and exchange privileges at such low figures, and with such a reliable organization back of your purchase.

No. 1—Erard—Very small French upright piano — good for children to hammer on in playroom—little tone, but rather fancy looking case.......... $25 (No. 30,098)

AVIATOR WHO SET RECORD MAY LOSE PRIZE OF $25,000

Committee Declares Victor Stoeffler's Flight Should Have Been in Direct Course.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—Victor Stoeffler, the aviator, who by setting up a new world's record of 1376 miles for a day's flight, proved that Germany may be considered a worthy rival of France in aviatorial accomplishment, may lose the $25,000 prize which it was supposed he had won by the feat. This was offered by the committee in charge of the National Aviation Subscription Fund for a record in excess of the hurricane flight of Brindejonc des Moulinais from Paris to Warsaw.

Objection has been raised in the committee, on the ground that Stoeffler's flight was not made all in one direction like Brindejonc's, but that the last 435 miles was made by flying back and forth between Darmstadt and Muelhausen in Alsace. The aviators point out that the general conditions of the contest as adopted and published by the committee only require that 810 miles be covered by continuous flight in a given direction, whereas Stoeffler's flight from Posen to Muelhausen alone covered 650 miles.

They are already in arms against the committee for risking the lives of competitors by appointing the long distance competition for the month of October with its foggy nights and short days.

A decision has not been announced but aviators fear that the committee will not allow Stoeffler the grand prize, $25,000, for a flight surpassing Brindejonc's, but will award him only $15,000, the prize for the longest flight under the regular conditions.

NEW $8,000,000 HARBOR IS PLANNED BY BERLIN

Municipality to Improve Shipping Facilities on West Side Like That on East.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—Berlin is not usually looked upon as an important "seaport," for almost as much water passes daily through its water mains as through the little River Spree on which it is situated.

The navigation interests of the German capital are so important, however, that after opening a large new harbor on the eastern side of the city only a few weeks ago at a cost of about $8,000,000, the municipality has just decided to build another one on the western side which will cost almost as much. It will cover, including warehouses and grounds used for harbor purposes, 75 acres.

This step is taken in anticipation of a very large increase in canal and river shipping after the opening of the new canal at Stettin, now nearing completion.

In view of its improved shipping facilities and enlarged waterways Berlin looks forward to a more rapid development of its manufacturing and commercial interests.

AFFIDAVITS FILED TO SHOW MRS. ROSS IS SANE

Prosecutor Wants to Offset New Defense of Woman Convicted of Slaying Husband.

FULTON, Mo., Nov. 15.—Prosecuting Attorney Nick T. Cave, this afternoon, filed counter affidavits to those filed recently by attorneys for Mrs. Susan Ross, convicted of murder, in which they alleged that her case had been mismanaged and it should have been defended on the ground that she is insane.

The affidavits filed today are from Fulton business people, neighbors of Mrs. Ross and three physicians, including a former member of the medical staff at the Fulton State Hospital. The affidavits set forth the belief that Mrs. Ross is sane.

Mrs. Ross was convicted of the murder of her husband, Haywood Ross, and sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary. A motion for a new trial is pending and will be passed upon by Judge David H. Harris at the first day of the December term of the Circuit Court.

ANOTHER CHAPTER ADDED TO THE HISTORY OF ST. LOUIS DEPARTMENT STORES

Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney to Have Formal Opening of Additional Building and New Departments Tomorrow—Piano Section Principal Feature of the Enlarged Store—Everything Now Ready for the Holiday Rush.

Square Bounded by Olive, Ninth, Tenth and Locust Streets Hereafter Will Be Designated as the Vandervoort Block—With New 12-Story Warehouse Firm Will Have Twelve Acres of Floor Space.

THE FLOWER DEPARTMENT

WHEN the business world of St. Louis awakens to new activities tomorrow, another chapter will be added to the progressive history of the city by the formal opening of the enlarged store of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney and a new name appended to the street map, for thereafter the square bounded by Olive, Ninth, Tenth and Locust streets will be designated as Vandervoort block. Ever since last April hundreds of laborers and artisans have been working day and night to bring about this change, and although the city has lost a theater, it has been the gainer by adding to its commercial community one of the finest and largest department stores in the country.

And all this has been brought about by the untiring efforts and energy of M. L. Wilkinson and his associates. Mr. Wilkinson became president of the Vandervoort firm on Jan. 16, 1911. The very day that he took office, his associates say, he began to make plans for a greater store and a larger business.

Century Theater Passed Away.

At that time the Century Theater was one of the principal playhouses of the city, but Mr. Wilkinson soon saw that in order to carry out his plan of preparedness and also to keep pace with the growth of the city, it would be necessary for the firm to take in the whole block. To this end plans were made, and the result will be left to the verdict of the purchasing public at tomorrow's formal opening. What that verdict will be there remains no doubt in the minds of the management, for neither money nor pains have been spared in carrying out the scheme from its initial point to its minutest detail.

In making these changes that give Vandervoort's the additional acreage, many departments were added to what was already considered a complete department store. The general stock, too, has been enlarged correspondingly.

Music Section Takes Precedence.

Of all the new departments, from the basement to the top floor, the one that takes precedent over new and old, and the one that will attract the most visitors, domestic and foreign, is the music section. This might be called a music department or a music floor, but "section" seems to be the only word to express the greatness of it, for two-thirds of the entire sixth floor of the building is given over to the exhibition of pianos, player-pianos, Victors, Victrolas, records, etc. Adjectives often weaken rather than strengthen description, but more than one critic has declared that this is the grandest piano store in the world.

But whether it is the greatest, or the grandest or the most magnificent in this or any other country matters not, for the fact remains that every visitor expresses his or her enthusiasm over the charm of the art displayed on all sides. Painters of note have already gone into raptures over the softness of the general color scheme and blending of the delicate tints that have for their motif nature's moonlight at its best.

Motif Behind Decorations.

It was the designer of the piano section who declared that behind every piece of decorative work there must be a motif, and in further explanation how the color scheme was inspired by hearing a friend play the "Moonlight Sonata." From this theme developed the impression of moonlight and romance, and the coloring taken after Sheraton period.

There is so much to tell about this piano section that words almost fail in the description. In the first place, there is the immense showroom in the middle, with all the finest makes of grand and baby grand pianos. On each is the name of a famous maker that stands as a guarantee. The casing of each instrument is polished to as fine a finish as human hands can bring it. These pianos are so symmetrically arranged in the grouping as to avoid any suggestion of angles that might not harmonize with the otherwise artistic surroundings.

Softness of the Lights.

Upon entering this department the visitor is first impressed with the softness of the lights and the colors—a harvest moon effect. Under the feet are soft rugs that carry the mental impression of dawn—rugs made during the dynasties of ages ago in Persia and Turkey. These have been selected with the utmost care, for not one thread must have a color out of harmony with the richness of the whole.

Mauve and gray predominates in the blending from all sides. The gray, the mauve, the holly effect in the inlay work and the ebony, all combine to emphasize the Sheraton period.

All around this great showroom are the sound-proof rooms where the different instruments may be tried without the slightest chance of annoyance to the ears of anyone. In these rooms the Sheraton prevails on every side even to the chairs and the small desks. The light in the rooms is blended to a soft silver tint, carried out in the draperies. On each desk in every room is a lamp of Wedgwood effect and a silken shade of Sheraton design. All of the metals in each of these music rooms are gray in color. The same softness of floor covering prevails here as in the large showroom.

Beams of Sky Color.

On the ceilings of these inclosures are beams, decorated in blue to resemble the sky. It was the original intention of the designer to twine vines and oak leaves along these beams, but the present picture is so artistic that it is a question whether or not additional decoration would be an improvement.

Of the 25 rooms about the large one there are two furnished in Louis XVI style that are bound to attract the attention of persons familiar with that period. The paneling of one is of green silk damask and the draperies are in gold and green. In the other room mahogany prevails in all its richness.

In these rooms, as everywhere else on the floor, there is an absence of shadow everywhere. It is not likely that visitors would note this until their attention is called to it by an attendant, but it is a fact that there is not a shadow to be found, even under the chairs or the desks.

There are also five rooms that are devoted to the trial of music rolls. They are inclosed in glass and furnished in the same style as the other demonstrating rooms. This section is to be operated in connection with the music roll library. When all arrangements have been completed the firm will have both 65 and 88 note rolls and those who belong to the library may for a small sum exchange rolls any time within 30 days.

Another feature of this music section are the rooms devoted to the Victrolas and the great record storeroom. This storeroom has a capacity of 45,000 records.

In taking a trip through the old and the new departments of the Vandervoort store one is impressed with all the improvements that have been made throughout, besides the increase in the stock on all sides. When visitors are conducted about, the trip begins on the eighth floor, where the rest room for the employes is situated. Here the tellers have every comfort in surroundings that are as pleasant as home. They also have their lunchroom, that is a model in itself.

On this floor has been installed the very latest thing in the telephone system—a four-position switch board, which takes care of 50 trunk lines. Of these 30 run in from the Bell company and 20 from the Kinloch, operating altogether 120 telephones.

The seventh floor is devoted to the company's offices, a prettily decorated tea room that is capable of caring for 500 or more customers between the hours of 11 and 2 o'clock six days in the week. Here also may be found Mr. Fester, who is ever ready to give prospective travelers the proper directions. In the department devoted to office furniture there is everything that any individual or corporation may need in the way of filing cabinets, desks of all kinds, chairs, etc. The entire attention of three men is given to this department.

House Decorating, Fourth Floor.

One of the show places of the newer store is the House Decorating section. Especially is the contract department branching out and enlarging its field.

An entirely new and perfectly fascinating demonstration of their powers is the reproduction of the first floor of a harmonious house within the spacious ensemble of the new quarters on the fourth floor. So realistic and complete in all details is the arrangement of halls, living room, library, dining room and music room, you cannot but think you have stepped into a private home already rich in history and family lore. Indeed, the illusion of reality is created even before you enter its portals, for there are a garden walk, a vine-clad trellis, seats, flower beds and tree boxes.

You step across a terrace paved in Ludowici tile set in black cement to a doorway perfect in Colonial style with its overhanging pediment, circular transom and complete in detail even to the shingles overhead. A quaint old knocker invites your entrance. Across the threshold you find yourself in a vestibule with marble floor and walls done in Caen stone effect. Beyond is the hall, wainscoted, Colonial fashion in white and hung with the beautiful scenic paper dear to Colonial times. Draperies of mulberry velvet, hall seats upholstered to match, and a mysterious mellow light from opalescent bowls produce an effect which the home-founding genius of Colonial days may/have dreamed of but could not in their crudeness have realized.

The living room you find reminiscent, with modern advantages, of the Tudor period. There is a high oaken wainscote, looking rich and old from its treatment of wax. Some ancient baronial estate has been deprived of a handsome mantel, mellow tinted with age, to adorn this room, and Elizabethan leaded window has been reproduced to flank its sides.

Attractive Surroundings.

The walls above the wainscote are hung with rich brocades, velvet draperies are of darker shades and only a museum of antiquity could have furnished the models for the hand-carved table and chairs. Some Venetian palace must have been robbed of its chief glory to afford the carved and gilded wood fixtures adapted to our modern lighting system.

A dining room across the hall is the reproduction of a Sheritan masterpiece, perfect in its harmony of inlaid white mahogany sideboard, table and chairs, its walls paneled with hand illuminated parchments, its old blue window draperies hanging from mahogany and silver cornices, its Sheffield candle brackets and alabaster lamp.

Beyond the dining room you enter a music room, which is a very symphony in itself. The woodwork is ivory white, with low wainscot; the walls above are embossed in gold relief on putty color. An antique Carrera marble mantel has been imported and set up intact as it once adorned some Italian palace. Chairs, cabinets and other furniture follow Chippendale lines and a baby grand Chickering piano in this style fits into one corner of the room like a jewel in exquisite setting.

The little exhibition feature is but a note in the midst of an entire block of space devoted to the interests of the house beautiful. Drapery and floor covering stocks have spread themselves over the new acquisition of a half block of space. One-fourth of the old occupancy is given over to picture galleries and other art objects, a department formerly occupying comparatively small space, on the sixth floor, which had long ago made Vandervoort's for art objects famous. With the new facilities for displaying their treasures, undreamed of in paintings, marbles, potteries, fabrics, embroideries, leather. artificial flowers, beautiful lamps and shades and other rare bits for beautifying the home are revealed in the setting which is their due.

A succession of picture galleries, each hung with its distinct type of picture, whether oil, engraving, water color, etching or print, promise to a downtown art center, where prices are not prohibitive, a long cherished dream of art lovers in St. Louis.

Ample space also is awarded the display of china and cut glass on the fourth floor. The cut glass department is a crystal palace in itself. A tall cut glass electrolier, valued at $2500, a year's work of an artist in this oldest of crafts, will be borrowed to grace the main floor during the opening week's festivities, becoming the central show piece of this department afterwards.

A Boon to Shoppers.

Upon the third floor every article of feminine apparel coming under the designation "ready-to-wear" is assembled. It is going to be a great boon to the shopper in these departments, where, obviously time and labor saving are a primary object, to find millinery, suits, gowns, underwear, corsets, furs, beauty parlors, etc., in such close proximity. The acquisition of an entire block of floor space makes possible such arrangement.

Verily, Cinderella's fairy godmother, with all her facility for realizing vast splendors in the twinkling of an eye, is here outdone. It is perfectly possible to acquire the most elaborate toilette, complete in every detail from shoe buckle to head dress, lingerie, gowns, cloaks and hats in between seemingly by magic. For almost everything for woman's wear is "ready made" these days.

Complete outfits for women of whatever station in life, yes, and of whatever age, are available here. Not only has every already existing department of the third floor taken unto itself new proportions, added service facilities and enlarged stocks, but several entirely new departments have been installed.

A shop devoted exclusively to the requirements of persons in mourning, a place somewhat aloof, where exclusion and the proper deference to tender sensibilities are to be had, is a need Vandervoort's responded to some time ago. But the mourning shop has grown in accordance with the growth elsewhere in the building.

No detail of the mourning costume, either severe or elaborate is not obtainable in reliably corect mode here. And the admirable display of case after case of sable-hued articles in striking contrast to virgin white backgrounds, makes this not the least stunning department in the whole store.

New Beauty Parlor.

A beauty parlor is an entirely new venture evolved with the enlarged quarters. Occupying almost a quarter of a block of space, here indeed do spaciousness, orderliness, immaculate purity and freshness begin to refresh and restore tired beauty at first glance.

Hair dressing and hair goods is a new departure with Vandervoort's, and with the inauguration have come only the newest facilities and appliances that hygiene and sanitation have contrived. Dressing rooms, manicure tables, sterilizing apparatus, children's hair cutting rooms, are all made so dainty and sanitary with the endless use of nickel plate, white enamel and porcelain, and the attendants are so smart and dainty in appearance.

This department is ready to impart to the toilette the finishing touches that most bespeak the lady.

The new modes of hair dressing displayed on lifelike wax beauties, make the corridor of this department a genuine beauty treat to visitors.

Vastly improved as to space, stock and service is the millinery shop, which has spread itself over the space formerly devoted to two other departments. The French room, where imported gowns and wraps are displayed in appropriate sumptuous backgrounds, the suit, fur and coat departments and the waist departments have taken unto themselves added spaciousness and enlarged their stocks accordingly.

One-quarter of a block has been acquired for the better arrangement, bigger stock and better service in the ready-to-wear garments for juveniles. Nowadays the mother thinks no less of her own smart appearance than of her children's, and modistes, milliners and manufacturers have responded heartily to the enhancement of childhood's charms.

These several distinct shops devoted to the needs of misses, girls and infants are destined to be among the most popular features of the new Vandervoort's.

The Dressmaking Department.

While enthusing over new departures and the enlarged scope of established ones, one notable for past success as well as brilliant promise, must not be overlooked. The women's tailoring and dressmaking salons, where Mr. Harbison and Miss Collins, as presiding genii already have won pre-eminence for Vandervoorts, continue with added inspiration to create artistic gowns. Some of the most sensational costumes of the season have emanated from these studios and always a standard of excellence of workmanship, chic, originality clings to the output of this department.

By taking in the Century theater practically five floors were added to the Vandervoort store, although the connection is made on the fourth floor of the old store. With the new addition were added four floors besides the regulation staircases.

Kindred Apartments Adjacent.

After enlarging the old departments and adding new ones, the management worked out the scheme of keeping kindred departments adjacent to each other. Probably no department has been enlarged to a greater extent than that devoted to the care of boys. It is here that parents can find everything a boy needs to wear—shoes, hats, clothing, furnishings and so on. The department now occupies a quarter of a block, or about four times the space that it formerly had.

Between the boys' section and the men's there is a smoking and lounging room. This is easy of access from the elevators and it is here where husbands may enjoy their smoke while waiting for wives to do their shopping. The floor of the smoking room is of Italian marble. Mission furniture is used throughout. It is the only place in the whole store where smoking is permitted.

Another New Reception Room.

Another new feature commensurate with the greater development of the store is a ladies' waiting room, newly installed, upon the second floor, to supplement the popular and now somewhat crowded restroom, writing room and library on the seventh floor.

A delightful little drawing room, draped in bright chintzes and cosy with divans and easy chairs, invites the shopper to tarry here.

Men's Clothing Store.

At the Locust street side of the second floor is the men's clothing department that is perfection in every sense of the word. It is here that man can get anything he may want in the way of clothing. This department takes in a quarter of a city block. It is all finished in mahogany. Along the aisles are elaborate cabinets of mahogany and glass tops and sides that contain the ready-to-wear clothing for men. These cabinets are dust-proof and are so arranged that the goods are easily handled by the salesmen and as easily selected by the customer. As in all other departments of the concern, the prices are arranged to fit any man's pocketbook.

Besides the ready-to-wear clothing, a man can also find bathrobes and smoking jackets of every design, color or combination of colors to suit his fancy. Immense windows on all sides of this department give the purchaser the advantage of selecting goods by daylight. The light coming through these windows is so perfect that a buyer has no chance to make a mistake as to the color or shade of a fabric, no matter how delicate or faint that particular color or shade may be.

Tried to Aid the Men.

While designing the section of the building for this department, members of the firm had foremost in mind the fact that many men dislike to shop, and every effort has been made to give them all the exclusiveness possible. For this reason, an extra staircase was put in leading from the sporting goods department from the floor below, so that men may do their buying with as little trouble as possible. Of course, the men also have all the other facilities of the big store for ingress and egress as well as those designed for their especial benefit and comfort.

The same idea of exclusiveness for the men prevails in the furnishings department on the ground floor. Here there are convenient doors leading from the streets so that men who want collars, neckties, fancy waistcoats, etc., are not forced to push their way through aisles of other shoppers. By the new arrangement the men have their own shopping place.

One department of the Vandervoort store that is growing in popularity every day is the bank and its safety deposit vaults. The bank has been removed to the east on the second floor. The thousand safety deposit boxes in this department are separate from the building and are in every way fire and burglar proof. Charges for these boxes range according to their size from $3 up. As fast as the banking business grows more boxes will be added to those already installed.

The Vandervoort bank has grown particularly popular with school teachers, members of the firm say, because the hours for doing business are the same as those of any other department. In other words whenever the store is open for business so is the bank. One cannot help being impressed with the careful thought that has been given to detail. For instance, the grand staircase from the second to the first floor has been changed so that persons entering from the Tenth or Ninth street sides of the building might have a clear view across the entire block, and thereby absorb an instantaneous impression of the vastness of the store as it is today.

Main Floor Busiest.

Of course, the ground or main floor is always the busiest in the whole building. All day long the firm's busses are rolling up to the Tenth street side with shoppers from Union Station, the Eads Brridge and the McKinley System. Added to these are the private vehicles, autos and carriages of city shoppers, so that there is hardly a dull second at any time during business hours.

To aid shoppers, a new system of carriage calls has been inaugurated on the Tenth street side of the building. When a vehicle arrives the driver receives a numbered card and his employer a duplicate. When the customer is ready to depart from the store his or her number appears on the outside of the building in plain view of the driver. At night the same scheme is carried out by a system of electric lights.

In passing along the ground floor, the guide calls attention to the fact that with the new annex the store now has 57 show windows. A new department on this floor is the drug store, in charge of two graduated pharmacists and a registered nurse. There is also the cigar store presided over by Charles W. Schaick, who formerly had the stand in the Century Building, the sporting goods department and the men's shoe shop, near by. If a man wants to buy hunting boots and also dress shoes it is only a step from one aisle to the other and on his way out he can buy his smoking material.

Sporting Goods of All Kinds.

The sporting goods department is complete in every detail. Here the man who loves the woods can be fitted out with guns, rods of the most delicate make, reels, flies, portable houses, tents, canoes, and, in fact, anything that is a necessity or a luxury for outing. Members of the firm declare this to be the finest sporting goods department west of the Mississippi. Here also are to be found everything needed in a gymnasium, besides baseball and football uniforms and all that is dear to the heart of a golfer. In this department there are expert fitters for the teams desiring uniforms. And near by is the camera shop with a complete line of picture-taking and developing paraphernalia.

And Oh, the Toys!

Rollicking childish voices greet one who steps out upon the basement floor, grownup manners are forgot and one is transported back across the years as one lingers fascinated by the new wonders of toy land. What ingenuity has not been brought into play to devise amusement, playtime instruction and valuable unconscious experience in this new world in miniature for the children of today! All ready for the holidays, this mammoth department is quite the liveliest scene in the store at present.

Spaciousness and added facilities afford tracks upon which to try the newest forms of locomotion; roadways upon which to speed the latest models in motor craft; water courses upon which to launch every type of vessel whether deep sea-going or pleasure craft. And the world of make believe is peopled by dolls of every character and walk of life. Sophisticated, city-bred dolls, country cousin dolls, dolls from foreign and from savage lands. Animal life likewise is reproduced most realistically. Indeed, this entertainment center promises novelties never ending.

Floral Section.

And what is that penetrating fragrance which greets your nostrils, that fresh, woodsy, invigorating odor so foreign to most basement atmospheres, that greets your nostrils as you descend?

Ah, it is Vandervoort's own conservatory in full bloom, though winter's blast howls without. This is indeed a new departure and upon what a grand scale is it inaugurated. One is told that a special and exclusive automobile service awaits the orders for these tender and perishable exotics and that the hothouses supplying this department are vast enough to fill orders for decorations to any extent, however vast.

That the entire decorative scheme of chrysanthemums and oak leaves, which fairly overpowers you when you enter the main floor, and seems to support the walls, bury the staircases and overflow vases and jardinieres everywhere in the store, were furnished by Vandervoort's own florist testifies to the resources of the new floral department.

One more department in this great store deserves mention to the point of commendation, and that one embraces the perfect delivery system with its hundreds of wagons, drivers, assistants and messengers in which everyone is forever bending his or her utmost efforts to avoid making mistakes. No matter how high the standard of efficiency and accuracy is in any other part of the store, this is the place where the percentage of errors is reduced to an absolute minimum.

Growth of the Store.

And all this, like the growth of many another large business, had an insignificant beginning. It was away back in 1850 that Richard M. Scruggs and M. V. L. McClelland started the little shop that is now the big Vandervoort department store under the firm name of McClelland, Scruggs & Co., retailers, on the street that was then designated as Glasgow row, now Fourth and St. Charles. Both men had come from Virginia and the firm prospered.

Ten years later the name of the firm was changed to W. L. Vandervoort & Co. Richard M. Scruggs and G. A. Vandervoort comprised the company part of the new name. It was not until 1870 that the concern branched out under the name of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney. In 1880 the store was removed to Broadway and Locust street. Charles E. Barney died in 1898. The following year Hanford Crawford and Robert Johnston entered the firm. In 1900 Mr. Vandervoort died. R. M. Scruggs died in 1904. The firm removed to its present location on Nov. 13, 1907.

Dean of Old Employes.

There are still many of the old employes connected with the store, but the dean of them all is James Johnstone, who has been not only 52 years in the firm's employe, but who has spent all that time in the same department. He is an expert in linens, and although in his eighty-sixth year, he is so hale and hearty that he attends to business as regularly as any youngster. When he went to work for the firm in 1861 the size of the store was 25 by 60 feet. Prior to that he had worked for another concern 10 years.

Mr. Johnstone was born in Scotland and landed in New York in 1850. When he came to St. Louis most of the principal downtown streets of today were cow paths and there was fine deer hunting in the neighborhood of Fifteenth street. He is a favorite with Mr. Wilkinson, president of the company, who, in presenting a reporter for the Post-Dispatch, said in a characteristic kindly way:

"I am extremely fond of babies and old persons."

While there are nearly 2000 persons working under Mr. Wilkinson and Robert Johnston, vice-president of the concern, this number will be materially increased in the next few weeks to take care of the Christmas shopping. It was to provide for this volume of trade that work was pushed so hard in enlarging old departments and adding the new ones.

During the holidays the firm's slogan will prevail as at all other times. It is:

TAFT WARNS U. S. AFFRONT TO JAPAN MAY BRING ON WAR

Touches on Government's Foreign Affairs for First Time Since Leaving Office.

SEES SLIGHT IN LAND LAW

Declares in Notable Address Conflict Would Follow Blow at Nipponese Pride.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Touching on the delicate situation existing between the United States and Japan over the enactment of the alien land law by California, Former President William H. Taft, in a notable address before the National Geographic Society, commented on the foreign affairs of the United States Government for the first time since he left the White House.

Mr. Taft intimated plainly that the California land law, in his opinion, tended toward an affront to Japan. He showed impatience over what he expressed as a slight on Japan by the people of California and served warning that the only thing that would bring on war between this Government and the Far East power would be some such an attempt to humiliate the Japs by ranking them as an inferior people.

"My visit to Japan installed in me the profound respect and very kindly feeling that I have toward the people and toward the great men who have done so much to make them a great people. Japan is much nearer to popular government than many people suppose. It is not true that the statesmen of Japan desire war with the United States. I don't hesitate to say that it is the last thing they do desire. They are not a rich country. They realize that their trade with the United States is their most valuable trade. They are fighting the battle for trade, and not for conquest or further acquisition of territory, at least in this direction.

Scouts Idea of Jap Invasion.

"When Homer Lee or anybody else speaks of the probability of war occurring between Japan and the United States and of the landing of a great Japanese force on the California coast, which shall subject us to humiliation, he proceeds on assumptions that never in fact will be realized. The transportation of an army 5000 miles across the trackless wastes of the Pacific, with all the chances of attack upon the troop ships that would have to carry them, is an idle dream, and the Japanese would not deal in idle dreams, even if they coveted our country, as they do not. But the only danger of war is in our doing injustice to the Japanese. We made a gentleman's agreement with them in respect to the immigration of their laborers into this country, by which we left it to their control, with the understanding that they would not increase the number in this country.

"Patriotic Self-Conceit."

"They have kept that to the letter. They have no desire to encourage immigration to us. They have use for their people in Korea and elsewhere, but as Count Havashi said to me in Tokio, when he was Minister of Foreign Affairs:

"'We have had great success as a people. We have what I call patriotic self-conceit, and the only danger of friction between the two governments is that your people, through race prejudice, may do injustice to those of our people who are in your country. We feel that we are entitled by what we have done to be treated on an equality with the other peoples of the world by you, and when your discriminate against us or when your people manifest a race prejudice against us and seek to assign us to an inferior grade, you stir the hearts of our people. Outbreaks against our people in your country we greatly deprecate, because they would arouse such feeling on the part of our people that they might not be able to be counteracted.'"

Filipine Independence Talk Foolish.

Speaking of the Philippine problem, Mr. Taft declared it would take at least two generations for the Filipinos to become fitted for self-government, and said that for the American Government to promise within any definite time to give them independence was "very foolish."

Earlier in the day Mr. Taft visited the White House offices.

"I just came to pay my respects," he said to Assistant Secretary Forster. "Please take my card to the President and tell him so. I know he is a busy man and I don't want to trouble him."

President Wilson, however, directed that his predecessor be ushered in immediately. The two men chatted for a few minutes, greeting each other heartily.

As the former president walked out, he was surrounded by many old friends.

"I am becoming more pleased each day," he remarked, "with the dignity of a college professor's life.

Today's call was Mr. Taft's third at the White House offices since March 4. A veteran employe who has kept a record of the movements of former Presidents says Mr. Taft holds the record of White House visits for the last 50 years.

Mr. Taft conferred during the day with former Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois in regard to the Lincoln memorial.

4-PIECE LIBRARY OR DEN SET

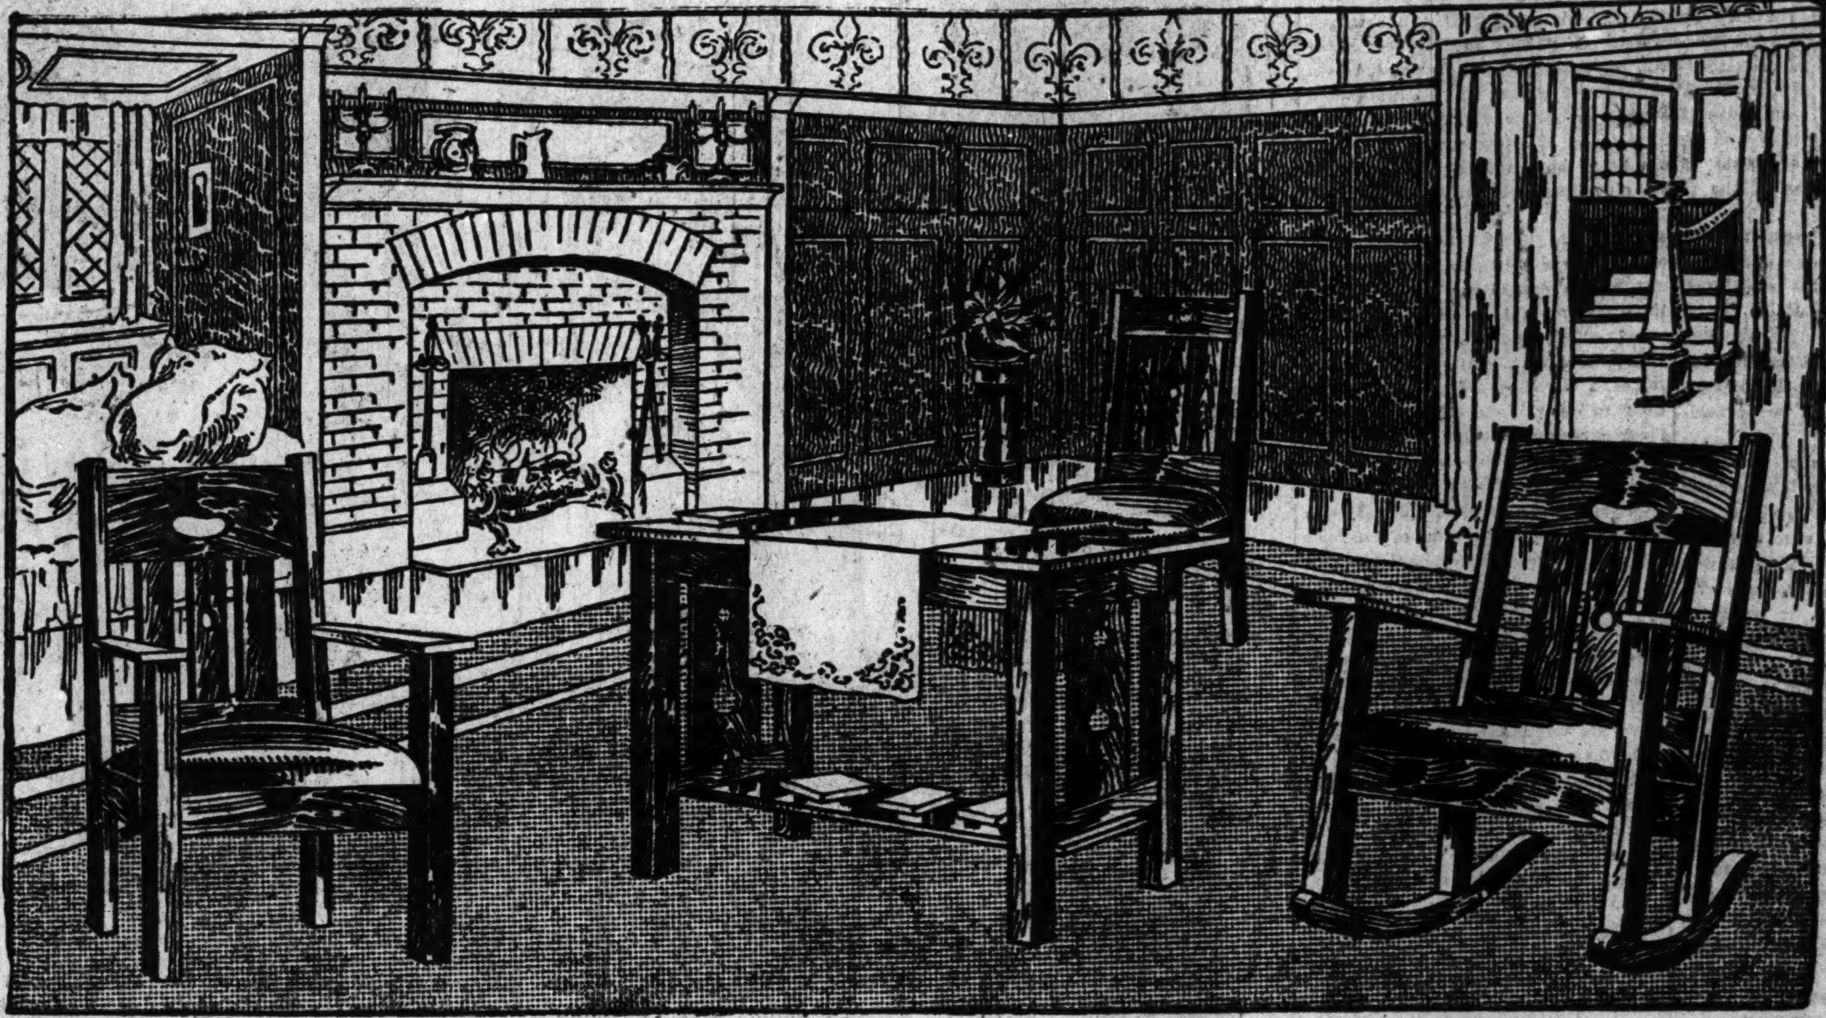
$12.75

TERMS—$1.00 CASH—$1.00 A MONTH



Think of it—a whole roomful of furniture like this—the greatest value ever offered at only $12.75

Here Is the Story in a Nutshell

A well-known manufacturer, desiring to keep his factory busy during the dull months, offered to make up an immense lot of these beautiful Library Sets for us at a very low price, to be delivered early in November. The goods have just arrived and will go on sale tomorrow morning at a price that we are confident will create a positive sensation and close out the entire lot in short order.

Note the Illustration Carefully

It shows this handsome Library Set exactly as it will look in your home—four handsome pieces, consisting of Library Table, large Arm Rocker, Arm Chair and Reception Chair—all made in a thoroughly first-class manner and finished with conscientious care—a set that will give a lifetime of service and always look well.

Built in Mission Design

As you will notice, all of these pieces are fashioned in true Mission effect—a strong and durable style that was originated by the monks in the old missions of California, from which all Mission Furniture derives its name. The entire set is in a beautiful Early English finish that will harmonize nicely with almost any decorative scheme.

The Library Table

This is a full size Library Table that will meet the requirements of the average household—the top is 22x36 inches—the legs are massive—the side panels, as you notice, are in decorative effects—and there is a broad bottom shelf for books and magazines.

Chairs and Rockers Richly Upholstered

All of these Chairs and Rockers are built for solid comfort—they are massive in design—have heavy posts, broad arms and ornamental back panels—and the seats are richly upholstered in the best quality of Chase Leather over a bed of oil-tempered long coil springs—the height of comfort and durability.

Terms—$1.00 Cash—$1.00 a Month

Stop and consider what four handsome pieces of furniture like this would cost you anywhere else—and you will readily see that this is really a $25.00 outfit which we are offering this week at $12.75. And the terms of payment have been made equally pleasing in order to acquaint you with the liberality of our methods and to induce you to open an account with us. Visit our store tomorrow—see this attractive Library Set for yourself—and make your selection promptly.

The New After-Dinner Speaking

"This is my day,"
The highbrow said,
As he marked the bulge
In his great forehead,
And fixed the scene
With his cold, faint smile,
"Now we shall talk

WE have with us now the new after-dinner speaking. The post-prandial entertainment made famous by Chauncey Depew" is deader than Pompey. One has only to get about in the city of St. Louis at this time of year to discover how the fashions have changed in this respect. The custom of rising after a good dinner and running off a few trivial things which everyone present already knows has happily passed. One must have something to say now that is not known by anyone else in the room. One must not have read it in a book, but must have learned it either by experience or by virtue of having figured it out. The demand for information of this kind is tremendous. It is impossible to supply it. The moment a man who knows anything peculiar to his own career sets foot in town he is run down by a dozen organizations which want him to come out and talk. Big organizations like the City Club have trained men who are perfect bloodhounds at this work. They haunt the hotels. They meet the trains. They watch the newspapers for any sign of anything coming. Meanwhile, the City Club waits at the table for the game to be caught and brought in. A good catch is rewarded with an ovation. Sometimes the pay of the sleuth who made it is increased. The Town Club is a rival to the City Club. It is, indeed, the same thing in the feminine gender. The Town Club has female bloodhounds. They can bring down anything with long back hair. There is positively nothing else about St. Louis comparing in metropolitanism with being snapped up by an agent of one of these organizations the moment one sets foot in town. It is immensely cosmopolitan, too. It makes the city a world city. It is wonderfully complimentary. Scores of persons out of "Who's Who" are going out of their way to pass through St. Louis now. We have established an intellectual zone in which, spider-like, the city gets everything that falls into its web. We have pulled big flies away from Chicago this fall until she is desperate.

THE old post-prandialist may still be seen at an occasional banquet, but he is on his last legs. He has no message. That is the thing. All the new after-dinner speakers deliver a message. They all have to do with human progress. One man, for instance, knows how to deal with bad men in prison without torturing them, as we do in Missouri. Another knows how to save birds of plumage. A third understands the conditions in sweatshops. A fourth knows about currency. It is an amusing speculation to consider what would happen to a speaker of the old school at the City Club. He would be run out of the place. It would be intolerable—the old knownothingism. A few lowbrows still practice it at trade banquets and similar entertainments given on a low intellectual plane, but it is gone forever from the presence of thinking men.

We have, indeed, achieved in our civilization what might be termed a circulating museum for the exhibition of men more or less great. An organization engaged in rounding these men up constitutes a cage. There, looking through the tines of one's fork, one may see the specimen pacing backward and forward behind the head table. It is our biggest and most successful museum, and one beside which a zoo is for monkeys on both sides of the bars.

The only defect in the new custom is the astonishing paucity of informed material. The man who knows anything out of the beaten path is a rare bird. He makes the rara avis of the ornithologist look as common as Indian runner ducks. Days pass without either the City Club or the Town Club being able to land anybody. There are very few pioneers in civilization. The great mass of humanity only moves out when a thing is settled. The pioneer must find it out, clear it from all manner of doubt, and properly list it with what is known and established. The man who can do this is as rare as a Daniel Boone.

It is our duty to ourselves to hear these people as much as we can. They have things to tell us. They are in step with the marching world. One can hear the fifes and the rolling drums. It is a sign and a token. Don't let the parade go by you. Get in it. If you can't join one of the clubs already in the field, organize one of your own, get your bloodhounds out, and round up your men. They will be flattered.

Secretary Bryan's Own Story of His Numerous Doubles

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.

ALMOST every American statesman has his double, but Secretary of State Bryan seems to have double the number of doubles of any other man in Washington. There is a pleasant custom in many towns of having the double introduce Bryan when the Commoner comes to make a speech.

In discussing his lecture experiences with doubles, Bryan said that once, in a Nebraska town, his double was attired for the occasion in a silk hat and a high collar, but that he had on his usual slouch hat and low collar.

"But he was merciful," said the Secretary of State; "he made a short introduction of about twenty minutes—oh, I assure you, that is really moderate—and I arose.

"After I had been speaking about ten minutes a man walked into the hall and looked me over. He noticed my double, sitting on the platform, with his high hat and choker. The man listened to me for a minute; then he turned to a neighbor and growled:

"'Why don't that derned rooster set down and let Bill Bryan speak? Look at his clo'es. They're a disgrace to the town.'"

12 MISSIONARIES TO CHINA COMING HERE FOR 3 DAYS

Presbyterians Planning Stirring Campaign for Missions This Week.

ASSIGNMENTS ARE MADE

Dean of Speakers, Dr. A. A. Fulton Who Has Been in Canton Since 1890.

Presbyterians of St. Louis will begin next Friday a three days' "China campaign." There will arrive in the city that morning about a dozen men fresh from missionary work in China, some of whom have been there a third of a century. These workers will speak in selected places in the city and suburbs that night, one missionary in each place.

At the head of the speaking band is the Rev. J. C. Garritt, D. D., who has been in the China field since [illegible], and now is connected with the great university at Nanking, the southern capital. The dean of the China missionaries is Dr. A. A. Fulton, who has been at work in the province of Canton since 1880, and has charge of all the work of the Canton station.

There will also be the Rev. W. T. Locke of Hunan Province, a survivor of the Boxer massacres; the Rev. Charles A. Killie, in Shantung since [illegible], and the first foreigner to enter the Forbidden City at Pekin; the Rev. W. H. Lingle, in Canton and Hunan provinces since 1890; the Rev. Henry W. Luce, from the Wei Hsien mission; Dr. A. W. Halsey, Dr. Charles Bradt, the Rev. D. S. Tappan Jr., Dr. W. H. Rehard, Dr. J. N. Mills and Dr. William R. King.

In charge of the campaign is Dr. Francis W. Russell of West Presbyterian Church, moderator of the St. Louis Presbytery.

District Meetings Friday.

For the Friday evening meetings, at which the missionaries will tell the story of the work in China and the development of China as they have personally seen it, the city and suburbs have been divided into fifteen districts and one union meeting will be held in each district. The places of meeting and the missionary speaker at each are as follows:

West Presbyterian Church, A. A. Fulton, D. D.; First Presbyterian Church, Dr. L. C. Garrett; Second Presbyterian Church, the Rev. H. W. Luce; Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, A. W. Halsey, D. D.; Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church, Charles E. Bradt, D. D.; Greeley Memorial Church, Samuel A. Ceile, D. D.; North Covenant Church, a home speaker, Judge Selden P. Spencer; McCausland Presbyterian Church, the Rev. H. W. Lingle; Markham Church, the Rev. D. S. Tappan Jr.; Carondelet Presbyterian Church, H. W. Rehard, D. D.; Webster Groves Presbyterian Church, J. N. Mills, D. D.; Kirkwood Presbyterian Church, William R. King, D. D.; Ferguson Presbyterian Church, the Rev. W. T. Locke; St. Charles Presbyterian Church, the Rev. C. A. Killie; Baden Presbyterian Church, J. M. Patterson, secretary for the Southwest of the Presbyterian Board.

Women's Meetings Arranged.

Under the management of the various women's organizations there will be conferences in the parlors of selected churches Friday and Saturday afternoons, at which a missionary speaker will be present, a different one from the one speaking in the same church Friday night. Friday at 3 p. m. such parlor conferences will be held in King's highway, West, Lafayette Park, Church of the Covenant, First, Boyle, First German, Winnebago, Tyler Place, Cote Brilliante, Washington and Compton, McCausland and Halsey.

The Saturday afternoon conferences for women will be held in Grace, Second, Bacon, Carondelet, Ferguson, Curby, Clifton Heights, Lindenwood College (St. Charles), Greeley, Kirkwood and Webster Groves.

Sunday there will be a redistribution of the speakers so that new ones will appear in each church. They will speak both morning and evening and at the Sunday school and the Young People's meetings. A special union meeting of Young People's Societies will be held Sunday at 4 p. m. in the Washington and Compton Church, where Dr. A. A. Fulton will be the chief speaker.

Saturday noon the visitors and two or three members of each church will meet in a social luncheon. The headquarters of the missionary team will be at the Marquette Hotel.

A New Sun in the Tobacco World.

Smokers in this locality have been much interested in the announcements of Stag Tobacco in our advertising columns.

Although on the market only a year, the sales of Stag are said to be enormous. This success is attributed to daily newspaper advertising which brought the distinctive qualities of Stag to the immediate attention of smokers all over the country.

Stag was the first brand of tobacco put up in a half-size 5c tin. A pound glass humidor containing one pound, and a full size 10c tin are recent developments.

PRUFROCK FUNERAL HELD

The funeral of William Prufrock, 70 years old, former president of the William Prufrock Furniture Co., who died Wednesday night at his home, [illegible] avenue, was held yesterday afternoon. Burial was in Bellefontaine Cemetery. The active pallbearers were: Paul Borgheldt, E. A. Collins, A. Fro[illegible], A. Goodall, William Rottmann and F. H. Kronning.

He was president of the National German-American Alliance, and was a member of the Liederkranz Club and St. Louis Turnverein. He is survived by his widow and four children.

Tomorrow=A Wonderful Offering, Beginning at 8:30, of Guaranteed Silverware at Sensational Prices

Wm. A. Rogers' Celebrated Warwick Pattern

We consummated last Summer the GREATEST SINGLE PURCHASE OF SILVERWARE ON RECORD, taking over Wm. A. Rogers' entire stock in the Warwick Pattern, the opportunity coming through this great maker's determination to make no more of this well-known pattern. Our sale of last August will long be remembered by all who purchased. Now—we renew the opportunity. With Christmas shopping in mind, we placed then only a part of the purchase on sale, withholding pieces we knew thousands would be seeking for gifts. They are yours tomorrow—finest gift lines in rich, white lined boxes—at but the veriest fractional part of their worth.

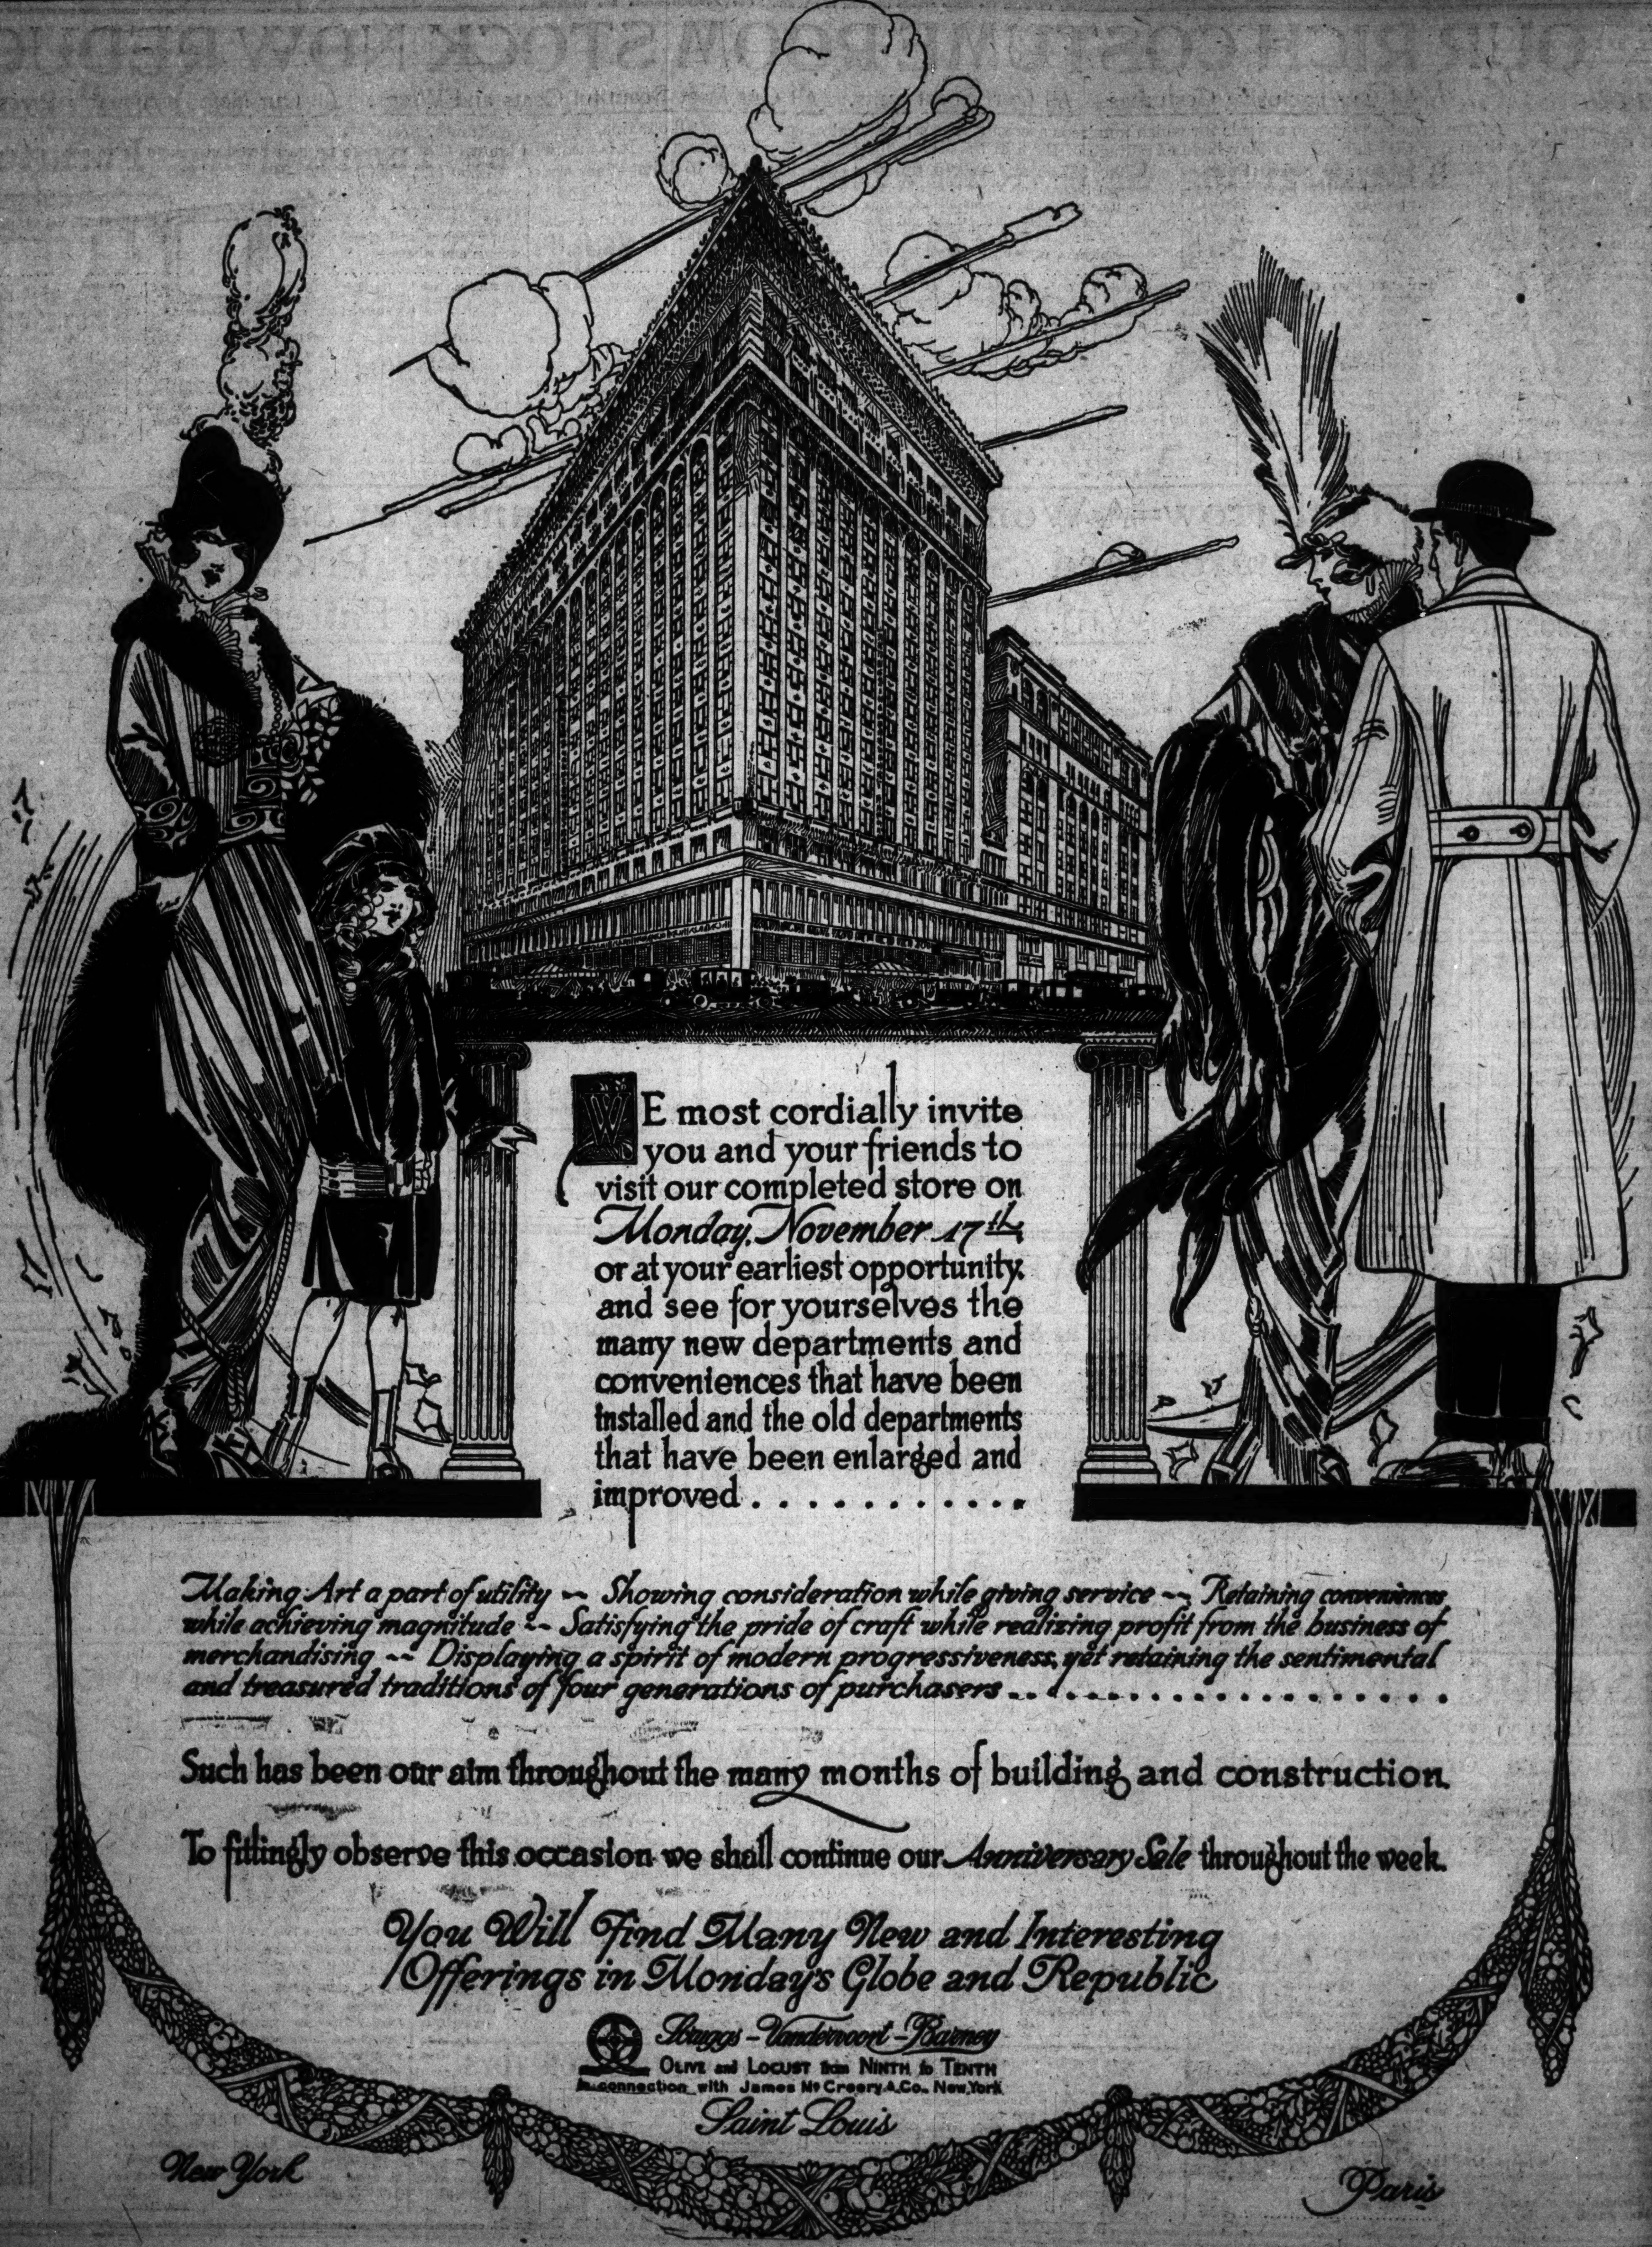
B. NUGENT & BRO. DRY GOODS CO., Broadway, Washington Av. and St. Charles St.



WE most cordially invite you and your friends to visit our completed store on Monday, November 17th or at your earliest opportunity and see for yourselves the many new departments and conveniences that have been installed and the old departments that have been enlarged and improved . . . .

Making Art a part of utility -- Showing consideration while giving service -- Retaining conveniences while achieving magnitude -- Satisfying the pride of craft while realizing profit from the business of merchandising -- Displaying a spirit of modern progressiveness, yet retaining the sentimental and treasured traditions of four generations of purchasers . . . .

Such has been our aim throughout the many months of building and construction.

To fittingly observe this occasion we shall continue our Anniversary Sale throughout the week.

You Will Find Many New and Interesting Offerings in Monday's Globe and Republic

Splendid Basement Sales for Monday

4000 Pairs of Women's

Fall Regal Shoes

$3.50 to $6 Qualities—

$1.69 Pair

Now for the Basement's Greatest Shoe Sale Since Last February!

Remember These Facts—

—Not only do they bear the trade-mark of the Regal brand, but almost without exception the original price is marked upon the sole of the shoes—as the case may be, $3.50, $3.85, $4, $4.50, $5 or $6.

—They were bought as "rejects," and according to our contract, they must sell as such.

The Shoes in reality are perfect in every respect, and came to us at such a low price only because some of the styles have been discontinued and of others, the Regal makers had a surplus of which they desire to dispose.

Many of the season's best styles and lasts are included in gunmetal, velour calf, tan Russia calf, kid, patent colt, vici kid, black suede and satin. Choice of button, lace and blucher—Lace Shoes predominating.

Sizes from the smallest to the largest, and in all widths, but more of the AA—A and B widths.

The Basement shoe-selling force will be doubled for this sale, and greater floor space provided to assure comfort and good service.

Remember, these are regular $3.50 to $6 Regal Shoes, Monday at $1.69 pair

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS TO FLUSH THE KIDNEYS IF YOUR BACK HURTS YOU

Advises Missouri folks to overcome Kidney and Bladder trouble and Rheumatism while it is only trouble.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acid so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—ADV.

MAN WHO CLIMBED MT. M'KINLEY WILL GIVE LECTURE HERE

Archdeacon of Yukon to Illustrate Daring Three Months' Feat in Frozen North.

The Rev. Hudson Stuck, Archdeacon of the Yukon, traveler and scientist, will give an illustrated lecture at the Wednesday Club Auditorium Friday evening, Nov. 28, under the auspices of the Episcopal church. His subject will be "The Ascent of Mount McKinley." The Committee on Arrangements consists of the Rev. C. M. Davis, Dean of Christ Church Cathedral; James A. Waterworth and Walker Hill.

Archdeacon Stuck climbed Mount McKinley after many other scientific parties had failed. His ascent required three months. At one point he and his Indian guide were obliged to cut a staircase in the ice three miles long and rising 4000 feet. Their last camp, at an altitude of 18,000 feet, is the highest camp ever made in America.

On June 7, 1913, they reached the top, and the Archdeacon held a brief religious service and erected a cross and a pole on which the American flag was nailed.

Archdeacon Stuck was born in England, but came to this country when a young boy. He was Dean of the Cathedral of Dallas when he became interested in missionary work, and volunteered for service in Alaska. Among clergymen he is usually alluded to as "the Archdeacon of All Outdoors." He travels an average of 2000 miles each winter on his sled, and in the summer covers as much territory in a launch. He holds services in the mining camps and the Indian settlements throughout his district, and every Christmas goes far north of the Arctic Circle.

Dr. Stuck's lecture is illustrated with pictures of the ascent. The pictures are said to be the most wonderful ever taken of mountains and snow.

SPECIAL SERVICES FOR CHURCH SILVER JUBILEE

Program of Lectures, Banquets and Receptions to Last One Week.

A week of special services in celebration of the silver jubilee of the Dr. Fry Memorial M. E. Church, commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the congregation, will be inaugurated this morning with a sermon by the Rev. W. T. Wright, superintendent of the St. Louis district. The pastor, the Rev. W. G. Humphrey, will address an assembly of the classes at the Sunday school.

The congregation was organized in 1888 from a colony of Methodists from the old Union Church. The first meeting was held under an apple tree. The sermon was preached by the Rev. T. H. Hagerty, who now is 85 years old and living in St. Louis.

In the early days the organization was known as the Clifton Heights M. E. Church. When a new church was built to replace the old structure it became known by its present name, in honor of Dr. Benjamin St. James Fry, first president of the board of trustees. The church building was destroyed by fire in 1905, and was replaced by a modern structure.

An illustrated lecture depicting details of the growth of the congregation and of its doctrinal teaching will be a part of the services tonight. The official board will hold a reception in the church tomorrow night, and five-minute talks will be made by members of the board and visiting pastors.

The savings banks of the various classes of the Sunday school will be opened Tuesday night at an open meeting, and the contents will be placed to the credit of the church debt fund. A banquet to 100 men of the congregation and neighborhood will take place Wednesday night. The special services will close next Sunday night with a sermon by Bishop Charles W. Smith.

PRINCE'S SAILING FLEET ON LAKE IS DISBANDED

Little Vessels, Once Manned by 18 Officials of Schaumburg-Lippe, Go Under Hammer.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—The "Princely Schaumburg-Lippe Sailing Fleet" has been disbanded. In spite of its high sounding title this navy consisted only of small sailing boats which plied the inland lake called Steinhuder Meer. It was, however, an historical curiosity.

The Princes of Schaumburg-Lippe have for nearly 150 years owned a little water fortress on an artificial island in the lake and maintained a sailing fleet, at first to provide communications with this castle of refuge in case of an attack, but later for the more prosaic use of excursionists.

The 18 seamen who manned the vessels were officials of the little state and wore its queer, antiquated uniform.

The reigning Prince finally decided that his navy was an expensive luxury and sold it to private persons. A restaurant on the island also belonging to the Prince and kept up by a retired official from the little court of Buckeburg, went under the hammer as well.

BANDIT ARMIES MENACE CHINA; DEFY SOLDIERS

Outlaws, Foot and Cavalry, Rapidly Increasing in Every Province.

TOWNS BURNED, LOOTED

By Associated Press.

PEKIN, China, Nov. 15.—Brigandage in China has spread until some robber bands have assumed the dignity of small armies. They muster both foot and cavalry and are as large as two American regiments. No province is free from bandits. From Manchuria, where the Hunghutzes ply their trade, to Kwangtung, infested by pirates, and from Mongolia to Turkestan, come reports of outlaws who defy the authorities.

There is no local police to cope with the outlaws and the army is not at present a dependable branch of the administration. China is never free from brigandage, but it is only at periods of transition, when the authority of the Government is shaken by political disorders like the recent rebellion, that the bands attain such large proportions.

The American missionaries who fled from their homes in the interior of Fukien Province are still at Foochow, unable to return because no protection can be assured them by the Government. The American consulate at Foochow and the Legation in Pekin have been trying in vain for several months to get the Chinese Government to take vigorous action against Hwang Liang, the outlaw who proclaimed himself Sixteenth Emperor of the Ming Dynasty.

Outlaws Control Province.

A consular report from Shensi says that province is practically administered by outlaws, who work solely in their own interest. The Governor adheres to the central government only because there is no interference from Pekin and because it is good policy for him to describe himself as loyal. The Governor, or Tutu, as he is called, was a poor and unscrupulous official, but now he has amassed a large fortune and a numerous harem.

The consul gives an account of how the commanding general likewise obtained wealth and authority. Being appointed commissioner for the suppression of opium in the province, says the report, he started on a tour with a body of troops. He took the precaution always to send word ahead announcing his approach, a policy which as is customary, brought forth munificent presents from the people. If the presents were ample no opium was discovered. He confiscated only the prepared drug, that being most easily portable and of the highest value, and brought it back to the important centers and sold it.

A member of the American consular service who came recently to Pekin from Canton says that piracy along the rivers and canals is more extensive than ever before. The authorities are endeavoring to terminate it by giving the chiefs government offices and incorporating the ordinary pirates and brigands in the navy and army. It is evident that this time-honored practice has not passed away with the Manchu dynasty.

Catholic Mission Burned.

The French legation has received news of the burning of a Roman Catholic mission church during the plundering and burning of a town in southern Honan, not far from Tsaoyang, where the American and Norwegian missionaries were made prisoners in September. The Government has sent troops in large numbers to fight against "White Wolf," the brigand chief who is terrorizing that section of the country, but according to the report of another American Consul, the soldiers, though sufficiently numerous, are not making serious efforts. They have been trying, ostensibly, for several months to round up the brigands, yet walled towns are still besieged, captured and looted by them.

A missionary in a Honan city describes how a band 2000 strong impressed villagers to carry fuel up to the gate of a town barred against them, in order to burn down the gate so that they might enter and loot the place. The villagers were literally between two fires, for when they approached the gates they were shot at from the walls by soldiers garrisoning the town, and if they refused to advance the brigands laid them low.

Within hearing of the walls of Pekin village blunderbusses can be heard nightly. By firing at intervals their old-time guns, sometimes so large that two or more men are required to carry them, the villagers try to scare off the robbers.

This summer a village within a few minutes' walk of a group of temples occupied by some American and British families in the Western Hills outside Peking, was plundered by a band of mounted men, and one or two villagers were shot. Much more valuable loot and even ransom money might have been obtained by an attack on the temples, but though the guns were heard nightly by the foreign women and children, they spent their summer in the hills with little fear of attack. Their confidence was due to the fact that the people, including brigands, of this province have a great respect for the ability of the foreigner to shoot.

The temples which the foreigners occupy in the summer were headquarters of the Boxers in 1900, and several encounters with the Boxers, signally disastrous for the latter, took place in the neighborhood. Furthermore, a detachment of troops from one or more of the Legation Guards generally goes into camp in one of this group of temples. Generally each of the American companies takes a month out there at different times during the summer.

Simple Home Remedy for Kidneys and Bladder

A simple and easy way to cure weak, deranged kidneys or bladder is to use the following formula: Get six ounces good pure gin and add to it one-half ounce Murax Compound and one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take one to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. Nearly all good druggists have these ingredients. Anyone can mix. One should be sure to get good pure gin, also the genuine Murax Compound, which comes only in a sealed wooden package, as any substitute will not give the desired results.

Weak kidneys or bladder should be given attention as soon as any of the well-known symptoms are noticed. Neglect in the matter is dangerous, as the serious forms, Bright's disease, chronic rheumatism or dread diabetes, may develop. These can be avoided if the above simple mixture is used before complications set in.

Local Pharmacists says this has had a great demand for the past 5 years. Published by the Standard Chemical Co. Laboratories of Chicago, Ill.—ADV.

GOT A COLD? HERE IS RELIEF—PAPE'S

It is a positive fact that a dose of Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach, limbs or any part of the body.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this wonderful Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is nothing else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist can supply—accept no substitute.—ADV.

CATARRHAL TROUBLE ENDED—USE HYOMEI

You Breathe It—No Stomach Dosing—Clears Stopped-Up Head.

Use nature's remedy for catarrh and troubles of the breathing organs, a treatment that is harmless, yet quick and effective.

It is the healing oils and balsams of Hyomei which you breathe through a small pocket inhaler. This medicated air reaches the most remote air cells in the nose, throat and lungs, killing the catarrhal germs, and restoring health to the diseased mucous membrane.

In using Hyomei you are treating your catarrhal troubles with the natural remedy, for it gives a curative air bath to the nose, throat and bronchial organs. It has a powerful healing and antiseptic effect similar to the air in the mountains where the forests give off the fragrant and healing balsams.

Hyomei has benefited so many sufferers of the worst cases of catarrh, with offensive breath, raising of mucus, frequent sneezing, droppings in the throat and spasmodic coughing that it is sold under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not do all that is claimed for it. A complete Hyomei outfit, containing inhaler and bottle of liquid, sells for only $1.00. Extra bottles of liquid, if later needed, 50 cents. Druggists everywhere sell Hyomei.—ADV.

It Turns the Baby's Tears to Laughter

A Gentle Baby Laxative Will Quickly Relieve the Usual Cause of the Trouble.

WALTER J. KIRCH

It is often difficult to tell just what is the matter with a crying, peevish baby or child too young to express its feelings in words, but as a general rule the mother will find that there is a tendency to constipation, which has brought on a headache or nervousness. The little one has no pain, but feels "out of sorts."

The first thing to try is a family remedy, containing good but mild laxative properties, and many mothers will say that their choice would be Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Thousands of mothers keep it in the house for such emergencies, among whom may be mentioned Mrs. John Kirch Jr., 1527 Abstract avenue, Pittsburg, Pa. She has been giving it successfully to little Walter, whose picture we present at three months, when he weighed 14½ pounds. He is a healthy, laughing youngster today and Mrs. Kirch gladly gives Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin credit. It saves many an illness and many a large doctor bill, for by administering it promptly when the first symptoms of illness are noticed it prevents a serious ailment.

It is so pleasant-tasting that no child will refuse it, and as it does not gripe, the child is glad to take it again. A bottle can be obtained of any druggist for 50 cents or $1, the latter being the size bought by families already familiar with its merits. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Syrup Pepsin is for all the family from infancy to old age, and because of its mildness families should prefer it over all other remedies. It is absolutely safe and reliable. You will never again give cathartics, pills, salts or such harsh physics, for they are usually unnecessary, and in the case of children, women and elderly people are a great shock to the system, and hence should be avoided.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington street, Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

PUBLIC INVITED TO USE HIGH SCHOOL WORKSHOP

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 15.—Principal Henry M. Hart of the Lewis and Clark high school, has ordered the manual training department of the school to be opened for the use of the public outside of school hours.

While no regular classes are organized an instructor is present at all times to lend whatever assistance may be needed. Those taking advantage of this opportunity are required to furnish their own materials, but the shop tools and machinery of the manual training department are placed at their disposal free of charge.

The department is an important adjunct of the new $500,000 building and is said to be one of the best equipped in the West.

HEALTH EXPERTS DRAFT NEW PURE MILK ORDINANCE

Sale Would Be Controlled by License System for Dealers and Strict Standards.

An ordinance, drawn by the Health Department experts and which will be introduced in the Municipal Assembly in the immediate future, is intended to revolutionize the milk business in St. Louis. Its provisions, if it should become a law and they are enforced, will prevent the sale of adulterated milk in the city, according to Dr. G. A. Jordan, Assistant Health Commissioner.

In general terms the bill provides that no persons shall be permitted to sell milk in St. Louis until he shall have obtained a license from the Board of Health. Dealers who have violated the city ordinances by the sale of impure milk will be refused licenses.

Must Describe Business Fully.

Persons applying for licenses will be required to file sworn statements with the Board of Health describing in detail the nature of the milk business in which they desire to engage and describing the premises and facilities and naming responsible managers.

The bill also provides new standards for milk and milk products, and prohibits the adulteration or misbranding of milk and milk products.

It also provides that all milk sold in the city must be pasteurized, except that which is produced, kept and handled under prescribed sanitary conditions. The bill also requires that all milk and milk products sold in St. Louis shall be kept in tightly closed containers.

The penalty for violation of the ordinance is fixed at not less than $10 nor more than $200.

Under the provisions of the proposed ordinance no milk can be sold in St. Louis containing more than 88 per cent water or fluid by weight, less than 12 per cent, by weight, of milk solids, less than 3 per cent of milk fat and less than 8½ per cent of milk solids not fat.

Skimmed Milk Requirements.

No skimmed milk can be sold containing less than 9¼ per cent of milk solids or less than 8½ per cent of milk solids not fat.

All vessels in which skimmed milk is contained shall contain the words "Skimmed Milk" in large letters.

Under the terms of the bill the sale of milk from any but healthy cows will be prohibited. The bill sets forth at length the details by which all of these provisions are to be carried out. It also prescribes the methods of pasteurization.

It is expected that the Board of Health, if the bill should become a law, would have absolute power to prevent the sale of impure milk, principally through the exercise of the licensing autority.

GERMAN SONG SOCIETIES TO CELEBRATE THURSDAY

Freier Maennerchor and Ladies' Chorus Will Give Anniversary Concert.

Mrs. Rosalind Anschuetz, violin, Miss Alma Dreifus, soprano, and James J. Rohan, tenor, will be soloists at the anniversary concert of the Freier Maennerchor and the Ladies' Chorus of North St. Louis in the Victoria Theater, Nov. 20. One hundred and twenty singers will participate. Hugo Anschuetz is the musical director of both societies, which are in the front rank of the local German singing circles.

The Maennerchor is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary and the Ladies' Chorus the twenty-fifth return of the day of its foundation. The following program will be offered:

FOWLS FROM 9 STATES AT COLISEUM SHOW

Fowls from nine states will be exhibited at the Coliseum Poultry Show from Nov. 25 to Dec. 1. Five new breeds never before shown at St. Louis shows have been entered. They are Sicilian buttercups, blue andalusians, buckeyes, partridge plymouth rocks and buff orpington ducks. The entries closed yesterday.

Pheasants and peafowls, the freaks of poultrydom, will be among the unique exhibits. What is expected to be a record display of pit games, whose points must be judged on their fighting qualities, will be judged by Edward Johnson of Lancashire, England.

A turkey weighing 45 pounds, from a poultry farm in the Ozarks, whose owner asserts it is the champion heavyweight bird of the State, will be in the turkey exhibit.

The judges at the show will be Theodore Howes of Indianapolis; F. B. Harrison, Menominee, Mich.; E. C. Branch, Lees Summit, Mo.; A. C. Smith, St. Paul; V. O. Hobbs, Trenton, Mo.; C. S. Byers, Hazelrigg, Ind.; Tom Woods, Fayette, Mo., and J. A. Leland, Springfield, Ill.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

CAPTAINS WILL BE SUED FOR MILITIA PROPERTY

Legislative Committee Seeking Graft in Mississippi Will Force an Accounting.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 15.—The Legislative Investigating Committee has decided to sue the captains of militia companies on their bonds for an accounting of all property issued to the members of the companies by the State.

A good deal of the equipment came from the Federal War Department, and reports on this have been demanded. These demands were referred to the Legislative Committee, which in turn inspected the armory and then decided to sue the captains. It is said that a good deal of the property was stolen from camps during the Illinois Central strike. The captains and men will not be held responsible for property lost or stolen while on duty or stolen from an armory.

POUND COCKEREL TO CROW AT POULTRY SHOW

Boston Terriers and Fancy Pigeons Are Also Among the Attractive Features.

A barred plymouth rock cockerel weighing nine pounds will be exhibited at the St. Louis Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Exhibition, which opens Nov. 24, at 1015 to 1019 Washington avenue. The exhibition of the Missouri Boston Terrier Club will be held in connection with the poultry show, and several cups and prizes aggregating $300 will be awarded to the prize winning dogs.

The entry list of the pigeon section is yet open, and several of the breeders of fancy pigeons have expressed their intention of entering their flocks. The entries in the poultry division have been closed.

Mrs. C. A. Robinson of Bowling Green, Md., will be one of the woman exhibitors. She has entered 20 black Langshans.

The Vote in Fiji.

THE Indian merchants in Fiji, in municipal elections, vote solid for the wealthy storekeeper and landowner, who, says Ralph Stock in "Confessions of a Tenderfoot" (Grant Richards), represent vested interests, and owe them money:

"On one occasion that is fresh in the mind of everyone in Suva, these Indian merchants were rounded up and driven to the polls like sheep, well primed beforehand to vote for—we will say Weinstein and Jacobson. These instructions had been so impressed upon them that their vocabulary for days consisted of nothing but 'Weinstein and Jacobson.' 'Move up there,' said the clerk of a polling booth on the great day, to a line of apprehensive Indians. 'D'ye hear? Move up!' 'Weinstein and Jacobson,' answered the latter as one man.

Strange Modes of Travel.

ONCE "Tenderfoot" found himself stranded at Winnipeg almost penniless. He wanted to go West to his ranch. Fate led him to a freight train waiting for its engine, and to a "hobo" (tramp) who asked him for "a chew," his head coming out of a pipe—one of three which were part of the freight. "I'm in the first pipe, my clothes in the second, and my grub in the third," said he. "I've never paid a train fare yet." "Do you think there's room for me on this outfit?" queried "Tenderfoot."

"'Waal, I'll tell you,' he said, leaning toward me and whispering confidentially in my ear. 'This train's 'bout the best I ever struck for beatin,' and it's fair full o' men, though you can't see 'em. See that box car full of coal? Waal, it isn't full. Just up at the top there's a hole that's been made by throwin' some o' the coal out on the line, and there's a man up there; saw him get in myself. See that car of lumber? There's a man in the middle o' that, 'cos he came over and asked me for a chew. And there's one goin' to work his way up by helpin' the stoker, but I've had some of that, and he can keep the job. But to my mind the best place in the whole outfit has been left out, and I had a mind to give up these quarters for it, and that's the refrigerator.'"

And "Tenderfoot" made the run in the refrigerator, shot in by the friendly "hobo." He stumbled into something soft and alive, and a voice came out of the darkness: "Who you pushin,' stranger?" There were more thrills before the end of the ride.

"Beating" a Passenger Train.

BUT the freight train did not land "Tenderfoot" at his ranch, so he dared the risky job of riding on the "rods" of an express passenger train. In this way he covered a nonstop 60-mile journey. He crouched in the grass beside the railway track, and waited till a train flashed by and pulled up at the station, then ran, bending low, and clambered on the rods or stanchions beneath the hindmost coach. To hold on for life as the pace quickened needed some nerve, with the carriage swaying above him, an icy current of air sweeping over him, and the gravel of the roadbed hurtling about his ears. But he conquered.

In Bad Lion Country.

FEW women can be so familiar with the King of the Wilderness as Mrs. Fred Maturin (Edith Cecil-Porch), whose "Adventures Beyond the Zambesi" (Nash) as the Rebel-Woman, with the O'Flaherty, the Insular Miss and the Soldier Man, contain many thrilling lion tales. One evening she met a lion in a forest of impenetrable grass. She was quite alone—her gun-bearer, Lang-Wan, having disappeared—two miles from camp.

"Through the long, dry grass, a large male lion stood gazing at me. * * * I stood still as he. As my blood appeared to rush to my head, I could not have stirred had I wished to. I stood still. I don't think I even breathed, or that my heart gave one faint beat for some seconds. * * * I must stand quite, quite still and stare back. It was, perhaps, my only chance."

In all her terror she was conscious of the animal's great beauty. She watched him draw a step or two back.

"I thought he was about to spring, but I took care not to move, mastering my terrible, but fatal, instinct to turn and run. Then he dropped his head * * * and with obvious fear slunk quickly away!" That was at Dem River.

"The Daylight Lion."

"THE daylight lion is like the ghost story next morning; nothing in it," had said the Soldier Man. Yet it was not pleasant when the little party saw three lions quite close, even in sunlight. But, says the Rebel-Woman, "the lion is only a danger when he knows you don't know he's near, or when he is wounded," and these three crept away, fast and noiselessly, avoiding them with intent. Their treachery, under cover of night, is another matter, and in these pages there is a hair-raising tale of two lions in camp at night, in the Deserted Village—which lay not far from the Kafue Lakes—and how in scaring them off with torches the huts ignited, and the whole village was ablaze.

Wit That Bit.

LEWIS MELVILLE, in "The Life and Writings of Philip, Duke of Wharton" (Lane), gives several anecdotes illustrating the Duke's brutal wit—this, for instance: When a certain Bishop in the House of Lords rose to speak, and remarked that he should divide what he had to say into 12 parts, the Duke, interrupting, begged he might be permitted to tell a story. "A drunken fellow was passing by St. Paul's at night, and heard the clock slowly chiming 12," he said. "He counted the strokes, and when it was finished, looking towards the clock, said: 'Damn you, why couldn't you give us all that at once?'"

The Bishop's speech did not come off.

How Duke Evaded Bill.

WHEN in Paris the Duke met Sir Peter R——, who had been made a Knight of the Portuguese Order of Christ. The Knight invited him to a feast of the order, and suggested that he should don a black velvet suit, the costume de rigueur at all its functions. The Duke remarked that he did not know a tailor in the capital:

"I will send you mine," said Peter. "He is a very honest fellow, and will use you well." The tailor came, the suit was made, and the Duke attended the dinner in the regulation attire. * * *

* Presently the tailor waited upon the Duke, and presented a bill. "What is this for?" asked his Grace. He was told it was for the black velvet suit. "Honest man," he replied, "you mistake the matter very much. You are to carry the bill to Sir Peter R——; for be pleased to know that whenever I put on another man's livery, my master always pays for the clothes."

STUDENTS SAVE WOMEN IN FIRE AT NORTHWESTERN U.

Dental Patients, Many Children Assisted Down Escapes, When Flames Cut Off Egress.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Fire started in the downtown six-story building of Northwestern University at Lake and Dearborn streets today while the students in the law and dental departments were at work. Fifty of them fled down the fire escapes. There was no loss of life. The blaze started in the basement and ordinary means of egress were quickly shut off.

Among others who went down the fire escapes were a number of women and children, who had been in the hands of dentist students. Nearly 200 persons fled by the fire escapes. Two dental students from Utah—F. C. Dollamore of Ogden, and James Barnheisel of Lewiston, assisted many women and children to reach the fire escapes. J. C. Martin, a student from Cedar Falls, Io., had charge of a chair on the fifth floor when 15 women and girls rushed into the room. He and other male students calmed them and assisted them down fire escapes. The loss was small.

One Cause of Bad Complexion—the Cure.

(From Family Physician.)

"Look at a section of skin under the microscope and you will readily understand why cosmetics generally injure the complexion," says Dr. H. Robert Mackenzie. "The skin, smooth as it looks to the naked eye, under the glass exhibits a lacework of tiny holes, mouths of myriads of little glands. To keep the skin healthy these holes must be unobstructed, that the perspiration and natural oil can have free outlet. Should the glands be blocked up with irritating gritty particles, a common result of using powders and creams, Nature retaliates by causing sallowness, roughness, blotches or pimples.

"As a substitute for all cosmetics I recommend ordinary mercolized wax. It not only does what the various face preparations are supposed to accomplish, but its peculiar absorbent action frees the pores from the daily accumulation of impurities, also absorbing the devitalized particles of surface skin. This produces a natural, healthy, youthful complexion. One ounce of this wax, to be had at any drug store, usually suffices to rejuvenate the poorest complexion. It is put on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings."—ADV.

SUFFRAGE LEAGUE JOINS SPIGARDI FAIR CAMPAIGN

"Votes for Women," "Schoolbooks for Children" Slogan of Benefit for Italian Poor.

"Votes for Women" and "Schoolbooks for Children" will be the combined slogan at the fair to be given by the Rev. Father C. Spigardi at the Coliseum Nov. 22 and 23, for the benefit of his free school for poor Italian children, at Tenth and Wash streets.

The Equal Suffrage League yesterday appointed a committee to assist Father Spigardi with the fair, and, incidentally, to make converts for the suffrage cause. Admission will be free, and an Italian supper will be served.

The Equal Suffragists will be in charge of one of the 30 booths. The members of the committee appointed are: Mrs. John L. Lowes, Miss Edith Barriger, Miss Marie Garesche, Miss Mary MacDearmon, Mrs. George Dunbar Fisher, Mrs. David N. O'Neil, Miss Elsa Blackman and Mrs. W. W. Boyd Jr.

The purpose of the fair is to raise $30,000 to pay off the debt on the school building, which was dedicated last January by Archbishop Glennon. Adolphus Busch gave $10,000. The building cost $40,000.

Mrs. Grace Bailey Asks Divorce.

Mrs. Grace F. Bailey of 5949 Washington boulevard, filed suit yesterday for divorce from Harry G. Bailey, a grain broker, with offices in the Pierce Building. They were married Feb. 10, 1906, and separated July 19 last. She alleges he remained away from home on several occasions and that he finally deserted her.

Catholic Union Dance.

The St. Louis executive board of the Western Catholic Union, composed of 32 branches in the city and county of St. Louis, will give a dance and reception Thursday at Drill Corps Hall, Iowa avenue and Sidney street. Dancing will begin at 8:30. Arrangements have been made for bowling and card games for those who do not dance. Refreshments will be served.

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD—CATARRH GOES

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing, but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—ADV.

THIRD BATHHOUSE FOR PUBLIC OPENED AT DE SOTO PLACE

New Institution Has 43 Showers for Men and 19 for Women and Cost $31,500.

The third public bathhouse was opened Saturday by Park Commissioner Dwight F. Davis without formal ceremony, at Twenty-third and O'Fallon streets, opposite De Soto Place Playground.

The new bathhouse, two stories and basement, contains 43 showers for men and 19 for women, besides tubs for both sexes. It is planned to construct an open-air swimming pool on the same lot next summer, measuring 90x50 feet.

The O'Fallon bathhouse cost $31,500. It is a brick structure, with tile roof, of Italian architecture. The site is in the heart of the most congested district of the city not previously supplied with a bathhouse, according to Davis, and this fact, determined by the last United States census enumerators, decided the point of location.

The location was opposed by many Assemblymen in the last session, who asserted that South St. Louis should be selected for the third bathhouse. Delegate James J. Gallagher, representing the Fourth Ward, in which O'Fallon street lies, violated a physician's order and postponed a serious surgical operation to attend a meeting at which he succeeded by threats of reprisals in forcing the South Side delegates to vote for the bill.

Bathhouse No. 1, at Tenth and Carr streets, was attended by 327,032 patrons in the last six months. Bathhouse No. 2, Seventh and Soulard streets, was attended by 349,396 in the same period.

Crowd Cheers Chamberlain.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Congratulations came from all parts of the world today to Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the British statesman, and his wife, for their silver wedding anniversary. Mrs. Chamberlain was the only daughter of the late William C. Endicott, Secretary of War under President Cleveland. King George and Queen Mary sent personal felicitations and there were many callers at Princess Gardens, where the Chamberlains reside. A cheering crowd gathered outside the house late today.

Millions of Dollars Worth of Real Estate

Which will be worth millions more in a few years, is on the market and advertised in the 800 REAL ESTATE and farms ads in today's big WANT DIRECTORY.

HOSPITAL TAG DAY TO BE OBSERVED NEXT SATURDAY

Collections Will Be Taken in All Downtown Buildings Except the Postoffice.

Collections for the St. Louis hospitals will be taken by the Saturday and Sunday Hospital Association next Saturday and Sunday.

As in former years, women will sell tags in the office buildings, hotels and all public buildings except the postoffice and substations Saturday, and the following Sunday the collections will be taken in the churches and Sunday-schools.

Postmaster-General Burleson has made absolute the order prohibiting the collections in the postoffice. Postmaster Selph is the first Postmaster to enforce the order against the sale of tags in the building.

Collections Total $516,957.

President D. R. Francis of the Saturday and Sunday Hospital Association issued his annual address yesterday. It showed that during the 20 years' existence of the association it had distributed $516,957.72 among St. Louis hospitals. The total collections during the life of the association amounted to $542,818.62, of which $24,146.46 has been expended for expenses, with a balance of $1714.44 in the hands of Treasurer Walker Hill.

About one-half of the association's expenses, according to Francis, have been paid out of the annual dues of the members. The dues are $2 a year.

The report shows that 98 per cent of the total amount of money collected is distributed among the hospitals, in proportion to the number of free patients cared for by each during the year. The 1912 collections, aggregating $47,837.03, reimbursed the hospitals to the extent of only 62 per cent of their free work.

The maximum amount allowed to any hospital treating patients free is $1 a day. President Francis said that the generous contributions of the St. Louis public enabled the hospitals to give service to many poor, suffering persons, who were unable to pay for treatment.

The hospitals, in consideration of the fact that the public is invited to contribute to the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association for their benefit, refrain from soliciting funds from the public during the months of November and December.

Information for All Lung Sufferers.

Would you like to know more about a remedy for Lung Trouble which has brought about many complete recoveries? The makers of Eckman's Alterative are in receipt of many really wonderful reports, and will be pleased to forward to you copies of original letters and also booklet on diet and proper care needed in recovering health. Investigate this case:

1619 Susquehanna Av., Phila, Pa.

"My Dear Sir: For two years I was afflicted with hemorrhages of the lungs, and in February of 1902 I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia. When I recovered sufficiently to walk about the house, I was left with a frightful hacking cough, which no medicine I had taken could alleviate. It was at this time, March, 1902, that I started taking Eckman's Alterative. In a short time my cough was gone and I was pronounced well. I cannot speak too highly for the good it has done."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

BUFFALO SKULLS VOTED IN KANSAS COUNTY ELECTION

Ballot in Interest of "Railroad on Paper" of Which State Has More Than 1000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 15.—Several hundred Kansas railroads are to be put out of business in a few weeks. These railroads exist only on paper and the corporations which projected them have in many cases long ceased to exist, but they are still carried on the State corporation roll, no formal notice of their dissolution having been filed.

Many of the paper railroads date back 40 years, when North and South Pole railroads and Atlantic and Pacific railways were projected every day. Many of them were formed only to "work" counties for bond issues, which were sold by the promoters who then dropped the railroad project and went to greener fields to work the same scheme. In all, more than 1100 railroad charters were granted in Kansas. There are only about 20 railroad corporations now doing business in the State.

In one of the southwestern counties, 40 years ago, the half dozen residents of the county met at the only log house within its boundaries, gathered up a lot of buffalo skulls in the vicinity, wrote a name on each one and held an election for County Commissioners, voting each skull as a person and electing three of the six actual residents to the commissionerships. These commissioners then called an election to vote bonds for a railroad and the next week voted the skulls again to approve of it. The bonds were then sold and the six men pocketed the proceeds.

The courts afterward declared the bonds illegal, first because of the voting of the skulls, and second, because the railroad for which they were supposed to have been issued never existed even on paper.

GIRLS! GIRLS! YOU MUST TRY THIS! DOUBLES THE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits, particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use of Danderine, when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.—ADV.

THREE NEW NIGHT SCHOOLS WILL BE OPENED IN ST. LOUIS

Board Provides for Classes at Soldan, Yeatman and Glasgow.

A report issued by the Board of Education shows that the enrollment of the public night schools of this city for this year is 10,628, and the regular nightly attendance 7621. The enrollment exceeds that of last year by 886.

The largest enrollment is at Central High School, being 2444, with an average attendance of 1704. McKinley High is next, with an enrollment of 2435 and an average attendance of 1810. The Franklin grade school has the highest enrollment among the district schools, 1017, with an average attendance of 622.

To provide for the increased attendance, the board will open two new high schools, Soldan and Yeatman, and one one new district school, Glasgow School, Monday evening.

FLOWER FESTIVAL WILL AID OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Officers of Institution Make Plans and Society Women Volunteer to Help.

The officers of the Christian Old People's Home, 2821 Lawton avenue, formulated plans at a meeting Friday afternoon at the Planters Hotel for a Fall Flower Festival, to be held Saturday, Dec. 6, for the benefit of the home. Three hundred women and young society girls attended the meeting and volunteered to help in the work.

The proceeds are to be used in remodeling the old homestead of Nicholas M. Bell, which the National Christian Women's Benevolent Association bought from the Christian Peper estate, for a home for aged people. The new property consists of five acres of ground, well shaded with old forest trees, and an 12-room brick house and a two-rom frame cottage.

The Christian Old People's Home was established three years ago. It is now caring for 28 old people—25 women and three men. The home is without endowment and is maintained by the Christian church and subscriptions from the public. Helpless old people are admitted regardless of creed.

There will be a meeting of the Fall Flower Festival Committee and their assistants and workers, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 20, at 3 o'clock, at the Planters Hotel, when the stations will be assigned to the chaperons.

21,000 GERMAN DOCTORS GO ON INSURANCE STRIKE

Physicians Object to Employment by Contract Which Overcrowds Open Medical Field.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—More than 21,000 German physicians from small town and country districts have decided to follow the example of their professional brethren in Great Britain and declare a "doctor's strike" against sickness and accident insurance associations established under the imperial insurance laws.

They complain against certain regulations under the laws, which they say militate against them, particularly one depriving the patient who is a member of an organization of any say in the choice of the physician by whom he desires to be treated. They object, too, to the wide discretion given to the organizations in the matter of contracts with physicians.

The decision to declare a strike against these regulations was reached at a meeting in Berlin of more than 800 delegates from all over Germany.

The doctors of Berlin, Dresden, Hamburg and other large cities did not join in the movement, owing it was said, to the desperate competition among them.

MAN WHO CAME TO U. S. SOUGHT BY LONDON WIFE

Mrs. Fanny M. R. Ben Sends His Photograph to Chief of St. Louis Poice.

Mrs. Fanny M. R. Ben of 28 Church street, London, England, eager to find her husband, M. K. Ben, has written the St. Louis police that he lived in the United States for 20 years.

"Surely someone in the United States must know him, so I am sending you his picture," she wrote Chief Young.

She added that the police here might show the photograph to the people of the United States. She married Ben, who is about 60 years old, April 17 last, in London. He told her his home was in Mount Clemens, Mich., and that he had a sister in Chicago.

Ben left England June 12, saying he was coming to the United States to go into business. Mrs. Ben heard from him a month later in Mount Clemens, but received no further word.

PENNANTS TO DECORATE OLYMPIC NIGHT OF DEC. 1

College Club Prepares for Its Annual Program to Give Girls Higher Education.

The pennant shower, which was given by the members of the College Club of St. Louis yesterday afternoon at Sheldon Memorial Hall, resulted in the collection of enough pennants to decorate the Olympic Theater, Dec. 1. The club on that night will own the playhouse. It will be the first night show of "Governor's Lady," in which William Harcourt and Miss Emma Dunn play the title roles.

The club bought out the entire house and is selling the tickets at advanced rates. The club does this once each year, the object being to raise a fund with which to give high school girls university educations. At present the club is sending six girls through Eastern universities and several through Washington University. All expenses are paid during the entire three or four years' course.

The College Club has been organized about 15 years and has more than 300 members, all women graduates of universities. It has been maintaining the scholarship fund for six years, and during that time has given 44 young women higher educations. Miss Leone Robinson is president of the club this year. Mrs. W. W. Horner is corresponding secretary and Mrs. Lon O. Hocker chairman of the Hospitality Committee.

Sister Seeks "Dad" Lewis.

At the request of his sister, police here are seeking Frank Lewis, a former horse trader in this city. The sister, Mrs. Tranter of Smyrna street, Plasmarl, near Swansea, Wales, says her brother came here many years ago and was well known to old street car men in this city as "Dad" Lewis.

BARON WILL SING IN ZACH SYMPHONY CONCERT THIS WEEK

Adolphus Busch's Nephew by Marriage to Make First U. S. Appearance in St. Louis.

The Baron von Kleydorff, knight of the Order of St. Alexandre of Bulgaria, knight of the Order of the Iron Cross of Prussia, officer of the Legion of Honor of France, and a member of the French Academy, will be the soloist for the next regular concerts of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 21-22.

This singer, who in the artistic world is known as Frans Egenieff, premier baritone of the Berlin Royal Opera, is one of the few persons possessing a hereditary title now on the grand opera stage. He was a Lieutenant of cavalry in the German army when his talents as a singer were discovered by a Sergeant in his troop, who happened also to be a musician, and he at once began to study for the opera stage. He still holds his military commission, but devotes the greater part of his time to his artistic career.

Nephew of Adolphus Busch.

Egenieff is a nephew by marriage of the late Adolphus Busch. This city is the first in America to hear him. He is making his first tour in this country this season.

After the death of Adolphus Busch, Egenieff endeavored to have the date for his St. Louis appearance changed to later in the season, but was unable to effect an exchange of dates with any of the other artists on the Symphony list of soloists.

Egenieff enjoys the distinction of having never had a press notice writiten in English. He never has sung in an English-speaking country, and the critics who have heard him up to the present time have written their opinions of his work in the language of the country in which he happened to be singing.

A whole book of German press clippings, many of which were translated into English, were forwarded to Manager Gaines of the Symphony Orchestra by his New York manager. With them were several notices from Italian, French, Belgian and Russian papers. He has sung in most of the notable opera houses on the Continent of Europe, always at guest performances, but his only genuinely professional engagement has been with the Berlin Royal Opera.

Voice Has Great Compass.

Egenieff has a voice of remarkable compass and great dramatic power, and while his first success has been made as an opera singer, he lately has taken up lieder singing with success. In his St. Louis program he will give arias from three of his greatest operatic roles. They are the "Eri tu" from Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera," and two from the Mozart operas of "Don Giovanni" and "Figaro's Wedding."

In the orchestral part of the same program Conductor Zach will play one of the new compositions promised in the first announcement of the Symphony season. This will be a symphonic poem, "Loreley," by Strube, which is as yet unpublished and will be played by the St. Louis orchestra from manuscript. St. Louis is the first American city to hear this composition.

Tschaikowsky to Close Program.

The Tschaikowsky "Pathetique" symphony and the prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," by Wagner, will complete the program. It follows:

Soloist—Frans Egenieff, baritone.
Wagner—Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."
Mozart—
(a) Aria of Almaviva, from "Figaro's Wedding."
(b) Serenade from "Don Giovanni,"
Symphonic Poem, "Loreley," MS. (First time.)
Verdi—
Aria, "Eri tu," from "Un Ballo in Maschera."
Tschaikowsky—
Symphony Number VI "Pathetique."
1. Adagio—Allegro non troppo.
2. Allegro con grazia.
3. Allegro molto vivace.
4. Adagio lamentoso—Andante.

At the second "Pop" concert which will be given this afternoon Mme. Lillian Isenman, English soprano, will be the soloist.

Two First-Time Pieces Scheduled.

Two first-time pieces will be played by the orchestra and there will be an orchestral piece with a violin obligato by Hugo Olk, concert-master of the orchestra. The program follows:

Overture—"Rienzi" .... Wagner
Waltz from the Ballet—"Sleeping Beauty" .... Tschaikowsky
Aria, "Air de Salome" from "Herodiade" .... Massenet
Largo .... Handel
Violin obligato .... Hugo Olk.
Songs, "Where Blossoms Grow" (Sans Souci), "Ishtar" (Spross), and "Yesterday and Today." .... Spross
Selection from "Mme. Butterfly" .... Puccini
Berceuse .... Palmgren
(First time.)
(For string orchestra.)
Three Dances from "Henry VIII" .... German
Waltz—"Dans tes Yeux" .... Waldteufel
(First time.)

28 CHURCHES TO FURNISH CHILD CAROL SINGERS

Many Denominations Will Unite to Help Aid Society on Christmas Eve.

Twenty-eight churches already have agreed to supply groups of children for carol singing Christmas eve for the benefit of the Children's Aid Society of St. Louis. At the call of Mrs. James M. Franciscus, the committee met Friday afternoon to receive reports.

Among the churches which have agreed to furnish carol singers are the Rock Church, Markham Memorial, St. Peter's Episcopal, Third Baptist, Immaculate Conception, Unitarian Church of the Messiah, Second Presbyterian, Epiphany Mission, Ethical Society, Carondelet Presbyterian, Pilgrim Congregational and the Lindell Avenue Methodist Church.

The members of the Carol Singing Comittee, who were appointed by Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, president of the Childrens' Aid Society, are: Mrs. James M. Franciscus, the Rev. G. E. Norton, Miss Mary Semple Scott, Mrs. Guido Panteleoni, Miss Bertha Phillips, Mrs. William A. McCandless, Mrs. Sidney Schwab and Albert Bond Lambert.

KANSAS CITY TO GO INTO JUNK BUSINESS TO HELP HOMELESS

Men Out of Jobs Will Be Provided With Work During the Winter Months.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 15.—Kansas City is going into the junk business to make a profit off its own waste and incidentally to provide work for every needy person this winter. The city is not going into competition with the regular junk dealers, because most of the junk that is gathered up will be sold to the junkmen.

Hundreds of men who work on railroads and contracts in the summer, drift into Kansas City in the winter and the problem of keeping them after their money is gone is great. Two years ago a municipal rock pile was opened where the men were given work as they needed it, but it was run at a loss on account of the competition of mechanical rock crushers.

Now a large yard has been leased, teams have been engaged and the city is going to try the junk business, and incidentally help along the work towards a clean city. A crew of men will be sent out with each wagon to gather junk. This will be brought to the yard and sorted out by other men and then sold in bulk to the junk dealers.

Rags, iron, bottles, rubber, leather, wire, piping or anything that can be picked up will be taken. Packing boxes also will be taken. These will be taken apart and the nails removed, the lumber being sold to box manufacturers for working up into new packing cases. The Salvation Army already [illegible] organization for [illegible] pers, and the city junk [illegible] terfere with that.

Surest, Easiest, Quickest and Pleasantest
WAY TO CHASE AWAY A COLD

Act Now—Follow This Suggestion—and by Morning You Won't Have Any More Cold "Than a Rabbit." If You Have, Get Your Money Back.

Instead of sniffles and tears, you will be a picture of smiles and good nature if you will throw away all the old, so-called "cold cures" and eat a lump of sugar with a few drops of Virgin Oil of Pine.

Within five minutes your cold will be on the run and your head will surely begin to clear. Relieves a cold almost instantly.

There's no doubt or uncertainty about it, for it has been tried in hundreds of thousands of cases, and these folks all know.

Just be sure you get Leach's Virgin Oil of Pine—Compound Pure. Every drug store in the country sells it, and the price is 50 cents. To be sure you get Leach's—suppose you take this "ad" with you to the druggist—for if you don't get the genuine, then, of course, you can't get your money back—and if it doesn't cure your cold, then it won't be worth anything.

So get Leach's—then your money will come back into your pocket again if your cold doesn't go and go quickly.

If your druggist won't supply you, send the price to the Leach Chemical Co. at Cincinnati, Ohio, and the package will be mailed you with all charges prepaid.

RUB RHEUMATISM PAINS RIGHT AWAY

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism.

It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. St. Jacobs Oil conquers pain! It is a harmless local rheumatism cure which never disappoints and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia and reduces swelling.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains aches and stiffness.—ADV.

STOPPED HIS DRINKING

Wife and Mother
ed Her Husband Over
Years Ago.

WILL GLADLY TELL YOU HOW FREE

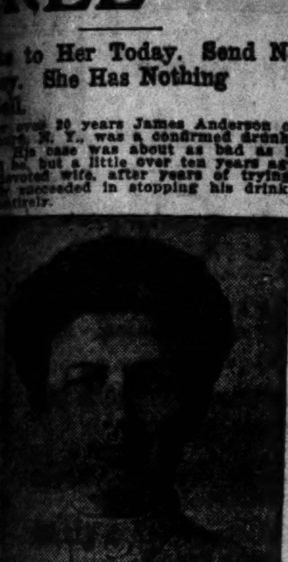
to Her Today. Send No
ey. She Has Nothing
Sell.

For over 20 years James Anderson of ..., N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over ten years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.



Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks.

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson, but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished with a simple home remedy which anyone can get and use. And she now desires to tell every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks just what it is.

It can be given secretly if desired, and every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly, in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks, however, and that is that you do not send money, for she has nothing to sell. Her address is 160 Hill Av., Hillburn, N. Y.

Note—This offer should be accepted at once by all who have dear ones who drink. In fact, every one who has to contend in any way with drunkenness should know about it. Therefore, if you do not write Mrs. Anderson yourself, CUT THIS NOTICE OUT and mail it to a friend who could use her advice. And even though you do answer it, MAIL IT TO SOMEONE ELSE who you think would like to know what Mrs. Anderson used. In other words, let this notice reach as many as possible, for Mrs. Anderson will reply to every letter, no matter how many she receives.

ARE THEY WEAK OR PAINFUL?

Do your lungs ever bleed?
Do you have night sweats?
Have you pains in chest and sides?
Do you spit yellow and black matter?
Are you continually hawking and coughing?
Do you have pains under your shoulder blades?

THESE ARE REGARDED SYMPTOMS OF LUNG TROUBLE AND TUBERCULOSIS

You should take immediate steps to check the progress of these symptoms. The longer you allow them to advance and develop, the more deep-seated and serious your condition becomes.

We Stand Ready to Prove to You absolutely that Lung Germine, the German treatment, has cured completely and permanently case after case of Chronic Bronchitis, Catarrh of the Lungs, Catarrh of the Bronchial Tubes and other lung troubles. Many sufferers who had lost all hope and who had been given up by physicians have been permanently cured by Lung Germine. If your lungs are merely weak and the disease has not yet manifested itself, you can prevent its development, you can build up your lungs and system to their normal strength and capacity. Lung Germine has cured advanced Bronchial Catarrh and the patients remain strong and in splendid health today.

Let Us Send You the Proof—Proof That Will Convince Any Judge or Jury on Earth.

We will gladly send you the proof of many remarkable cures, also a FREE TRIAL of Lung Germine, together with our new 64-page book (in colors) on the treatment and care of Tuberculosis and lung trouble. [illegible]

Good Stories Told by Or About Men You Know at National Capital

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.

JOSEPH P. TUMULTY, the merry secretary to the President, relates that, one evening just before the recent election, there was a gathering of friendly Democrats in Congressman Eugene Kinkead's New Jersey district, when the ebullient "'Gene" came in with a freshly kissed bit of the old blarney stone in his pocket.

'Gene greeted his fellow Democrats with passionate warmth. He threw his arms about one red-faced, bull-necked Democrat:

"Sure I'm glad to see you here tonight. Look at 'im, boys; isn't he a dandy? Remember the time we had at the clambake four years ago, Jim? Lads, here's a fellow who can put 'em across. Well, well, well, Jim, I'm certainly glad to see you."

"How do things look, Congressman?" asked Jim.

"It's easy, Jim; it couldn't be better, Jim," replied the noble Eugene. "I'll win in a walk, Jim. * * * Well, well, how glad I am to see you. Well, well. * * * I suppose (in a burst of confidence) you're going to put in some good licks for me, Jim, at the polls next Tuesday, Jim?"

"I would, 'Gene," replied Jim heartily, "but I don't live in your district."

Secretary Bryan's Own Story of His Numerous Doubles

ALMOST every American statesman has his double, but Secretary of State Bryan seems to have double the number of doubles of any other man in Washington. There is a pleasant custom in many towns of having the double introduce Bryan when the Commoner comes to make a speech.

In discussing his lecture experiences with doubles, Bryan said that once, in a Nebraska town, his double was attired for the occasion in a silk hat and a high collar, but that he had on his usual slouch hat and low collar.

"But he was merciful," said the Secretary of State; "he made a short introduction of about twenty minutes—oh, I assure you, that is really moderate—and I arose.

"After I had been speaking about ten minutes a man walked into the hall and looked me over. He noticed my double, sitting on the platform, with high hat and choker. The man listened to me a minute; then he turned to a neighbor and growled:

"'Why don't that derned rooster set down and let Bill Bryan speak? Look at his clo'es. They're a disgrace to the town.'"

Predicament of a Lawyer Who Didn't Know How to Be Brief

WHEN Representative Hobson proposed the establishment of an official journal of the proceedings of Congress, Rome B. Pullen of Chicago, who stumped South Dakota for Woodrow Wilson in the presidential campaign and is on a visit to Washington, suggested that Hobson might learn in connection with the proposed journal that brevity was an admirable accomplishment, and he told a story to illustrate his point.

He dropped in at a murder trial at Deadwood. It had taken three weeks to get in the evidence. The Judge had become impatient, and ruled that the counsel for each side should have only 20 minutes for argument. The State's Attorney said his little speech in the time limit, but the attorney for the defense arose and began:

"I recall the singing birds and the wild flowers of my youth. I can see the little log cabin with its open fireplace, a curl of smoke from the chimney, a waving clothesline. There is the old barn with the gray mare giving me welcome. There is the pasture where the cows grazed in the good old summer time. It was the early springtime, gentlemen of the jury; the grass was turning green; the flowers were unfolding, but the air was crisp and the water cold. We boys were bantering one another about who could take the first plunge, and I lost. I stripped off my clothes, tensed my muscles and plunged in. It was an awful shock at first, gentlemen of the jury, but after a stroke or two'—

"'Mr. Attorney,' broke in the Judge, 'get out of that water and put your clothes on as quick as you can; your time is up.'"

Woman Street Inspector to Help Philadelphia to Keep Clean

FOR the first time in its history Philadelphia has a woman street inspector. Director Cooke of the Department of Public Works has appointed Mrs. Edith W. Pierce, secretary of the Home and School League, to the place, which was created a few months ago. Her salary is $1300 a year. Mrs. Pierce stood first on an eligible list of eight.

Mrs. Pierce's duty will be somewhat different from that of the men inspectors. Instead of supervising a district she covers the whole city, and pays particular attention to the condition of schools and homes. She organizes sectional associations for keeping the streets, sidewalks, homes and schools clean, and will visit them frequently, making addresses and instructing them in the ways of municipal cleanliness.

How a Lawyer Euchered a Doctor Out of His Girl

"THERE was a young doctor in a small New Hampshire town who dearly loved a New Hampshire lassie," said Senator Gallinger. "The doctor's practice was growing and he felt he was an eligible suitor. His rival was a young lawyer, but the lawyer had no practice, and the girl's family were thrifty folk. The lawyer, however, did not despair; he looked up the doctor's record, and up the porch at the girl's home one evening he asked the doctor:

"'How is poor Mrs. Prouty?'

"'She died last night,' said the unsuspecting doctor.

"'Too bad,' said the lawyer. 'And how is old Sergt. Medders?'

"'Died yesterday afternoon,' said the doctor curtly.

"'You were attending Jim Stubblefield, weren't you?' continued the lawyer. 'We all felt so sorry to hear you say you couldn't save Jim.'

"At this juncture the girl suggested to the doctor: 'Charlie, don't you calc'late yew'd make a better undertaker than a doctor?'

"Charlie fled—and never returned to the girl's house."

Senator Hitchcock Is a Devotee of the Scottish Game

SENATOR HITCHCOCK of Nebraska is a golf fan. It is said that he would sooner play golf than eat—sometimes.

"Hitchcock once made an engagement to meet a man at 11 o'clock in the morning," said a friend of the Nebraskan, "but went out to the links instead. The man with whom he had the engagement followed Hitchcock out to the links. Hitchcock was peeved, but he had made the engagement and he stopped playing and talked business. But after the man had gone, it was no use, the Senator was off his game."

Hitchcock used to play golf with Gov. Cox of Ohio when the latter was a Congressman, and Cox now has one of the Nebraskan's photographs bearing this inscription:

"Yours for golf, Democracy and eternal friendship."

It will be noticed that golf comes first.

Southern Mountain Women to Furnish White House Bride's Home

MRS. MARTHA SAYLOR GIELOW of Greensboro, Ala., founder and executive head of the Southern Industrial Educational Society and an author of wide celebrity, has been exhibiting with infectious enthusiasm at the offices of the society in Washington wonderful rugs, drapings, curtains and counterpanes made by women and girls of the Southern Mountains, which are to adorn the White House and the future home of Miss Jessie Wilson.

It was as long ago as 1874 that Mrs. Gielow, as a girl, went from her home in Greensboro to visit in the East Tennessee mountains. The literary aspect appealed to her first, but out of this developed the spirit of philanthropy that led her to devote her life to the industrial and educational advancement of the mountaineers. From that time she has written and spoken in their behalf and has done a great deal toward awakening the conscience of the nation in the mountaineers' behalf.

One of her first sketches, "Andy and the Moonshiner," made such a strong appeal that it has been called a tract. It is sold for the benefit of the people with whom it deals and the revenue from its sale has been one of the chief assets of the association.

Doctors Said He Had Dropsy

Some time ago I had an attack of grippe which finally settled in my kidneys and bladder. I doctored with the doctors and they claimed I had dropsy. I tried other remedies and got no relief from any of them. My condition was such that I was unable to work for about two months.

I was hardly able to turn over in bed. Seeing one of your Almanacs, I decided to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial and after taking several bottles was able to resume my work again. I cannot say too much in praise of your Swamp-Root as the results in my case were truly wonderful.

Yours very truly,

Cheap and Easily Made, but Ends a Cough Quickly

How to Make the Very Best Cough Remedy at Home. Fully Guaranteed.

This pint of cough syrup is easily made at home and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It relieves obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—quickly, and is splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, spasmodic croup and hoarseness.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this mixture, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful combination has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" MAKES A CROSS, SICK CHILD WELL AND HAPPY IN FEW HOURS.

Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has sour stomach, remember a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills. Give a teaspoonful and in just a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food, clogged in the bowels, passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless fruit laxative and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on each bottle.

Mother, keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Don't be fooled.—ADV.

HALF OF HUERTA'S CONGRESS MEETS; HE LOSES JUAREZ

Dictator Says, "I Shall Not Quit and Shall Continue Efforts at Pacification"—Church Party Senators Stay Away and Deputies Organize Amid Confusion.

Gen. Villa's Rebels, After Capturing Most Important Border City, Execute Several Federal Officers.

President Wilson and Bryan Await Definite Word—New Proposal Made by Huerta Falls Short of Demands.

Huerta's plan to convene Congress yesterday was only partially successful. The House of Deputies met and organized, but many Senators declined to attend the initial meeting of the new Senate.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan remained in their studies until late last night awaiting news from Mexico City concerning the proposed convening of Congress. It was reported in Washington that O'Shaughnessy has left Mexico City and is on his way to Vera Cruz.

The rebels captured the city of Juarez and several officers of the Federal forces who had been captured were executed.

Carranza, leader of the insurrectos, said at Nogales that he would not consider any proposal involving mediation by a foreign country.

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—President Huerta was unable to bring his new Congress fully to life today. The Chamber of Deputies met and effected temporary organization, but the Senate proved reactionary and the lack of a quorum prevented organization.

Gen. Huerta and his friends, however, profess to believe the greater part of their work is done, because the newly created lower House has formally and in their opinion legally met officially. The Senate, they think, can be induced to move into line by Monday, when the Senators are summoned to meet again.

Huerta's Cabinet Ministers were summoned to the National Palace this morning and went into a special session at noon today.

Long after the hour fixed for the Senate to convene today, the roll call showed only 21 members present, nearly all of these being Generals in the army. Twenty-nine are necessary for a quorum.

None of the Catholic Senators was present. This is understood to have been due to an agreement among them that the party should not participate in the senatorial session. These Senators are regarded as influential, and their refusal or failure to attend is regarded as indicative of the attitude of the church party.

Huerta Assumes Determined Front.

Regardless of rumors and notwithstanding the insistence of far-seeing friends, Gen. Huerta appeared more determined tonight than at any time during the past week to retain the presidency and carry out his plans of installing the substitute Congress.

Huerta reiterated that he continued to be the head of the Mexican Government, and the fact that he took no steps toward preventing the inauguration of the new Congress as demanded by the United States, was construed in the embassy and the legations as indicative of what may be expected in the future.

"No, no, I shall not quit," said Gen. Huerta. "I shall continue just as I have been doing to put forth my best efforts to bring about the pacification of the country, and thus fulfill the promise I made on taking office."

It was suggested to the President conditions might become such that foreigners, particularly Americans would be in imminent danger.

Gen. Huerta calmly agreed this might be so, but added:

"In that case I shall do all I can to protect them."

"True, the rabble of the city might rise, but I would not hesitate to apply the severest methods in my power to restore order and punish the guilty. At any rate I am resolved to continue in the attempt to carry out my program of pacification."

The meeting of the new House of Deputies reflected the chaotic condition brought about by the dissolu-

"Blessed if I know," replied Jiggs. "It doesn't seem so very exciting to me."

TAFT DOUBTS VALUE OF DOCTORS' EXAMINATIONS

Cites Morse Pardon Case to Show How Physicians Can Be Mistaken.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 15.—Former President Taft, in a lecture tonight at the high school on, "The President of the United States: What He Can and Cannot Do," referred to the pardon he granted to Charles W. Morse, although he did not mention the name of the New York banker. Mr. Taft, after reviewing the pardoning powers of the President, said:

"I had two cases come before me. It was represented that both convicts were near death, and I instituted an investigation to find out the truth through the army medical corps.

"Examinations were made, watches were established over the sick men, and it was reported to me they were both in the last stages of a fatal disease. One of them died soon after he was released from the penitentiary.

"The other of them is apparently in excellent health and seeking to re-establish himself in the world in which he committed a penitentiary offense. This shakes one's faith in expert examinations."

UNDER DOCTOR'S CARE, SEES FOOTBALL GAME

Edwardsville Quarterback, Injured, Enjoys Defeat of Visiting Team.

Seated in a carriage with a doctor on one side of him and a nurse on the other, while the rain beat down, Willard Weber, halfback on the Edwardsville High School football team, witnessed their game with Staunton yesterday afternoon.

He had just left the field at noon following an inspection of the gridiron with other players, when he was run down by an automobile delivery truck, which passed across his legs, incapacitating him from playing. He was taken to his home on Union street and arrangements were being made to bulletin the plays by wire from the grounds to his bedside, when the surgeons finally consented to permit his being carried to the field. He saw Edwardsville win the game, 18 to 6.

CONNECTICUT IS BUSY DODGING QUEER LAWS

Anti-Cigar Statute for Street Cars Is a Surprise, Even to the Legislators.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 15.—Some laws passed by the last General Assembly and now effective are proving a surprise even to the Legislators. One law provides strict punishment for any person who carries a lighted cigar or pipe into a street car. It has already caught many smokers, most of whom had unconsciously failed to extinguish their cigars.

The conductor has handed the offender a printed warning, taking his name, and later a police officer has served a summons. Legislators express surprise that they ever voted for such a law.

AVIATORS CONTEST IN HEAD DOWN FLIGHTS

Frenchman Sails Inverted Machine 20 Seconds; Englishman Stays 35 Seconds.

VERSAILLES, France, Nov. 15.—Flying head downward and turning somersaults in the air are becoming common in the French aviation field. Hanouille, a French aeroplanist, flew over the aviation field here today for 20 seconds with his machine inverted and then made two revolutions.

Hucks, an Englishman, to outdo Hanouille, flew 35 seconds with his head downward and accomplished four consecutive loops.

LAWYER HARRIS, WHO WED BRIDE OF FORGER, DIES

He Succumbs Few Hours After Woman Sues Dulaney for Divorce.

The matrimonial tangle in which Mrs. Bertha May Rose Dulaney married two men within three weeks came to a tragic conclusion with the death of the second husband, Theron Harris, at 6:20 o'clock yesterday evening at his home, 6120 Easton avenue. He was ill with pneumonia, and left his sick-bed Tuesday to marry Mrs. Dulaney at St. Charles. The exposure was thought to have aggravated his condition.

She filed suit for divorce yesterday against Aquilla H. Dulaney, whom she married after a short courtship, Oct. 20, and who, she afterward discovered, was an ex-convict and forger. He is now under arrest in St. Louis for forgery. She was arrested on a charge of bigamy, and on her release Friday hastened to Harris' home and remained beside him until his death. She is a trained nurse.

She met Harris three years ago in Wyoming and was attracted to him, she said, by his high ideals. They corresponded, and at last she came to St. Louis to marry him.

But at the Hamilton Hotel she became acquainted with Dulaney, who passed himself under the name of Frank A. Chapman, a successful business man. When he told her he was about to start on a trip to South America she consented to marry him.

They separated a week ago, when she learned of his criminal record. She confessed all to Harris, who was an attorney, and was advised by him that her marriage was illegal, as Dulaney was a felon and had given a false name in the marriage certificate. So, without obtaining a divorce, she became Harris' wife.

Without her knowledge, detectives followed them to St. Charles to get evidence for a charge of bigamy. She was released when Prosecuting Attorney Daudt of St. Charles decided he would not press the case.

Harris formerly took a prominent part in the community affairs of Wellston. He was attorney for a party of citizens who attempted to obtain the incorporation of the town, which was defeated by a decision of the Supreme Court.

SCOTT'S WIDOW REFUSES ROYAL BENEVOLENCE

Thinks Fund for Antarctic Heroes' Memorial Should Have Given Her a Competence.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Lady Scott, the widow of the Antarctic explorer, was offered recently a suite of rooms in the Hampton Court Palace by King George. These suites are given for life to the widows of eminent men who are unable to maintain their position with their private means.

To the surprise of the King, Lady Scott declined the offer on the ground that she could not pursue her art as a sculptress at Hampton Court. Her refusal is understood to be really a protest against the scale on which the fund raised in memory of her husband and his fellow heroes has been distributed as between them and the permanent memorial. She thinks the fund should have been so divided as to place her above the necessity of being an object of royal benevolence.

HAD $922.80 AND GEMS, ASKED TO BE LOCKED UP

Traveling Man, Saying He Was Crazy, Accommodated by E. St. Louis Police.

A well-dressed man, who said that he was crazy and that he had a thousand dollars in his pocket, entered the East St. Louis Police Station last evening at 6:30 and asked to be locked up. He said he was G. W. Burgess, 35 years old, a traveling salesman of Nashville, Ill. He had $922.80 and a gold watch, with a diamond set. He wore a diamond tie pin and a diamond ring.

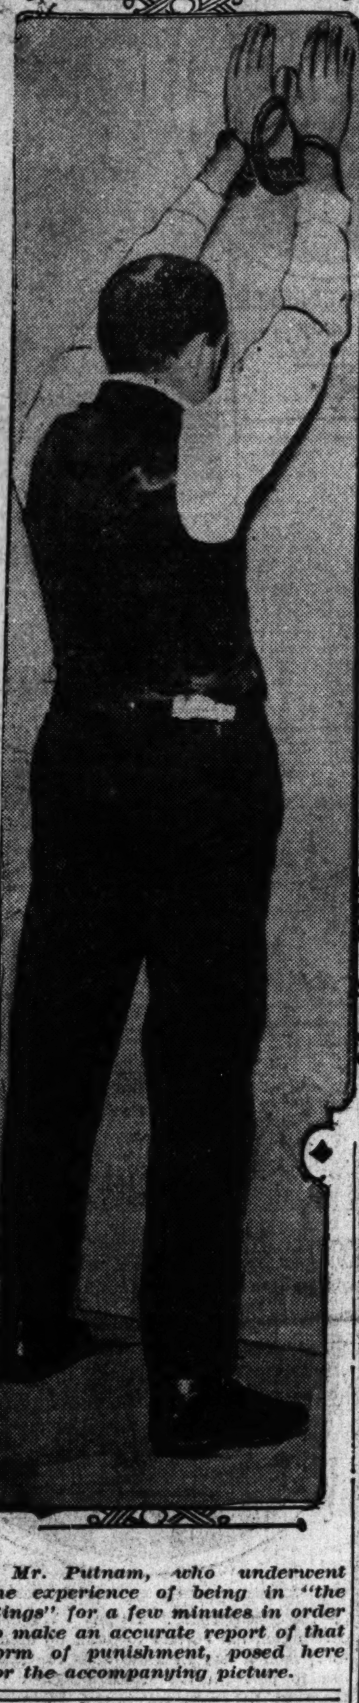
After remaining in a cell nearly four hours, he was released under the care of Elmer Bowman and Albert Watts, real estate dealers, who knew him in Nashville, and who promised to take care of him until tomorrow morning, when he is to return to the station for his money.

MISS MARGARET WILSON'S ENGAGEMENT IS DENIED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—In view of a circulated report that Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of President Wilson, was engaged to be married to Dr. Gilbert Horrax of Mont Clair, N. J., who will be one of the ushers at the wedding of Miss Jessie Wilson, the White House today requested publication of the following statement:

"The reported engagement of Miss Margaret Wilson and Dr. Gilbert Horrax is positively denied. Miss Wilson has never even seen or met Dr. Horrax."

Warden McClung of State Penitentiary; How Prisoners Are Punished in "the Rings"



Mr. Putnam, who underwent the experience of being in "the Rings" for a few minutes in order to make an accurate report of that form of punishment, posed here for the accompanying picture.

D.C. McCLUNG

Two Minutes in "the Rings" Was Enough for Investigator

I HAD Deputy Warden Gilvin and Guard Coughlin handcuff me to the ring in the wall of one of the dark cells like the one on which Willis was hung to make him confess where he got whisky within the walls.

The right cuff is first snapped onto the right wrist. The left cuff (attached to the right with a short chain) is next pushed through the ring (diameter about four inches), the left cuff is then snapped onto the left wrist. I found I could grasp the top of the ring with my hands, thus relieving the arm muscles of the job of holding up the weight of the arms.

I could shift my weight from one leg to the other and could lean over against the wall on either side of the cell (four feet wide by nine feet deep by seven feet high) and shift the strain in a new way. Less than two minutes of it was ample for me; I am no glutton. I don't believe it is a proper punishment to inflict on any man, for any purpose whatever.—Frank Putnam.

Whip Used in Prison Is Half an Inch Thick

The whip used in the prison is a leather strap, half an inch thick and three inches wide by three feet long, attached to a wooden handle.

It would be easily possible, with this whip, applied to the naked back of a convict, to inflict very severe punishment, breaking the flesh and drawing blood—although Deputy Warden Gilvin, as stated in an earlier dispatch, assures me he has never applied the lash with so much severity as that.

ENDING OF OWN LIFE BY BOSTON EDITOR SECRET FOR A YEAR

Only Intimate Friends Knew How Frank B. Tracy Jumped From Steamer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—First details were learned tonight of the tragic death by suicide on Thanksgiving night, 1912, of Frank Basil Tracy, at that time editor-in-chief of the conservative Boston Transcript.

Tracy, according to newspaper reports tonight, jumped from the Providence-New York line steamer Tennessee, but for some unknown reason the facts about his act have been suppressed. No newspaper in Boston, at least, published the story prior to tonight and only a few intimate friends knew that Tracy was dead.

On the Transcript the general understanding among the employes was that Tracy had been given an indefinite leave of absence because of ill-health.

Tracy, it appears, realized at the time that his mind was failing and that the insane asylum would inevitably be his fate. Thanksgiving Day he left the Butler Hospital, Providence, where he had been confined, and took the New York boat. Letters found in his stateroom the following morning told of his act. In them he said that had he not taken his life he would in time have murdered those near and dear to him before taking his own life.

Tracy's nervous breakdown just previous to his death was caused partly by the suicide of his friend, Kellog Durland, the author, who committed suicide in the South Station the previous year. Until he entered the hospital, Tracy had worked under great mental strain, most of the time against his physician's advice.

PLAN TO INCREASE BABY'S 'BIOLOGICAL CAPITAL' PROPOSED

Committee to Take Up Mrs. J. H. Hammond's Suggestion With Breeders' Association.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A national society for the promotion of practical eugenics was suggested by Mrs. John Hays Hammond at today's meeting of the eugenics section of the American Association for the Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality.

A committee was appointed, on motion of Prof. Roswell Johnson of the University of Pittsburg, to meet the Eugenics Committee of the American Breeders' Association to discuss the question.

Mrs. Hammond declared that, with an organization such as she proposed, "individual and governmental action could be secured which within a generation would reduce infant mortality to a minimum."

"The greatest need of today," she added, "is instruction how to increase the biological capital with which a baby enters on life's battle. More than half the processions of white coffins in Washington are assured before the birth or at the hour of birth of their little occupants."

Sentiment and romance of marriage is not destroyed by eugenics, according to Dr. Evangeline W. Young of Boston.

Dr. J. Whitridge Williams of Baltimore will be president of the association for the next year. Homer Folks of New York was chosen president-elect, and will succeed Dr. Williams at the conclusion of next year's session.

Absent-mindedness isn't always the cause of lost articles, but Post-Dispatch wants are almost always the means of restoring them.

CONVICTS ARE NOT ALLOWED TO READ THE POST-DISPATCH

Warden McClung Thinks Criticism of Methods Makes the Prisoners Mutinous.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 15.—The Post-Dispatch and other St. Louis afternoon newspapers which have attacked the management of the State Penitentiary, because of the "stringing up" of Steve Willis for 20 days and the subsequent developments, have been barred from the Penitentiary and convicts will not be permitted to read them again "until the present excitement subsides."

This was the announcement tonight at the Penitentiary. Warden D. C. McClung says the editorials attacking himself and other prison officials, the attacks upon the methods of discipline, the demands for investigations, and the publication of letters from convicts criticising the management of the institution, have stirred up a mutinous sentiment among the convicts which makes it unsafe to permit them to read these papers at this time.

Tomorrow probably only the two morning papers of St. Louis and two Kansas City newspapers will be permitted to go to the convicts.

GOES TO SLEEP ON TRACK

John Hagerman owes his life to the quick work of the engineer on the Big Four flyer, who stopped the engine in time to keep it from running over him near Union Station in Alton, yesterday.

Hagerman went to sleep on the track and was not awakened until the train had struck him gently and rolled him over. He was bruised slightly.

INSPECTION SHOWS PENITENTIARY IS A DISGRACE TO STATE

More Than Half the Cells for Men Prisoners Are Found to Be Unfit for Human Occupancy

NO PROVISION IS MADE FOR EXERCISE OF ANY KIND

Sixteen Hundred Convicts Are Sold Into Service of Contractors and Are Punished When They Fail to Complete Daily "Task"

By Frank Putnam,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The Post-Dispatch sent Mr. Putnam to Jefferson City to inspect the State penitentiary and describe the conditions there. Mr. Putnam is well qualified for the work by reason of a similar investigation in the Texas penitentary which he reported and which resulted in wholesome reforms in that State.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 15.—These are the conditions which call for reformation in the Missouri State Penitentiary:

1—Approximately 1900 of the 2350 male inmates are lodged in cell houses unfit for human occupancy.

2—The whole 2350 are crowded together in the cells (two to four men in each cell), thus making the prison a finishing school in criminal training.

3—Lack of sanitary appliances and of ventilation in four of the five cell buildings must inevitably tend to impair the health of the men lodged there, and to brutalize those who enter the prison with any ordinary conception of decency in housing.

4—No provision whatever is made for exercise at sports of any kind, except that twice a year, on Christmas and the Fourth of July, the men are given the freedom of the very small prison yard and a few of them engage in boxing.

5—Over 1600 of the men are sold into the service of prison labor contractors. They are worked nine hours daily—7 to noon, 1 p. m. to 4 p. m. Each man is required in each contract shop to do a fixed quantity of work daily and is subject to be strung up by the wrists, or locked overnight in the dark cell, or both, if he fails to do the "task" set for him.

What the Prison Needs.

The penitentiary consists of a group of buildings—five cell houses for men, one for women, several factory buildings, a dining hall and chapel, a hospital and minor buildings used by the prison system—all crowded onto something less than 15 acres of ground. The prison needs:

1—New, modern, decently equipped cell houses to accommodate 1900 men today and provide for a normal increase in five years to 2100, giving one cell to each man. This means 2100 cells, to cost from $1,750,000 to $2,000,000.

2—A larger ground area within the walls, affording space for a baseball ground and other athletic exercises, which prison experts agree pay for themselves by keeping the men healthy and fit to work, and by making discipline easier and less expensive.

3—Abolition of the contract labor system, which makes profits for a few contractors, robs the men of any chance to earn anything for the support of their dependent families, forces free labor to compete with "sweated" prison labor, but produces a revenue insufficient to support the institution.

On Thursday, with Deputy Warden Gilvin, I visited every building inside prison walls. At the end of that trip I was ready to admit that, considering the horrible conditions under which most of the men are housed; their utter lack of opportunity for vigorous play of any kind; their overcrowding and the indiscriminate mixing of young and old beginners and old offenders, the small number of men calling for punishment is remarkable. It confirms the opinion one hears from everybody outside the walls at Jefferson City (I was not permitted to ask any questions inside the walls) that Mr. Gilvin is a man of quite extraordinary ability as a prison disciplinarian.

As an institution for punishment, Missouri's penitentiary is grimly complete; as an institution for reformation, it is a ghastly failure.

As it stands it is a severer commentary than any man could write upon the neglect by successive Legislatures and Governors to perform one of the duties with which they were charged by the people who elected them. It indicts the political system under which Missouri's Democratic and Republican leaders have tacitly agreed to regard the Penitentiary payroll as a part of the spoils of the victorious party in each State election. It registers the successful opposition of prison labor contractors to past efforts at prison reform. It is claimed by some State officers that it represents the unwillingness of the people of Missouri to tax themselves to provide better prison conditions.

Secretary of State Roach said to me this morning:

"Deputy Warden Gilvin is the best prison official in this country. Experts acquainted with his work all say so. It is recognized by everybody here. There hasn't been a time in a dozen years when the Legislature would not have given him any prison improvement he cared to ask for."

"Why, then," I asked, "was not Mr. Gilvin appointed Warden, so that he could have asked for prison improvements directly, and not subject to the will of Wardens not acquainted with prison management and who were appointed for political reasons?"

"He would be, if I were Governor," Mr. Roach replied, "and he ought to be."

He has not been appointed Warden, of course, for the reason that he is only a man who has spent his life in prison management and is skilled in it, and is not a professional politician, influential in electing Governors.

An hour later I asked Mr. Gilvin if it were true that the Legislature at any time in the last dozen years would have given him any prison betterments he cared to ask for.

Gilvin is a man of few words, spoken softly. "For over a dozen years," he said, "I have been asking for a new cell house."

"Is it your belief," I asked, "that the morals, health and discipline of the men would be much better if each had a cell to himself?"

"It would be much better," he replied. "I favor it." So do all prison

PRISONERS PUT IN "THE RINGS" FOR FAILURE TO PERFORM ALLOTTED TASKS FOR CONTRACTORS

experts who regard prisons as primarily institutions for reformation, not punishment or private profit.

Yet the Missouri Legislature, three years ago, making a preliminary appropriation for one new cell house, and the Board of Prison Inspectors planning that new cell house, have provided that it shall be built to lodge two men in each cell. Foundations for this new cell house have just been begun. It is hoped the building may be finished late next year. It will accommodate the men now confined in two of the oldest cell houses, which are to be torn down.

The 2350 male prisoners today are lodged in five cell houses—A, B, C, D and E halls, as they are called. (The 67 women prisoners live in a wing of the administration building). Taking these five halls in the order in which they were erected, the following is a brief description of them:

"C" Hall: Erected in 1836. Has 120 cells in three tiers, one above another. Each cell is a mere gravelike hole in a solid rock wall, four feet wide, seven feet deep and seven feet high to the top of the arched ceiling. Air enters only through a heavily barred door at the front of the cell. This hall has no sanitary toilets, no running water, no baths. It is occupied at present by 220 men. The only equipment for sanitary use in a "C" Hall cell is a bucket. The men in this hall, I was told, can bathe themselves if they so desire by filling the cell bucket with water when they go in at night and using it for that purpose; or, it was further explained, they can bathe in the shops where they work. I saw baths in two of the cell houses, (E and A), but none in the factories. Each C hall cell has an incandescent electric light suspended from its ceiling.

"B" Hall: Erected in 1857, has 232 cells, like those in C Hall, and housing approximately two men to the cell. Has no toilets, running water or baths.

"A hall: Erected in 1868, has 158 cells, with four men to the cell, two bunks on each side, one above the other. Cells 8 feet wide, 14 feet deep and 8 feet high. A hall has no toilets, nor running water wash basins in its cells, but has shower baths.

"D" hall: Erected in 1876—same size cells and same lack of toilets, running water and baths as B and C halls.

"E" hall: Erected, I was told, during Gov. Stone's administration; modern in type, three stories high, with two tiers of cells in each story. Its 272 cells house 544 men. Each cell is 8 feet wide, 8 feet deep and 8 feet high. Set into the rear wall of each cell is a stationary toilet, shut off from the cell by a tight-fitting door. Each cell has in one corner a stationary wash stand with running water. The hall is ventilated by the fan system, pumping in fresh air. There are two shower baths on each floor. The men are required to bathe twice a week in summer, once weekly in cold weather, and may bathe oftener if they wish to.

Briefly, only one of the five cell buildings in which Missouri convicts are lodged has adequate sanitation and ventilation, and it houses exactly twice as many men as it should—that is, two men in each cell. The other four halls, housing over 1900 men, are all "bucket" halls; three of them are more like grave vaults than sleeping quarters, so lacking in air and the most primitive decencies that any man outside the prison who should house his family that way would be promptly arrested, and all of the halls are grossly overcrowded.

Young Prisoners Corrupted.

Lodging two or more men in one cell, without separating the young and experienced from the old and degraded convicts, means that the latter will corrupt the former; will teach them new criminal knowledge—the professional criminal is always seeking apt pupils—will induce them to become users of drugs and whisky smuggled into the prison; will ruin many of them by teaching or coercing them to submit to nameless personal indignities, etc.

Such a system of double, triple or quadruple occupancy of prison cells makes a prison a perfect school of hideous vices and criminality. It balks the efforts of the chaplain and teachers—where any are employed—and the good intentions of humane prison officials, to improve the health and character of young men sent to prison. All prison officials try to prevent the smuggling of drugs and whisky into the walls, but few make any effort, when the cells are overcrowded, to prevent far worse and more corrupting offenses which are habitual among a large percentage of the inmates—especially the long-term men—in all prisons.

Inasmuch as all prison experts agree that it is cheaper financially—putting it on that low basis—for a State to cure a young man's criminal tendencies in one term than it is to make that term confirm him in crime and insure his becoming a professional lawbreaker, the cheapest prison investment any State can make—on the financial side—is to provide separate cells for the convicts.

Need of Daily Exercise.

And, inasmuch as space and provision for daily indulgence in vigorous outdoor sports, even if for no more than a half hour, is held to be quite as beneficial to the health, the morals and the temper of the prisoners as religious or secular instruction, the investment needed to make this provision in the Missouri Penitentiary would be amply justified on the financial basis alone, to say nothing of the State's purpose and duty to better, if it can, the character of its prisoners.

No Provision for Education.

The Missouri penitentiary makes no provision for educating the illiterate prisoners within its walls, except as one or two chaplains may find time from their other duties to instruct a few prisoners who ask for help. There is no schoolroom, no school equipment of any kind, no classes and no time set apart for such instruction. And there are a good many illiterates among the [illegible] prisoners—youths who have never had opportunity to learn even to read and write.

Here, as in other respects, it is made evident that the paramount purpose of the system is to punish the convicts and make them self-supporting, not to teach them how they may redeem their mistakes and live better lives when their terms expire.

The penitentiary has some commendable features. The food is of good quality, well cooked, and served in liberal portions on good graniteware plates (with cup, knife, fork and spoon), in well-lighted, clean and well ventilated dining halls.

The religious services on Sunday are attended by 800 to 1000 men—attendance is not compulsory, and the services are rendered more attractive by a prison orchestra.

The prison library contains over 8000 volumes, ranging from the latest fiction to works on art, government, law, science, philosophy, religion, etc. A catalogue of the books is printed in book form. A copy of this catalogue, with a library card, is given to each convict. Each man is permitted to draw one book weekly. Their time for reading is between 5 p. m., when they return to their cells from the dining hall after supper, and 9 p. m., when lights go out. Some of the men make good use of the library's opportunities.

No Lingering Tuberculosis Cases.

Unavoidably such foul housing as I have described above weakens the lungs of men of tubercular tendency. Pharmacist R. H. Kirkpatrick, assistant to Dr. McCutcheon, in charge of the prison hospital, was explaining to me the prison method of dealing with tuberculosis cases, when I asked him if convicts who had the disease in a lingering form were allowed to work in the shops and occupy cells with uninfected men.

"We don't have any lingering cases here," he replied. "They go off quick inside the walls."

Then he added that it is the custom today to parole consumptive convicts in time to allow them to die among friends. This, he explained, relieved the State of the cost of buying caskets, and as the friends usually sent the dying convict money to come home on, the State incurred no expense and got rid of an expensive burden. It was peculiarly interesting, not to say in a way fascinating, after a while, to see how this central and dominant idea of economy-at-any-cost regulated the opinions of everybody in any way connected with the system from top to bottom.

Deaths From Tuberculosis.

Mr. Kirkpatrick supplied the following list of men who have died of tuberculosis in the prison hospital during the past four months:

W. Scott of Pettis County, sentenced for life for murder; convicted Nov. 20, 1909, and died July 5, 1913.

L. Jackson of Saline County, three years for forgery; sentenced Dec. 4, 1911, and died Aug. 18, 1913.

William Spaugh of Iron County; life term for murder; convicted July 7, 1907, and died Aug. 25, 1913.

William Harris of St. Louis County, 25 years for murder; convicted Aug. 9, 1913, and died Sept. 27, 1913.

J. Poerter of Randolph County; 2 years for assault; convicted Oct. 30, 1913, and died Nov. 6, 1913.

Ed Wells of Butler County; 5 years for robbery; convicted Feb. 3, 1912, and died July 30, 1913.

Mr. Kirkpatrick supplied also the following list of consumptive prisoners paroled during the past four months:

John Brown of St. Louis, 5 years for assault; John Nesby of Butler County, 7 years for grand larceny and robbery; Lee Rollins of St. Louis, 10 years for murder; Ed Moran of St. Louis, 7 years for larceny from person; B. Carroll of Howell County, 4 years for grand larceny; James Crawley of Buchanan County, 2 years for obtaining money under false pretenses; Ed Rogers of Reynolds County, 3 years for crime not stated; Tom Hatfield of Jasper County, grand larceny; Ed Holmes of Jackson County, 4 years for burglary; J. L. Hathaway of Jackson County, 15 years for burglary; A. Walker of St. Louis, 15 years for murder; E. McAdory of Jackson County, 20 years for murder; W. Williams of Greene County, 4 years for robbery.

Many Hurt in Shops.

The hospital is a well-equipped building, the newest in the enclosure. The prison doctor told me convicts had two chances daily to ask for medical attendance, first in the morning when summoned for work, and again at any time during the working day.

The very large number of men reporting to the hospital for surgical treatment, mostly, it was explained, for small injuries, suggests that the machinery in the shops is not as well guarded as it should be to prevent such accidents. During October, 1913, 837 such cases were recorded on the hospital books. During the same month in 1912, 1001 were given surgical treatment.

On Nov. 13, 1913, 66 men out of the 650 worked by the State in its own shops and other services reported for sick leave, but only four were found to have ailments sufficient to warrant excusing them from duty. On the same day 48 out of the more than 1600 employed in contract labor factories reported for sick leave and only four were excused.

In all, 2102 cases reported for surgical and medical treatment during October, 1913, but only 162 days of work all told were lost. The doctor explained that no man is forced to work "when he is really sick," but that a good many have to work when they are merely "not feeling well," just as, he said, "folks have to do out of prisons."

The doctor said he examines every man on entering the prison. If any man is found in need of treatment, he is given it; if his ailment is contagious, he is isolated in the hospital until cured. Tuberculosis patients are not lodged with uninfected men in the cells or allowed to work in the shops, but are isolated in the hospital and permitted to take exercise, daily, in the tiny hospital yard, until it is seen they are near to death. Then, as Pharmacist Kirkpatrick explained, they are sent home to save expense to the State.

Chief among the contract labor factories in the prison are:

J. F. Sullivan Saddletree Co., employing 125 men.

L. F. Parker Boot & Shoe Co., owned by the Selz-Schwab Co., employing 200 men.

Ruwart Saddlery Co., making harness, employing 35 men.

A. Priesmeyer Shoe Co., making shoes for women and children, employing 175 men.

Economy Stay Co., making stays for shoes out of leather scraps, employing 50 men.

As stated elsewhere in these dispatches, these contractors, for $4.20 per week per man, get labor, factory space heat, light and power, with the State's added guarantee, enforced by its punishment cells, that the men it supplies shall each do a full day's work for the 70 cents the State gets from the contractor.

No part of this, of course goes to support the convicts' dependent wives and children outside the walls; it does not even suffice to pay the running expenses of the prison. The Legislature makes a biennial appropriation of $90,000, contingent on need, to supply the deficiency.

These companies, I was told, or nearly all of them, have been using Missouri convict labor for periods of from 12 to over 30 years. They do not go and come with changes of State administrations; they seem to be able to deal equally well with Republican and Democratic prison boards and wardens.

The State's own industries conducted within the prison walls include an ice plant with 21 tons daily capacity, supplying ice for the prison and the State Capitol; a machine shop making repairs for all prison machinery; an electric plant supplying power and light for all prison buildings and grounds, and light for the State Capitol, the State Supreme Court building and the Governor's mansion, and a binding twine factory, in which is made twine which, under the law, cannot be sold outside of Missouri.

Local Feeling Not Critical.

In Jefferson City, as in any other small city in which a large State institution is situated, the local feeling toward it is the opposite of critical. You can almost hear Jefferson City folks whispering "Hush, hush" with reference to this latest outcry against prison practices. When such an institution is situated in a State Capital, the State officials, from top to bottom, invariably share his state of mind.

I had the pleasure (because I always like the paper I serve to pick its enemies with some honorable care), of hearing the Post-Dispatch "cussed out" in official circles everywhere I went during my three days in Jefferson City, for its severe editorial criticism of the hanging up of Steve Willis.

I found a curiously interesting unwillingness, or inability on the official part, to comprehend that the Post-Dispatch's editorial criticism was not so much aimed at wrist-hanging prisoners as a mere means of punishing them for prison offenses (although that was, in my opinion, properly denounced, when too long extended, as inhumane), as it was at such punishment inflicted to force a confession from an accused man.

The official set felt that such criticism was "maudlin" and "sentimental"; that it displayed ignorance of prison management and of the need to enforce an iron discipline over convicts. My suggestion that it might eventually become necessary for the people of Missouri to recognize reformation as a higher duty than punishment evoked dissent from several cultured and distinguished gentlemen holding high State offices. They were not prepared to say that the State would have to go that far. "A penitentiary," I was several times assured, "is no Sunday school"—a quite needless assurance to any man who has been in at the investigation of several prisons.

McClung Resents Criticism.

Even Warden McClung, new in his office and expected therefore to be more amenable to public opinion than an older prison manager, was very hot under the collar over it all. He told me, when I visited him Wednesday afternoon to get permission to tour the prison the next day, that he had placed the Post-Dispatch's article in the hands of his lawyers to sue for libel if he found he had ground for a case; that he thought the Post-Dispatch's articles were outrageous, being liable to breed a riot with loss of life in the prison. He said he had about made up his mind to tell all the newspapers to "go to hell" and have nothing more to do with them. He bitterly resented, in short, public criticism of his management, as a public servant, of a public institution. On second thought he decided to let me go through, with the limitation that I must not try to interview any of the hardened convicts.

Inasmuch as I knew the kind and condition of the buildings and shops would declare the status of the prison more eloquently than any amount of verbal testimony by convicts or guards, and as, moreover, I knew there was no hope of anybody less than a committee of the State Legislature bringing to light inside prison data which the officials might wish to conceal, we made peace on the Warden's basis.

On Friday, when I proposed again to go inside the walls and to interview Steve Willis, the Warden was out and his subordinates were not at liberty to admit me. I finally located him on the telephone shortly before noon Saturday, and asked him to permit the making of a photograph of a man, preferably one of the prisoners, hung up on a ring in one of the dark cells—just to show Post-Dispatch readers exactly what the punishment is like. Mr. McClung very promptly and decidedly said he couldn't permit it. He really does not believe the punishment is either brutal or inhuman, but he thought it might create more excitement among the prisoners, who hear of all such publications whether they are permitted to see the papers or not. So a photograph was made under other circumstances, which is given with this article, and which faithfully reproduces the scene at the rear wall of the dark cell.

Women's Ward One of Best.

The women's ward is one of the best in the prison. They are shut off entirely from the remainder of the penitentiary. Their cells are large, well aired and lighted, and their food is substantial and plentiful. They have access to sanitary toilets and baths, and have the same use of the prison library that the male convicts enjoy. They are directly under control of women matrons and guards.

There are 67 women in the prison, a majority of them negresses. Their ward has cell space for 90, two in each cell. They were at luncheon when I visited their ward, the colored women grouped on one side of the dining room, the white women on the other.

Eight to 10 Punishments Daily.

Steve Willis is a second term burglar and he may be an all-round bad man, but he proved his possession not only of a splendid physique and an insensitive nervous organization, but of a mighty game spirit as well, when he submitted to be hung up there hours at a stretch, day after day, rather than "snitch" on his accomplices in the whisky smuggling. That he should have repudiated his "confession," given in order to escape more of the ordeal, was only what might have been expected of such a man.

There are 38 dark cells, each with an iron ring in its rear wall, in a double row, back to back, in the Isolation Hall of the penitentiary. Deputy Warden Gilvin told me he had to hang up eight to 10 men a day in these cells for failure to perform the tasks assigned to them in the contract prison factories and for other infractions of the rules. He said the men were handcuffed to the rings at 6 p. m., and left hanging there until 9 p. m., when they were let down and locked in the cells to sleep on the floor during the night.

I found in each of the dark cells a board the width of a door leaning against the wall. Gilvin explained that the prisoner is expected to lay this board down on the floor and sleep on it, to escape contact with the concrete. I saw no concrete pillow, mentioned by "A Prisoner" in his letter to the Post-Dispatch, and asked Gilvin where he kept the pillows. He said the prison had nothing of the kind.

The largest number of convicts hung in the dark cells on any one night, he said, was 15; the average number is about eight. Most of them pay this penalty for failing or refusing to do the work set for them to do in the contract labor shops.

How "Tasks" Are Fixed.

I asked Gilvin who fixed the "task," the daily portion of work required of each convict employed in these contract shops. He said the task was fixed by the Board of Prison Inspectors, on the recommendation of the Warden, who gauged it after consulting with his assistants and with the civilian foreman employed by the contractors.

Most of the men, he said, do their "task" easily; some get through with it anywhere from 2 to 3 o'clock in the afternoon and a good many have to keep hustling during the nine-hour day to get it done by quitting time—4 p. m. Some of those who finish ahead of time do extra work, by which they earn a little money to buy luxuries not provided by the prison.

Some of the men come back time after time for failing to do the allotted task. These men are regarded as chronic insurgents, or malingerers.

I asked Gilvin on whose authority the men were thus punished. He said they were first reported by the civilian foreman to the prison guards on duty in the shop. The guard looks into the case. If he thinks the complaint is justified he takes the offender to the deputy warden. The latter gives the accused man a hearing and hears also the guard's account of the matter. If the deputy warden is convinced the convict has wilfully failed to do his work or has wilfully damaged goods or machinery, he orders the man sent to a ring in a dark cell, there to be hung three hours and to spend the night sleeping on the board on the cell floor.

Gilvin, being asked to show me every implement of punishment in the prison, produced the prison whip. This, he said, with the wall rings and the dark cells, constitutes the prison's whole equipment of this character.

He assured me that, while there has been a good deal of whipping done in the Missouri penitentiary in past years and he has to whip a good many men himself, but that he has never drawn blood nor broken the skin on any whipped convict's back.

Four Men Whipped Under McClung.

He said only four men had been whipped since Warden McClung took office, April 1, 1913; that these four were negroes and each had committed a deadly assault on a fellow prisoner with knife or scissors.

When a prisoner is whipped here, he said, the man is stripped naked to the waist, handcuffed with rubber cuffs to his cell door and the lash laid on his naked back.

Gilvin said he never laid on more than six or eight strokes of the whip, and had more than once stopped with the first stroke, being able, he said, to tell after one stroke whether or not his man could stand to be whipped.

It is notorious that wherever, in any prison, the labor of the convicts has been farmed out to contractors, these men have exercised a powerful influence upon the discipline as well as the political control of the prison. They are, as in the case of the Missouri Penitentiary, the source of the revenue, which chiefly supports the prison and lifts its burden of expense off the shoulders of the taxpayers. They buy labor, factory space, heat, light and power from the State far cheaper (even considering the character of the labor,) than their competitors can buy these things outside the prison walls and if they employ enough convicts their profits are very large.

Temptation Is Very Strong.

The temptation to use a portion of these easy profits in procuring favorable contracts, in influencing legislators and others influential in politics to oppose abolition of the contract labor system and even, sometimes, in stiffening the determination of officials inside the walls to force the convicts to deliver a full day's work must be very strong. Indeed, the records of investigations of prison contracting in some other states shows that this temptation was too strong for them to resist it.

I do not for a minute suggest that anything of this dishonorable character figures in contracts made by the Warden and Board of Inspectors of the Missouri Penitentiary with the prison contractors who have been operating in these walls, some of them for more than 30 years. I do not know of any other contractors and have met no officials now in charge who seem to be capable of such dishonesty.

Yet any student of political politics is well aware that such deals are often put over by men in the background, without the knowledge and without the conscious consent of the men formally in charge of the prison.

Ripe for Investigation.

An investigating committee appointed by the Legislature might very likely find that today no punishment more severe than those depicted by Gilvin are being inflicted; they might find that, despite the curiously low price at which the State is selling its prison labor, factory space, power, light and heat to the contractors, no taint of graft affects these contracts; but they would certainly find, if they were men competent to their task, that the Missouri Penitentiary as a whole is a disgrace to the State and to civilization—granting that the men now in charge of it are doing the best they can with the materials at their command.

BARKER DECLARES THERE'LL BE NO PRISON INQUIRY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 15.—Attorney-General Barker said today that the Board of Prison Inspectors would determine later whether another form of punishment should be substituted for the "rings" at the penitentiary, but there would be no formal investigation.

He said he saw no necessity for an inquiry into the Steve Willis case, for the reason that the board is thoroughly familiar with every angle of the matter. There are no other matters, he said, demanding an investigation, so far as he is aware.

"I do not see that an investigation now could serve any useful purpose," he declared, "and it might lead to a dangerous riot or insurrection. The convicts, I am informed, are in a state bordering on insubordination owing to the public discussion of the Willis case, and serious consequences might result from any agitation by the board on the subject of punishment.

Would Sift All Complaints.

"Of course, if formal complaints are filed with us, alleging cruel or improper treatment of the inmates, or pointing out a bad condition of affairs at the penitentiary, the board will not hesitate to investigate these complaints and sift them to the bottom.

"In the present state of mind among inmates at the penitentiary their testimony could not be relied upon. One class, which is without hope of getting out, would paint the institution as black as possible. Another class, to curry favor with officials, would hold the institution up as a model. The testimony of neither would be worth anything to the board.

"The board intends to make a careful study of the conditions at the penitentiary and then determine upon such steps as will rectify unsatisfactory conditions and bring the institution up to a higher state of efficiency.

"It may be necessary to overhaul our rules and to prescribe a new form of punishment.

"I am not at all sure that some other form of punishment would not be better than the 'rings,' but the institution must maintain some form of punishment until something better and more humane is devised to take its place.

Rules Approve the "Rings."

"The rules and regulations made by us approve the 'rings,' as a mode of punishment and this form must stand until we revise our rules."

Warden D. C. McClung said discipline was thoroughly demoralized at the penitentiary.

"Today a convict cursed a guard and told him that he did not intend to obey him," said McClung. "The number of cases of discipline almost doubled as the result of the discussion of the "Willis case."

Recipe for the Tobacco Habit

Well-Known Physician Gives Out a Simple Home Recipe for the Tobacco Habit to Be Given Secretly.

A well-known physician, located in the Middle West, who has treated thousands of cases of tobacco habit, in a recent interview made the following statement: "The cost of drugs used to treat the liquor and tobacco habits in the high priced sanitariums amounts to very little. Here is a simple, inexpensive prescription that can be give secretly in coffee, tea, water, or in the food, as it has no taste, color or smell: To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound, 10 grains of pepsin. Give in coffee or food a teaspoonful three times a day. This prescription is perfectly harmless, can be obtained at any drug store, and will be found very effective, as it contains none of the drugs used in the sanitariums in the treatment of the tobacco habit in any form."—ADVERTISEMENT.

Gen. Villa Issues Orders That All Federal Leaders Shall Be Put to Death, and a Number Are Shot Immediately by Firing Squad.

SOLDIER WHO FAILS TO SHOOT CLUBBED

Officer in Civilian Clothes Bares Breast and Asks Troops to Shoot Straight —Town Captured With Little Fighting.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 15.—After routing the Federal garrison of 500 at Juarez and capturing the city this morning, the rebels under Pancho Villa, spent the day parading the streets and shooting the more prominent of their 125 prisoners.

One colonel, three captains and two lieutenants and an officer in civilian clothes were executed.

Capt. Torres was the first to face a firing squad behind the municipal building near the public market place. Col. Enrique Portillo, one time mayor of Casas Grandes and one of Gen. Salazar's chief commanders, was the second. Both died bravely.

The order for the execution of many of the prisoners was issued directly by Gen. Villa and at different periods during the day the firing squad took out men and shot them.

Col. Enrique Portillo, commander of the Federal volunteer troops in the Juarez battle, was executed at noon today by a firing squad commanded by Maj. Cornu. Portillo was taken before Gen. Villa and sentenced to death, after which he was taken to the rear of the barracks and shot.

Among others who were executed during the day were Enrique Ziega, a customs officer; Capt. Lopez of the Federal army and Commander Buenavides of the fiscal guards.

All officers of the Federal army will be put to death, Maj. Cornu of Villa's staff announced tonight. The soldiers, he said, would be pardoned and given an opportunity to join the rebel army.

It was the sixth time in three years that the city has changed government. The attack by the rebels, 2000 in number, took place at 2:30 o'clock this morning and at 5 o'clock the city was surrendered. The garrison of 500 men was taken completely by surprise.

So unprepared for battle were the Federal defenders that Villa's troops actually reached the center of town before a single shot was fired.

of the old Congress. The Minister of the Interior, Manuel Garza Aldape, was expected to officiate at the opening, but opposition developed among the newly chosen lawmakers and Gonzalo Zuniga, Senor Aldape's secretary and himself a Deputy, appeared in his stead. Nominally for a few minutes he presided, but there was little of parliamentary form observed in what followed. One group voted for one man, another group for another man, to act as chairman.

Senor Zuniga called upon the deputies for order, insisting that they observe legal procedure.

"Don't talk to us of law!" cried Salvador Diaz Miron, editor of Imparcial and an ardent supporter of Gen. Huerta. "What have we to do with law? We are higher than the law. The country is in a delicate position and it is our duty to proceed in the most expeditious manner."

The controversy was ended by the appointment without balloting, of Enrique Paz as president of the body to serve until the formal inauguration, Nov. 20.

Secretaries and a committee to examine credentials were then appointed and the session adjourned at 6 o'clock.

The roll of deputies included all members of President Huerta's staff, the chief aid of the Minister of War, the private secretary of the President, the private secretary of the Minister of War, a large number of men more or less closely identified with other Government officials and many well-known detectives who had been employed in the capital.

Reports from Vera Cruz of impending action on the part of the United States continued to be received here. To John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, was attributed the statement that the American embassy would be withdrawn Monday and the possibility that marines would be landed at Vera Cruz.

O'Shaughnessy has received no instructions regarding the withdrawal of the Embassy or any radical action by the United States on Monday, as attributed to Lind.

Charge O'Shaughnessy sent to Washington today at the request of one of the Cabinet members a new proposal to serve as a basis for reopening the negotiations. The exact character of the proposal is not known, but it is certain it does not contain anything sufficiently definite to be in line with Washington's previous declarations.

A message was received yesterday from President Wilson by Mr. O'Shaughnessy, which in effect constitutes a flat refusal to consider anything short of compliance with the demands already made and already rejected by Huerta. The new proposition, it is understood, goes by no means this far.

The departure of foreign residents and even Mexicans for Vera Cruz was more pronounced today, trains being run in sections.

The managers of Lord Cowdray's oil company received orders to send all the women and children and as many men as desired to go, as well as the more important part of the company's archives, to Vera Cruz. These instructions were based on information gathered at Vera Cruz.

Victoriano Huerta Iron Ruler Like Diaz

Keeps Constant Guard Against Assassins

Never Sleeps Twice in Same Place

Provisional President Is Shrewd, Has Keen Sense of Humor and Is Good Story Teller.

By ROBERT H. MURRAY,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—When Gen. Huerta becomes a permanent guest at the down and out club, that institution will harbor an intensely human fellow. His faults may be many and his virtues few, but withal he is a likeable old chap.

Gifted with a considerable degree of native shrewdness, to which he has added by observation and to a lesser extent by education, he is capable of keeping up his end, appearing to advantage in almost any company of men among whom he might be thrown. He has a keen sense of humor and is a ready story teller. He does not take himself too seriously, either.

Recently the editor of a comic weekly much given to cartooning public men felt a little uncertain of his standing with Huerta. So he paid the President a call in an endeavor to ascertain how much cartooning he could do without having it made too unpleasant for him.

No Cartoons Are Published.

"I don't suppose that you would give me 'thirty-three' if we cartooned you a little in a good-natured spirit," suggested the editor, who, by the way, is a Spaniard.

"Thirty-three" is the number of the section of the Constitution which provides for deportation of undesirable aliens.

"Oh, no," calmly replied Huerta, "we wouldn't give you 'thirty-three,' but we might give you 'thirty-thirty,' though."

"Thirty-thirty" is the prevailing caliber of weapons used by the Mexican army.

Since then all cartoons reflecting even good-naturedly upon Huerta have studiously been omitted from that publication.

A while ago the French Minister called upon Huerta, and at the conclusion of the audience he started to leave the salon through the same door he had entered. Huerta halted him.

"Suppose we go out this way," suggested the Provisional President, designating another door. "I'll tell you why," he went on. "When I left home my mother, who was an Indian, called me to her and said: 'My son, as you know, we are very poor. I have nothing to assist you in making your way in the world excepting some advice. The most valuable advice I can give you is this: "Never go the same way twice".' I never do," chuckled Huerta, slapping the Minister upon the shoulder. "I never go out the same door I came in. So they never catch me."

Has Different Bed Each Night.

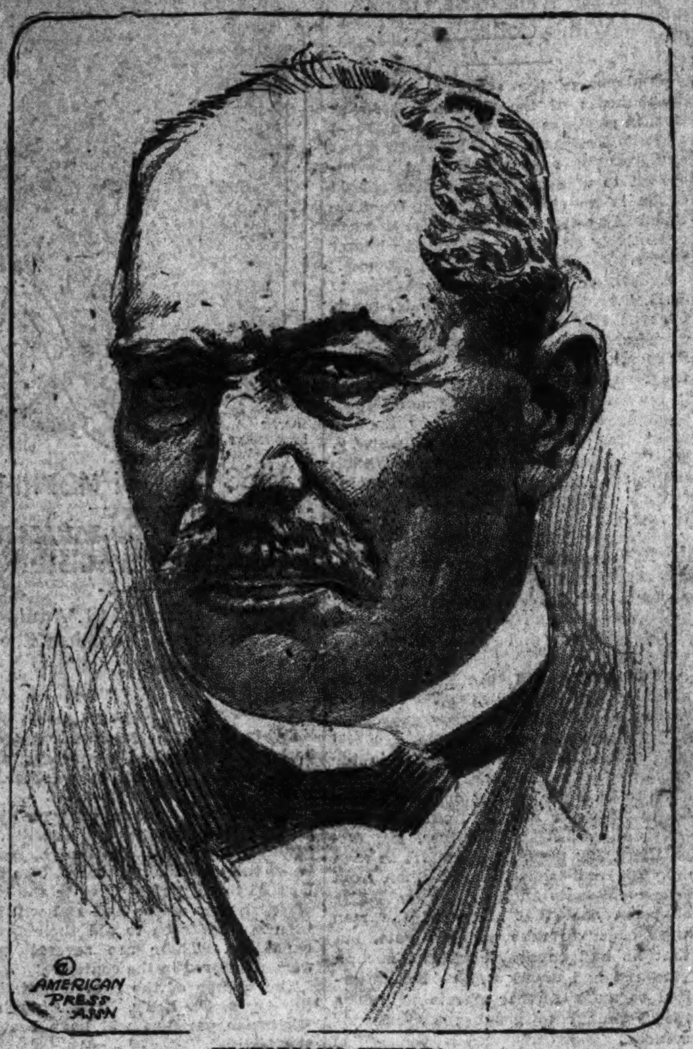
Report says that since he became President Huerta has never lain himself down to sleep in the same place two nights in succession.

"What is the use of taking chances," he answered a friend recently. "When I'm awake, I can look after myself, but when I am asleep that is different. I suppose some of the fellows who don't like me will get me some day, but I want them to do it when I'm awake."

Huerta has never occupied Chapultepec Castle, the official residence of the Mexican executive, since he became President.

He says it is too lonely up there on top of the rock to suit him. "Besides, it isn't proper for a man as bad as they say I am to venture so near heaven. I'd better stay down below, where I belong."

Occasionally he summons a Cabinet meeting at Chapultepec, but he is apt to send word to the Cabinet to meet him almost anywhere. Sometimes he foregathers with his Ministers at his private residence in Calle de Liverpool, four or five squares from the embassy, again at the National Palace, in his little country place in the suburb of Tacuba, in the private room of a restaurant, in the house of any one of his Ministers or in one of a dozen places.



VICTORIANO HUERTA.

His own house is comfortably spacious, but not imposing or sumptuously furnished. The only thing that marks it from adjoining residences is the presence of half a dozen soldiers lounging on the sidewalk at the front entrance.

Lounging is the word that describes them, too.

Diaz always was attended by soldierly looking members of his family and the famous Garde Presidential who wore stunning blue uniforms and constituted the dandies of the army. This glittering corps seems to have gone to seed under Huerta who prefers to be attended for the most part by members of Gen. Blanquet's tried and true Twenty-Ninth Batallion.

The men of the Twenty-Ninth are not especially pretty to look at nor speckless as regards uniform and equipment, but they can fight. These smeary looking warriors chat with barefooted peon women for bananas and other fruit in front of the President's house, litter the sidewalks with skins and cigarette butts, gossip and play tricks on each other. But all the time they keep a wary eye on any one who evidences a disposition to loiter in the neighborhood. When Huerta enters or leaves they stiffen up as though they had stepped on a live electric wire and their salutes to "Mi General" lack nothing in dignity or genuine impressiveness.

They say that Huerta is much given to convivial pursuits and his prowess with the cognac bottle is much lauded. At the celebrated dinner given in his honor at the American Embassy by Henry Lane Wilson a few days before Wilson was recalled, he was brightly "lit up." Wilson wanted Huerta to meet some of his friends and business cercles. So he arranged the dinner. Huerta came and did make merry and between bites and sips, delivered himself of a continuous monologue based upon his keen appreciation of the condescension of the American Ambassador in bidding "a plain old Indian" to thrust his legs beneath the Ambassadorial mahogany.

One hears all sorts of yarns, but it always has been a serious question in the mind of the writer whether Huerta's alleged devotion to the bottle ever interferes seriously with his mental process or with his work. Physically, save for his poor eyesight, he is as fit as a fiddle. Probably he is a dozen times more robust and active, mentally as well as physically, than the average American approaching 60. Huerta is getting well on toward 60, but he has led for the most part an outdoor life, working hard, sleeping long and eating simple food.

Huerta Compared With Diaz.

In every way Huerta probably comes as near being a man in the manner of the late President Diaz as could be found in Mexico. There is Indian blood in him, as there is in Diaz, although it does not show so conspicuously in his features. He is more active and nervous than was Diaz. Unlike Diaz, he had the advantage of training in the Chapultepec Military College; but similar to Diaz, who gained his knowledge of war by actual experience on the field, Huerta is a good fighting man.

Good Blood

is a man's most valuable possession, and it should be carefully safeguarded not only for one's own personal health, but also in order that its blessings may extend through many generations. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA absolutely does make good blood, and that is why it is of such wonderful benefit to humanity.

Thousands of people have voluntarily written letters describing and proving relief by Hood's Sarsaparilla in such afflictions as scrofula and eczema, boils and humors, eruptions and sores, rheumatism and catarrh, kidney and liver troubles, loss of appetite and that tired feeling.

Remember, it is HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA that has this great record. Don't be induced to buy a substitute. Be sure to get Hood's.

PRESIDENT WILSON SITS UP LATE FOR NEWS OF MEXICO

He and Secretary Bryan Unable to Take Next Move Pending Definite Advices.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Official Washington late tonight was awaiting some word from Mexico City indicating what had taken place there today. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were in their studies and telegraph operators at the State Department were on duty.

Before President Wilson can take another step he must know what has taken place in the Mexican capital. Charge Nelson O'Shaughnessy has had instructions to close the embassy and leave the capital in the event the Mexican Congress elected on Oct. 26 convenes.

There were all kinds of reports current in Washington, but the only one given serious consideration, however, was that the Congress had convened and that the Mexican Senate had not organized because of the lack of a quorum.

Telegraph Service Interrupted.

One report here was that the telegraph service between the Mexican capital and Vera Cruz was interrupted. This report was given credence because the State Department had not had a line out of Mexico City since early this morning.

The general impression is that the Congress assembled in the face of the ultimatum issued by President Wilson.

While the President and Secretary of State refuse to discuss the situation in the absence of dispatches from O'Shaughnessy, it is possible that O'Shaughnessy is now enroute to Vera Cruz. If such is the case it will be impossible to hear from him until tomorrow.

Dispatches received at the State Department this morning stated Huerta had given out an interview to the effect that if Carranza would not agree to mediation he certainly would not. His statement indicated he would not yield to the demands of this Government that he resign and that he prevent the meeting of the Congress.

No Talk of Intervention.

While there is more or less tension here, there is no war talk. The attitude of the administration remains the same, that an armed intervention must be precipitated by Huerta and will not be brought on by the United States.

No word was received from Dr. William Bayard Hale, the President's unofficial envoy negotiating with Gen. Carranza, the leader of the revolutionists at Nogales.

British Subjects in Mexico Ordered to Nearest Ports.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A special Mexico City cable to the Sun says: Sir Lionel Carden issued orders today, through the British Consul-General, to all British subjects in Mexico, instructing them to lose no time in making their way to the nearest ports. The instructions said that an anti-American outbreak is feared and that British subjects would be included.

ELIMINATION OF HUERTA DEMANDED BY GEN. CARRANZA

Rebel Leader Also Permits No Compromise, Profiting by Madero's Experience.

NOGALES, Sonora, Nov. 15.—Gen. Venustiano Carranza will not consider any means of accomplishing peace in Mexico not predicated upon the elimination of Huerta.

Gen. Carranza's smile at the reported success of his troops today broadened to a grin when he read Gen. Huerta's statement in reference to the insurgent leader's stand regarding mediation in the internal affairs of Mexico.

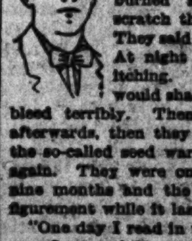
"Let him say what he likes," said Carranza.

The insurgent received the news of Huerta's statement in his quarters at the Municipal Palace, where he remained during the morning.

It was said at noon that no appointments had been made for further meetings between William Bayard Hale and the Constitutional officers. The last meeting was held yesterday and today Gen. Carranza made the following declaration:

"We will accept no transactions with nor the interference of any nation to regulate Mexico's interior affairs."

This statement was occasioned by various suggestions reaching here through the press and semi-official channels indicating certain persons might be acceptable to both Huerta and Carranza as President ad interim. No name yet suggested to Carranza has brought an encouraging reply.



RED LARGE PIMPLES ALL OVER FACE

Festered and Came to Head. Scratching Made Sores. Caused Disfigurement. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Face Now Clear.

1413 E. Genessee Ave., Saginaw, Mich.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me of a very bad disease of the face without leaving a scar. Pimples broke out all over my face, red and large. They festered and came to a head. They itched and burned and caused me to scratch them and make sores. They said they were seed warts. At night I was restless from itching. When the barber would shave me my face would bleed terribly. Then scabs would form afterwards, then they would drop off and the so-called seed warts would come back again. They were on my face for about nine months and the trouble caused disfigurement while it lasted.

"One day I read in the paper of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it was so much value to me that I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment at the drug store. In about ten days my face began to heal up. I kept on using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a very short time after, the scabs dropped off the red spots where they were vanished also. My face is now clear of the warts and not a scar is left." (Signed) LeRoy C. O'Brien, May 12, 1913.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

103 PASSENGERS SAVED FROM SHIP AFIRE AT SEA

Pannonia Goes to Aid of Spanish Ship, Then Escorts Her to Bermuda.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Cunard liner, Pannonia, rescued 103 passengers from the burning Spanish steamship Balmes at sea, according to meager wireless dispatches received today. Though fire still was raging today, the Balmes' crew of 55 was sticking to the vessel, which, convoyed by the Pannonia, was making for Bermuda, which should be made Monday.

The Balmes was eastward bound for Spain, with a highly inflammable cargo of cotton and rum, when the Cunarder, bound hither from Mediterranean ports, went to her assistance.

A supplementary message from the commander of the Pannonia said he had reached the side of the stricken vessel Thursday evening and remained with her all night. By daylight, all the passengers had been transferred. The position of the burning vessel was approximately latitude 35 degrees north, longitude 54 degrees west. To reach her the Pannonia had to steam 180 miles South. The Balmes had signalled by wireless, "Am on fire. Require assistance."

This afternoon the Pannonia was steaming toward Bermuda at an average speed of eight knots and at 10 a. m., New York time, was 200 miles east of the island. The fire still was raging on the Spanish liner, but her crew stuck to her.

First news of the disaster came through a wireless message picked up by the Marconi operator at Cape Race, New Foundland. While it purported to come from the Pannonia and said that she had on board the Balmes' passengers, the operator could not confirm the message and was puzzled by the fact that the Pannonia, with a comparatively feeble wireless outfit, was admittedly out of range.

The message remained unsolved until the Cunard offices in this city received from Lloyd's agents in Bermuda a cablegram announcing that Capt. Capper of the Pannonia had reported by wireless the safe rescue of the Balmes' passengers and the fact that she was escorting the Balmes, still on fire, to the island.

The Balmes is a comparatively small vessel of Spanish ownership, and is rated as a freighter. The Pannonia is one of the slower boats of the Cunard line, making something less than 300 miles a day. She was built in 1904.

Passengers to Go to New York.

The Balmes passengers are to be brought to New York. The Cunard line officers received another message tonight from Capt. Capper of the Pannonia, saying he expected the two vessels would reach Bermuda about 10 o'clock Sunday morning. After convoying the Balmes safely into port, Capt. Capper said, the Panronia would start at once for New York with the rescued persons. The Pannonia is expected to reach here Teusday.

Capt. Capper in his later message reported fire continued to rage on board the Balmes, which, however, was proceeding under her own steam. Her captain and crew had not consented to leave her. The ship's condition was declared to be still critical.

NOISES AND SMELLS TO BE PAINTED BY FUTURISTS

Violent Juxtapositions Will Visualize Experiences of Other Senses Than Sight.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—C. D. Carra, a futurist painter, has issued a sort of manifesto in which he declares that his confreres will paint sounds, noises and smells by means of violent colors, sharp angles and cold dead lines.

Violent juxtapositions of colors and reversed cones are to stand for the noise of explosion, zig-zag lines to represent thunder and lightning, the whole aim being not to produce visions, but sensations in accordance with the theory that sounds, noises and smells have shape and color in the minds of persons experiencing them.

LETTERS FROM STEAMERS

French Company Provides for Sending Messages Home.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The French Compagnie Trans-Atlantique announces the inauguration of a service of ocean letters, for the use of the passengers on their Atlantic liners, at extremely low rates, messages being sent by wireless to the passing ships of the same company and delivered at the home port within three days, thus permitting passengers to inform their friends that all is well on board.

LUNCH POISONS THREE

Mrs. Frances Schile, 23 years old, of 5214 Emily street, and her two daughters, Vera, 4 years old, and Helen, one and a half years old, are seriously ill at their home from ptomaine poisoning.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Schile sent Vera to a neighborhing store for cheese and crackers. The mother and her little girls lunched on the cheese and in a few hours became very ill. A doctor who attended them told the police that he believed their illness due to the cheese they had eaten.

French Foreign Office Sympathetic With American Aims.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The attitude of the French Government with respect to the Mexican question has passed through various phases. At first matters were observed dispassionately, then doubt arose as to what the Washington Government sought to do. Next came a comparison of views with Great Britain, followed by a common understanding the United States should be recognised as having paramount interests in Mexico and should be allowed the utmost freedom to take whatever course she considered wise. Finally the French Foreign Office became entirely sympathetic with the American aims.

'LOVE'S DREAM CITY' ATTRACTS $$$'S OF GIRLS AND WIDOWS

Extraordinary Exhibit of Faith and Exploitation in Illinois Town of Shacks.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—"Love's Dream City," otherwise Lomax, Ill., is an extraordinary exhibit of faith and exploitation. It is situated a few miles south of Burlington, Io., in Henderson County.

William T. Love is the founder. Lomax is a village of shacks—200 of them—and its inhabitants pay a monthly rent of from $3 to $5. It has a population of some 900, but 165—those who occupy real houses—were there before the invasion of the founder.

The 38 factories "located" and the promised population of 25,000, with its own trunk railways and its own fleet of lake and ocean steamships, have thus far failed to materialize.

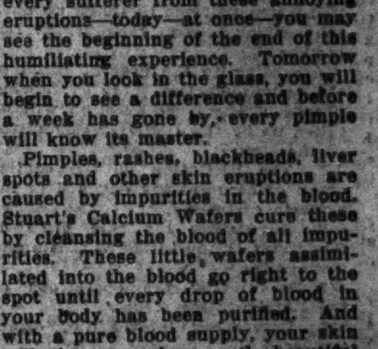
The alluring prospectus said there would be no saloons. That is true. It promised no unsightly elevated railways. Also true. And it promised only a "reasonable amount" of underground railways. All the good things were to have been established inside of six months. The town is now two years old.

Love is the man who has been furnishing the "inspiration" of the hundreds of shop girls, widows and laboring men throughout the country to invest their hard-earned dollars in bonds on small weekly payments when unable to make the first payment on one of the lots.

Lomax has been advertised all over the United States as a coming metropolis. Circulars of alluring tone have bent seen posted even as far away as Cordova, Alaska. Postoffice Inspector Stuart in Chicago says the town company is under the observation of the Government. He is awaiting developments.

Love obtained options on some 25,000 acres and began issuing bonds and kept issuing them until he had a total of $400,000 worth—the majority of which has been sold. When he gets rid of those still on hand he will issue more. He says so. For 43 acres of choice land he "optioned" from Mrs. Stephen J. King, Love has agreed to pay $750 an acre. This has been plotted out as the Lomax "wholesale district" and a lot here brings $2500 or $15,000 to the acre. Love says:

"Our site of 25,000 acres will create a value of $500,000,000. This will be divided into various funds."



Mortified By Pimply Face

Stuart's Calcuim Wafers Will Restore Good Looks and a Clear Complexion to Your Face.

There is no humiliation so intense as the knowledge that people are constantly noticing the pimply condition of your face. Women, especially, realizing the attraction of personal beauty and longing as every woman does for admiration and love, find them the source of the greatest unhappiness and misery. They know that even to their own families their pimples are annoying, and they imagine they are the laughing stock of every stranger.

Don't Be Ashamed to Show Your Face, Stuart's Calcium Wafers Will Drive Away All Pimples and Skin Eruptions.

We have a message of hope for every sufferer from these annoying eruptions—today—at once—you may see the beginning of the end of this humiliating experience. Tomorrow when you look in the glass, you will begin to see a difference and before a week has gone by, every pimple will know its master.

Pimples, rashes, blackheads, liver spots and other skin eruptions are caused by impurities in the blood. Stuart's Calcium Wafers cure these by cleansing the blood of all impurities. These little wafers assimilated into the blood go right to the spot until every drop of blood in your body has been purified. And with a pure blood supply, your skin will become clear and beautiful with a rapidity that would hardly seem creditable, had it not been so often tested.

Nature intended that every woman should have a fine, soft skin with a beautiful, glowing complexion. Somehow your blood has become vitiated and full of impurities and your face has suffered for it. But with Stuart's Calcium Wafers, you can cleanse your blood and restore your face to its natural beauty. Get a 50c box of your druggist today and be one of the vast army of people who thank Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily for a beautiful complexion.—ADV.

"STARVING TO DEATH"

Was Mrs Bell, of Florida, When She Began Taking Peruna.

"Yes, I was starving to death," said Mrs. Emma Bell, of Fort Pierce, Florida, Box 204, "when I began to take Peruna. I could not eat anything. If I swallowed anything it soured on my stomach. My stomach was very much swollen. My bowels acted as if I had acute dysentery. I was in great distress and pain. Three doctors had been employed, but gave me no relief. I was continually growing worse.

I Was in Despair.

"In my despair I caught at every straw. Picking up a newspaper I saw some account of Peruna. There was a testimonial from a woman who had been troubled much like myself. I concluded to try Peruna.

I Wrote to Dr. Hartman.

"At the same time I wrote to Dr. Hartman. He pronounced my case catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I soon began taking Peruna. At once I began to improve. After taking half a bottle my stomach was so improved that I could eat some."

I Began to Recover.

Then this good housewife goes on to narrate in detail her rapid improvement and final recovery. She said: "After taking two bottles of Peruna I was strong enough to stand up to wash the dishes." When she began taking Peruna she weighed 102 pounds. After she had taken five bottles of Peruna she weighed 122 pounds. She concludes by saying that she is well.

It Was Twelve Years Ago.

The letter from which the above quotations were made was received January 29, 1901. In a later letter written September 11, 1904, she says, "I sing the praises of Peruna far and near. It is used a great deal in our vicinity. This seems to be a bad place for catarrh." We have received letters from her since. The last time we heard from her, December, 1912, she was still a friend of Peruna.

For other testimonials on catarrh of the stomach, see "Ills of Life," sent free. Address Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

The stomach and bowels are lined with a mucous membrane. They are therefore subject to catarrh, the same as the nose and throat. Catarrh of the stomach and bowels will derange the functions of these organs. The stomach can no longer digest food. The food lying in the stomach, even for a short time, without digestion, immediately sours. The souring produces gas and irritation.

Food Sours in the Stomach.

A portion of the undigested meal is absorbed into the system by the blood vessels of the stomach. This poisons the whole system, producing a condition now known as autointoxication; self poisoning. The fermenting, irritating mass, as it passes down into the bowels, irritates them.

The average dyspepsia medicine helps to artificially digest the food. Even when such medicine does its work it is only temporary. A permanent relief can only be expected when the catarrh is overcome.

Symptoms of Catarrh of the Stomach.

The symptoms of catarrh of the stomach are: First, heartburn. Second, food rises in throat after meals. Third, sour stomach. Fourth, heavy feeling after eating. Fifth, stomach bloated, belching of gas. Sixth, palpitation of heart. Seventh, poor digestion, have dyspepsia. Eighth, tongue coated light brown. Ninth, tenderness over pit of stomach. Tenth, cannot bear tight clothes around waist.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.—ADV.

PRESIDENT WILSON HAS FIXED TERMS OF ANTI-TRUST BILL

Legislation to Be Undertaken as Soon as Currency Bill Is Disposed Of Provides Regulation of the Price of Foodstuffs.

RESPONSIBILITY OF DIRECTORS IS URGED

Prevention of Interlocking Boards Is Proposed in Program—Sectional Discrimination in Selling Would Be Prohibited.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—President Wilson and his conferees have arrived at definite conclusions as to the anti-trust legislation program which Congress will be asked to enact into laws as soon as the currency bill is disposed of. The anti-trust legislation will not be taken up until the regular session convenes in December.

According to the present plans of the administration, the following phases of the trust question will be taken up by the Judiciary Committee of the House:

1. The limitation of the capital stock of corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

2. Regulating the sale price of foodstuffs in the hands of trusts and monopolies.

3. Regulating the operations of the Refrigerating Trust.

4. Preventing interlocking directorates.

5. Holding directors of corporations operating in violation of the anti-trust law responsible as individuals.

6. Making it a misdemeanor for any corporation, firm or person to discriminate between different sections by selling any commodity or article of merchandise in one community at a price less than that at which the same commodity is sold in another section when the intent is to obtain a monopoly or drive a competitor out of business.

Various Bills Considered.

Democratic members of the House Committee on the Judiciary have been considering, for more than a month, the various bills providing for trust regulation which have been referred to them. While it is too early as yet to predict the exact nature of the bills for regulating trusts which will be reported from the committee in general, the legislation which Congress will be called upon to consider and which will have the indorsement of President Wilson and Attorney-General McReynolds, will be substantially as outlined above.

Already President Wilson has held several conferences with the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and has given him a tentative outline of the trust legislation which he desires should be enacted into law. The President is not in any way endeavoring to dictate to members of this committee what they should do, but he is co-operating with them in order that the pledges made in the Baltimore platform regarding the regulation of trusts and monopolies may be fulfilled. There will be numerous conferences between the executive and legislative branches of the Government on the trust proposition, however, before the administration measures are ready to be presented to Congress and given consideration by the two houses.

Limitation of Capital.

The limitation of the capital stock of corporations engaged in interstate commerce is one of the questions which is considered to be of first importance by Judiciary Committee members. Several bills embracing this feature of trust regulation are before the committee. There has been much discussion as to the amount of capital which should be permitted in the formation of such corporations. A limit placed upon such amount, it is believed by some of the members of the committee, would go a long way in the direction of preventing the enormous amount of capital controlled by the Steel Trust, the Beef Trust and the Harvester Trust.

The question of the high cost of living enters very largely into the price of foodstuffs handled by trusts and monopolies. And the control of the operations of the Refrigerating Trust, which is to form an important part of the legislation to be enacted, is regarded as certain to have its effect on the cost of food to the consumer.

Case of Beef Trust.

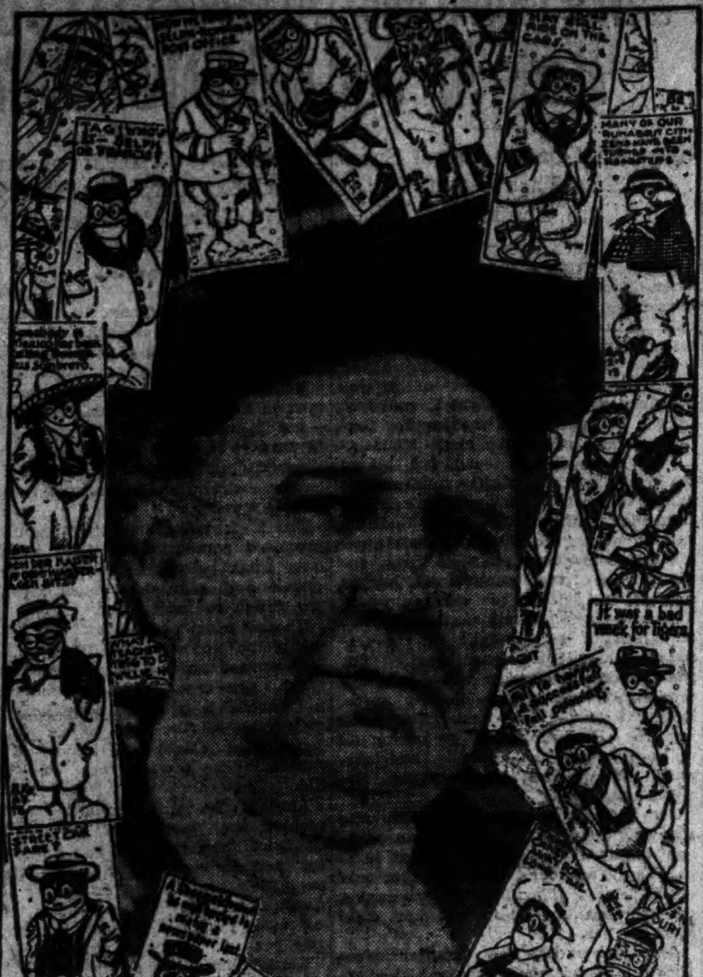
It is known to the members of the Judiciary Committee, in the case of the Beef Trust, that four butchers of the country made more money last year than all the raisers of the cattle in the country put together. This, it is said, is a condition which must be met by Congress. It is pointed out that while the beef barons have grown richer and richer each year, the farmers engaged in raising cattle have not received their just share of profits. Incidentally, where the farmer sells his beef on the hoof to the trust for 7 cents a pound, the consumer pays 35 and 40 cents a pound for his meat. The Judiciary Committee has been making an investigation into the subject and will be prepared to deal with it when the general plan for trust legislation is ready to be announced.

One of the very first measures to be introduced in the House on the subject of trusts will be that dealing with the operations of the Refrigerating Trust. This, it is charged, is responsible in a great measure for the rise in prices of such food products as eggs, fowls and vegetables.

The methods of this trust have been under investigation by the Judiciary Committee members. The disclosures have developed it has its agents in all parts of the country, buying from farmers and producers of eggs, poultry, fruits and vegetables. The trust gets such commodities at the very lowest prices. They are bought when prices are normal and when the supply of such foodstuffs is greater than the demand. Then the eggs, butter, poultry and vegetables are placed in cold storage to await the season of slight production.

While a majority of the members of the Judiciary Committee are in favor of cuting off the right of directors in any one corporation engaged in interstate commerce from holding stock in another corporation, there are those who believe that a certain limitation should be placed upon such directors, without shutting them off entirely from participation in the direction and control of other companies.

Weather Birds Used to Paper Walls of Rooms



MRS. CHRISTOPHER A. FRANTZ

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Frantz Show Decorations Clipped From the Post-Dispatch at Wedding Anniversary.

Two rooms papered with Post-Dispatch weather birds, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher A. Frantz, 5134 Raymond avenue, were admired by many of his friends at their golden wedding celebration last week.

Frantz, who is a retaired stair manufacturer, and Mrs. Frantz, have clipped 2200 weather birds from the Post-Dispatch in the last 10 years. Each bird bears a thought for the day, and, arranged in chronological order, the sayings of the feathered philosopher constitute a sort of history of public affairs, showing by epigrams the topic which was of interest each day.

The army of birds has been used in papering the upstairs den and a furnished room in the basement. Several hundred of the birds are held in reserve, room for them not having been found on the walls and ceilings. The papering is not done solidly with birds, but the rows of birds are spaced by larger pictures, many of them also taken from the Post-Dispatch. The adventures of the Newlyweds and Their Baby are included in these adornments.

Frantz says the weather bird is the first thing he looks at in picking up a copy of the Post-Dispatch. He shows, by the collection on his ceiling, how the bird has evolved into a form more nearly human than at first. Originally it had long tail feathers.

BROADWAY BLAZE EMPTIES MOTION PICTURE HOUSES

Broadway gave a midday fire exhibition yesterday that emptied all the moving picture shows in the immediate neighborhood. The fire was in the upper floors of a vacant five-story building at 111 North Broadway.

The back end of the building, from the third story to the top floors, was enveloped in flames, and great volumes of smoke clouds were pouring out of the windows overlooking Broadway when the fire alarm was turned in at 12:30 o'clock. Within a few minutes Broadway was filled with fire fighting machinery from Market to Olive streets.

By the time the fireman pulled the hose to the top of the three towers hoisted in Broadway in front of the burning building, big black clouds of smoke were rolling out of the windows from the third, fourth and fifth floors. From the back end of the building, where the fire started and where it burned most rapidly, streams were thrown through the windows from the roof and fire escape of the Garrick Theater.

The streets were massed with people for blocks in all directions, while on a dozen different corners the fire engines chugged away. The heat from the flames that shot out of the rear windows of the building was so great, for a time, that all but the fireman were driven from the alley.

Within half an hour after the fire department got into action Chief Swingley's men had the fire put out. It was feared by business men in the neighborhood at first that the fire had such headway before it was discovered that several buildings might be destroyed. Swingley, on his arrival, promptly turned in a second alarm and in a short time the fire was under control.

The building formerly was occupied by a clothing store. It is owned by Julius C. Vorhees of New York. The damage to the structure was estimated by the fire department at $6000.

TERMINAL SIGNAL EMPLOYES VOTE TO UNITE IN DEMANDS

Men in Electrical Operating Department Want to Be Treated With Collectively.

Employes of the electrical operating departments of the Terminal Association, in meetings held yesterday and last night in Fraternal Hall, Eleventh street and Franklin avenue, discussed a proposition to vote on whether they sohuld strike in an effort to compel the Terminal Association to treat with them collectively on their demands for higher wages. A strike would affect 250 men.

A decision was reached, according to J. R. T. Auston, of Philadelphia, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, Dispatchers, Agents and Signalmen, that the matter of treating with the Terminal Association should be placed in his hands. A resolution was adopted, pledging the men to stand by the demand that they be treated collectively. The Terminal, Auston stated, is willing to receive separately committees representing each department under which the men work.

Auston, who came to St. Louis Monday to personally handle the organization of Terminal employes, told a reporter at the Jefferson Hotel after the meetings, that the levermen, operators, train directors and train dispatchers were demanding an increase of 15 per cent in wages, and that the signal repairmen had demanded an increase without specifying what they expected.

Present Wage Scale.

According to Auston, levermen in the employ of the Terminal receive from $78.75 to $87.50 per month; operators from $63 to $73.50 per month; train directors, $105; assistant train directors, $94; dispatchers, $85; message operators in towers, $63, and signal repair men from 19½c to 29 cents an hour.

Auston said that many of the men were eager to take a strike vote, but that he had counseled against such a vote and had urged that he be authorized to make further efforts to induce the Terminal to grant the wage increases.

He said that a strike would mean that the Terminal would be unable to move a car and that all passenger and freight transportation in the city would be brought to a standstill until the men's places could be filled.

The men in the employ of the Terminal were affiliated with the Order of Railway Trainmen until seven years ago, when dissatisfaction in that organization resulted in the withdrawal of some of the Eastern trainmen, headed by Auston. They formed a rival organization, which until this time has devoted its efforts to an organization of the men employed on Eastern roads.

Say Demands Were Ignored.

A week ago the men made their demand for wages to the heads of their various departments. They said no attention was paid to them, and they then appointed a joint committee, consisting of E. C. Vaughan, M. T. Todd, J. H. Johnson, P. S. Pemder, T. H. Carnahan, H. A. Price, J. J. Stephens, A. C. Masson and J. T. Defend was appointed.

This committee asked General Superintendent I. L. Burlingame to grant an audience. Burlingame refused, replying that such matters should be taken up by the men with their respective department heads.

A resolution adopted at the meetings yesterday pledges the men to insist on being treated collectively.

"I know of no dissatisfaction among employes of the Terminal," he said. "I believe if there was dissatisfaction I would know of it, and I do not believe this matter is at all serious."

OTTO E. GOEBEL SUES FOR A DIVORCE

He Declares in Petition He Is Husband of Woman Who Denied Ceremony.

Charging that his wife has a violent temper, attempting once to cut his thoat, and that she receives attentions from other men, Otto E. Goebel of 3333 Washington boulevard filed suit Saturday against Edna A. Goebel for divorce.

Goebel says he has lived with her since May 15, 1911, and first separated Sept. 1, 1913. He charges that his wife went to his place of business at one time and tried to cut his throat and that in warding off the blow his arm was badly cut.

Goebel further declares that his wife went to San Francisco last September and there went with other men. He also charges that she went to dry goods stores and bought several hundred dollars worth of goods, more than he could pay for.

A replevin suit was filed last week by Mrs. Goebel against her husband and following that she made a statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter that she was united to her husband only by a common law marriage. Goebel says in his petition that he is the woman's husband.

KAISER'S SECOND SON AND WIFE ARE LIVING APART

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Continental dispatches tell of discord between the Prince Eitel Fritz, the second son of the Kaiser, and his wife, who was the Princess Sophie and Duchess of Oldenburg. They were married in 1906. It is now declared they have actually separated and it is even said the Princess has gone to America, but this is not confirmed.

They have no children, and an element of romance is given to the stories by the statement the Duchess married against her will, being already in love with an army captain of noble birth. The Berlin Klein Journal has hinted at a divorce, in high quarters, but no confirmation was obtainable on the subject from the German capital, though the tongues of gossip are wagging freely.

CANDIDATE FOR QUEEN OF CHURCH CARNIVAL

MISS EILEEN MOYNIHAN

GIRLS IN SHARP RIVALRY FOR CARNIVAL HONORS

Representatives of St. Ann's and St. Matthew's Parishes Seem in Lead for Queen.

A keen rivalry has sprung up among the various candidates for queen of the Knights of Father Mathew carnival to be held Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the hall at Sarah street and Cook avenue.

Miss Eileen Moynihan, supported by St. Ann's Paris, and Miss Edna Reilly, representing St. Matthew's Parish, seem to be in the lead for the place. The members of these parishes live in the immediate vicinity of the hall and will likely turn out in force to aid their favorite candidate. There are several young women entered in the contest.

The women of the church societies of St. Ann's, St. Leo's, Rock Church and Visitation parishes will have booths at the festival.

Admirals Shift Stations.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Rear Admiral William B. Caperton today succeeded Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight as commander of the Atlantic reserve fleet at the Philadelphia navy yard. Admiral Knight goes to Newport, R. I., where he becomes president of the War College and commander of the navy yard.

GATES WILL TO BE FILED IN MINNESOTA AS TEST

State's Right to Inheritance Tax on Millionaire's Estate to Be Settled in Court.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 15.—The will of Charles G. Gates will be offered for probate in Minneapolis and the Hennepin County Probate Court will decide whether he was a resident here or elsewhere. The decision will settle the question as to whether Minnesota will be entitled to an inheritance tax, according to Assistant Attorney-General William J. Stevenson.

The announcement was made after Stevenson had conferred here today with A. L. Hume of New York, personal attorney for Mr. Gates, Frank T. Corriston, representing Mrs. Charles G. Gates, and William D. Mitchell of St. Paul, representing Mrs. John W. Gates. The date of filing the will has not been decided, but will probably be within a few days. To Sufferers of Gall-Stones, FREE

How to Cure Yourself of This Dread Disease Right at Home, and Without an Operation.

More than twenty-five years ago Dr. W. C. Payne originated a remarkably successful method of treating gall stones, which the patient could take in the privacy of his own home, without the necessity of any dangerous, expensive surgical operation.

Don't Let Them Cut Into Your Vitals.

If you suffer from gall stones, gall bladder or liver trouble, or have a relative or friend suffering agonies from them, and a doctor or someone has told you that an operation is necessary to save your life, you should send at once, today, for Dr. Payne's big Book on Gall Stones, absolutely free. It tells all about their formation, their cause, their results and their successful treatment. It shows how readily they may be softened and passed out or absorbed without pain, and how they may be prevented from reforming.

Stop that useless, horrible suffering! Stop it now! Send today for this "life-or-death" book and learn how to be free from those tearing, excruciating gall stones and the trouble they cause. Rid yourself of them before one breaks through a tissue somewhere and places you in grave danger. Send your name and address today to Dr. W. C. Payne Gall-Stone Remedy Co., Dept. 26, Dalton City, Ill., and this big free book will be mailed back to you at once, without any obligation.

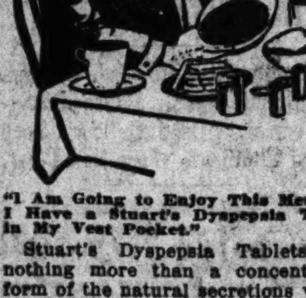
Do You Pay for It Afterward?

If You Do, Just Carry a Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in Your Vest Pocket and a Big Meal Will Be Easily Laid Away.

Get away from the foreboding that every time you enjoy yourself heartily and eat a full meal, that you will pay for it afterwards. There is no sense in your not enjoying every meal to the utmost. And you can do so without danger from a protesting stomach if you take the precaution always to have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with you. Then if you over-eat, or eat something that disagrees with you as the most careful person will sometimes, one or two of these tablets will restore normal conditions in your stomach in a very few minutes.



"I Am Going to Enjoy This Meal for I Have a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in My Vest Pocket."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are nothing more than a concentrated form of the natural secretions which the stomach employs in digesting food. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets merely step in when the stomach is too tired or too sluggish to perform its functions properly and supply a sufficient quantity of these digestive ferments to digest completely all food, under either acid or alkaline conditions, in the stomach.

It has long been known that the various digestive ferments could be produced as perfectly in the laboratory as in the stomach, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the first attempt, outside of certain hospitals, to utilize these discoveries for the benefit of sufferers from indigestion and kindred complaints.

The perfect freedom to eat what you please and as much as you please which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gives, has won it thousands of friends who make it a constant vest pocket companion. Join today the vast army of people who have declared their independence of stomach worries. You can get a 50c box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from any druggist.—ADV.

WESTERN ROWING CLUB ROWS INTO A TANGO STORM

Star Oarsman and Four Others to Be Tried on Charges of Insubordination.

POLICE ARE CALLED IN Member Tries to Show Opponents Tango Is No Worse Than Stag Party Show.

Five members of the Western Rowing Club, 6000 South Broadway, are to be tried by the directors on charges of unbecoming conduct and insubordination, because of their attempts to demonstrate to the conservative members of the club that the tango is not an objectionable dance.

The charges, which were formally made at a meeting of the members, Friday night, were precipitated by the action of younger members of the club's dancing set, last Sunday night, when they turned in a police call and summoned a wagon load of policemen to suppress a vaudeville and picture show performance which was a feature of one of the club's weekly stag parties.

Calls in the Police.

The members threatened with expulsion are Carl A. Koopmann, Clarence Kaufmann, Arthur Benz, Henry Mueller and C. Rathert. Koopmann, who is one of the club's star oarsmen, yesterday admitted that he sent the telephone message which caused a police Sergeant and six patrolmen to invade the clubhouse Sunday night. He did this, he said, because he wanted to impress on the conservative majority of the club membership that the tango was no more to be condemned than the vaudeville and picture features of the weekly stag parties.

After remaining at the club half an hour the police decided that there was nothing objectionable in the stag program. Koopmann raised the point that an equal number of policemen summoned on a riot call would find the tango no more objectionable.

"Raid Was Spitework."

Koopmann said the conservative members alleged that the tango was improper, but instead of leaving the question of its propriety to the police they preferred charges against him and his adherents. He thought a more direct way would have been to call in the police.

H. Gustav Schneider, president of the club, refused to discuss the tango tangle. "Our club is 45 years old and has gone through many storms," he said. "Sunday night's raid was spitework. A few misguided young members have been trying to run things their own way."

Modified Tango Prohibited.

Koopmann told a Post-Dispatch reporter that at one of the club entertainments about a month ago some of the younger members and their young women partners started to dance a modified tango.

The music he said, was stopped, and President Schneider announced that no novelty dances would be permitted.

At a meeting of members a week ago, Koopmann said, he asked that the modified tango be sanctioned. A majority of the members voted that the tango and all novelty dances be permitted subject to the Entertainment Committee's decision as to whether they were proper.

On the following night there was a club dance. Koopmann, Benz, Rathert, Kauffmann, Mueller and others found partners and started to dance what they called the modified tango to the tune of "You Made Me Love You." Koopmann said William Mandeville of the Entertainment Committee stopped the music and announced that all improper dances would be prohibited.

MEDAL AWARDED TO GUS THOMAS; HIS MOTHER PROUD

Playwright Declares Parent, 81, Will Wonder Why He Wasn't Recognized Before.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—The American Academy of Arts and Letters today presented to Augustus Thomas, the playwright, a gold medal for having achieved more in the dramatic world than any other American, taking into account the work of a lifetime.

The gold medal of the academy is awarded once in every 10 years for life work in any specific branch of music, literature or architecture. Thomas is the fifth to receive it. Previous awards have been to Augustus St. Gaudens in sculpture; James Ford Rhodes, history; James Whitcomb Riley, poetry, and William R. Mead, architecture.

Thomas said that before returning to New York he would go to St. Louis to show his medal to his 81-year-old mother. "She will not be as overcome as I am," said Thomas. "She will wonder what has occasioned the long delay of my recognition."

Thomas' Invalid Mother in St. Louis, Pleased at Award.

The playwright's mother is Mrs. Imogene Thomas, widow of Dr. Elihu B. Thomas. She makes her home with her daughters, Alice A. Thomas and Mrs. Charles H. Austin, at 3673 Finney avenue. The daughters would not allow a reporter to speak to her last night as, they said, she was too ill to talk to anyone. She has been an invalid for seven years and recently suffered from bronchitis.

"We read mother the dispatch in the papers which told that the medal had been awarded to Gus," said Miss Thomas, "and she smiled and seemed very much pleased. But since Gus has been in public life he has received so many honors that they become kind of common. Mother is very proud of him. However, we do not think he will come to St. Louis before he returns to New York."

Augustus Thomas is 54 years old. He was born in St. Louis. He was a page in the Forty-first Congress. After leaving the public schools he was employed for six years in the freight department of a railway. Later he was a reporter and illustrator on the Post-Dispatch. He also had done work for a Kansas City newspaper and before attaining success as a playwright had been employed as a newspaper man in New York.

Following are dramas and plays which he wrote: "Alabama," Arizona," "The Witching Hour," "As a Man Thinks," "The Burglar," "After Thoughts," "The Meddler," "The Man Upstairs," "On the Quiet," "New Blood," "The Earl of Pawtucket," "The Other Girl," "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," "The Education of Mr. Pipp" and "Jim Delancy." He is a member of the Century, Players' and Lambs' Clubs in New York City. His home is at New Rochelle.

FIRST JOURNALIST OF CHINA PREDICTS MORE OUTBREAKS

Dr. Ng. Poon Chew Forecasts Stormy Weather Before Republic Is on Firm Footing.

Dr. Ng Poon Chew, founder of Chinese journalism in America and sometimes nicknamed "the Chinese Mark Twain," will deliver two addresses today, the first, in the morning, at the Kirkwood Presbyterian Church, and the second, at night, at the Union Avenue Christian Church. He will also speak Tuesday night at the Third Baptist Church under the auspices of the Committee Church Federation. He arrived last night from the Pacific Coast and will depart Wednesday to address the students of Pittsburg University.

Dr. Chew is a graduate of Princeton, a Christian, and editor of Chung Sai Yat Po, a San Francisco daily. He is Vice-Consul of the Chinese Republic in San Francisco and a relative of Dr. Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese Ambassador at Washington. He has lived 34 years in the United States.

Strong Measures Needed.

As an official of the Chinese Republic, Dr. Chew said last night it would be improper for him to discuss the political situation in China. Concerning the reported dissolution of the Chinese Legislature by President Yuan Shih Kai, he said:

"Probably it will be necessary at times to use strong measures until the country is settled down. But my understanding is that the Legislature dissolved itself, as its membership of 800 proved too cumbersome, and that new elections are to be held. I am rather out of touch with conditions in China, as I have been away from my office since Oct. 19."

He continued that it is unjust to compare conditions in China with those in Mexico, declaring that the Chinese leaders are better educated and less selfish than those of Mexico, and the Chinese people more peaceable and law-abiding than those of the southern republic.

Disturbances Are Predicted.

Of course, there will be disturbances, he predicted, like the recent uprising which was called the Second Revolution. He said that even the United States required 37 years of effort before a strong central government was established, and asked that one or two generations be given the Chinese republic in which to establish its worth.

He said that the liberal element in in China has confidence in President Yuan's integrity of purpose and his patriotism. He regards the future of China in an enthusiastic light, despite formidable obstacles of poverty and ignorance, and sees salvation in a national system of education which shall do the work which a few private colleges now can only attempt to do.

Like his distinguished relative, Dr. Wu, Dr. Chew has a reputation as a wit, and is reported to have diverted large audiences during his recent tour of Oregon and Washington. He is able to relish a joke at his own expense.

Introduced as "Missing Link."

"I was once presented to an audience as 'the missing link,'" related he. "The speaker was a Princeton student who made a slip of the tongue in attempting to introduce me as 'the connecting link between the Orient and the Occident.'"

He said that his two-lettered first name is pronounced "oong," and that it means "five." This is his family name, the Chinese custom being to put the patronymic first and the given names afterwards. The same Chinese character is used in writing it as in writing the name "Wu," the latter being the Northern pronunciation and the former the Southern.

In his addresses he will discuss missionary work in China, its methods and the course it should take in the future. He will leave the city tomorrow to deliver an address at Boonville, Ind., and will return the next morning.

PLEDGES FAMILY BIBLE FOR A FIVE-CENT DRINK

East Alton Man Who Says He Is "Down and Out" Then Gets $1.50 From Saloon Man.

A large leather-bound family Bible was on the counter back of the bar in Thomas Watson's saloon in East Alton Saturday. The Bible was valued at $25 and contained a family record of births, deaths and marriages.

"A man came in and gave me that Bible for a 5-cent drink of whisky," Watson explained. "He said he was down and out. He had kept the Bible with his family record to the last.

"I gave him the drink and then loaned him $1.50 on the Bible. He promised to come and redeem it."

Watson refused to give the name of the owner of the Bible.

'IMMORTALS' PLAN A HALL OF FAME ALL THEIR OWN

Men of Letters Contemplate Building Home to Hang Their Pictures In.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—America's "immortals" are planning a hall of fame in which their portraits will be preserved and where they can hold future meetings. The home probably will be established in New York.

Hamlin Garland of Chicago tonight said the proposed building had been discussed at an executive meeting of members of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and the American Academy of Arts and Literature. The subject was broached after Louis Betts of Chicago had volunteered to paint a portrait of Garland for the institute and the question had arisen where such a picture would be hung.

"I believe we will start with an endowment fund for the erection of a building of our own," said Garland. "Of course, it would be built in New York."

It is improbable that women will have any place in the proposed "Mount Olympus," as Dr. Brander Matthews, president of the institute, today advised feminine notables to start an "immortals" group of their own.

The "immortals" will meet next year in Paris.

The Pianola Steinway

The Steinway satisfies the taste and requirements of the most exacting master musicians. The brilliant splendor of its tone has earned it the favor of countless thousands of music lovers.

Its remarkable perfection has established its commanding position in the music centers of the world.

The Pianola Steinway is a Steinway in tone, in constructional excellence, in every attribute that has made the Steinway celebrated—and it is more. It is the Steinway and the art to play.

The Pianola Stroud

Is not merely a piano, it is an instrument that you can play with all the facility and art of a skilled pianist, and it is better than any so-called player-piano sold by any music house at any price.

Its beauty of tone, responsiveness of action—its perfection in every essential pianoforte feature has won the praise and indorsement of such notable musicians as Moszkowski, Chaminade, Rosenthal and Arthur Nikisch.

Player-pianos, so-called, are not Pianolas. There is but one Pianola. It is made exclusively by the Aeolian Company and is obtainable in the following models only: Steinway, Stroud, Wheelock, Steck, Stuyvesant and the magnificent Weber.

POLICE OF BELLEVILLE TO DISPERSE CROWDS

Mayor Issues Orders Following Shooting and Cutting in Shoe Workers' Strike.

As a result of a fight on North Jackson street, Belleville, in which three men were stabbed and one shot, Mayor Duvall issued orders to the Police Department last night to disperse all crowds that gather on the streets.

For several weeks, striking shoe workers have gathered opposite the entrance to the Belleville shoe factory and greeted men and women who are employed there. The orders to the police are to keep all loiterers moving. The police have also been instructed to arrest all suspicious looking persons and search them for weapons of any kind.

About 75 striking shoe workers marched to the Belleville shoe factory at noon yesterday, but the factory had closed for the day at 11 o'clock and the strikers dispersed.

DOG 'WHO THINKS' VISITS EDISON IN WIZARD'S LIBRARY

Jasper, the Brindle Terrier, Then Does Stunts for Children, Kisses "Baby."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A dog who "does his own thinking" and travels about the country exhibiting his ability to think to doctors and scientists, as does Jasper, the handsome 3-year-old English brindle terrier whose instructor and friend is Dixie Taylor of Richmond, Va., has many strange adventures and funny experiences.

"Jasper, do you remember that dog Buster at Grand Rapids whose paw was hurt when he was run over by a stret car?" asked his instructor when Jasper came down stairs to the drawing room after entertaining Thomas A. Edison for half an hour in the library of his home at Llewellyn Park, West Orange. "Well, show Mrs. Edison how Buster walked after he and the trolley car met."

Jasper drew one foot up and hobbled around the room on three legs, looking most pathetic.

Jasper likes babies and has been taught to kiss them. There was a little girl present who carried a big doll. Jasper watched it while doing stunts for Mrs. Edison, Master Theodore, and Miss Madeline. The little girl put dollie "to sleep" on the lounge.

Finally Jasper's instructor said: "You may go over to the couch and kiss the baby."

Mystery for Dog Jasper.

Jasper wagged his tail, trotted over, put his front paws on the couch and delicately kissed the cold, wax cheek of the doll. He stiffened perceptibly, drew back in amazement and looked again at the doll. Then he trotted to Taylor. It was apparent that Jasper had met a mystery. For the rest of his visit he kept looking inquiringly at the doll.

"He is fond of kising people he likes," said Taylor. "When he visited Mr. Taft in the White House, I asked the President to put some questions to Jasper.

"'Are you a Mason?' asked the President.

"Jasper barked assent, nodding his head.

"'Give him the grip and the countersign,' I said.

"Jasper shook hands with Mr. Taft and whispered in his ear. The President laughed, whereupon Jasper gave him a moist kiss full upon his cheek. My heart went down in my boots, and I expected to be hustled right out of there, but a great laugh came from the President.

Jasper and the Bull.

"After traveling through the West, both Jasper and I were tired, and I thought it would be a good idea to take him to some quiet farm where for a week or so he could rest, be free and play about the field like other dogs. It was a lonely place, quiet, secluded, and so when I went to bed I did not take much pains to lock our door. Jasper always sleeps in the same room with me, on his own blanket.

"As I rolled into bed, I said; 'Now, Jasper, tomorrow morning you can go out and frisk and play and be natural, but don't forget that you are a gentleman.'

"He has never been allowed to play with other dogs, and because of his great intelligence and dignity I hardly expected him to be what you might call a thoroughly natural dog. When I woke the next morning he was gone, and the lady of the house said he had stepped out to the fields. I hunted for him in growing alarm for half an hour and then heard a frightened bark from the pasture. He had followed one of the cows up the path after discovering that she would run when he barked at her, and had ventured at her heels right into the middle of the herd where the cattle and an ugly looking bull had completely surrounded him and with lowered heads were preparing to finish him. He was thoroughly scared, and looked out appealingly to me. It was apparent that he realized his danger, and after being rescued he was very content to let the cows alone. He didn't do anything more ferocious than chase squirrels and woodchucks for the rest of his vacation.

Dines With Scientists.

"No one ever tried to steal him but once. I had put him to bed after cooking his supper myself, as I always do, and was downstairs in the hotel talking with the proprietor at 11 o'clock at night when Jasper began barking ferociously. Thinking that he was simply lonesome in a strange place and wanted me to come up to our room, I went up and scolded him severely. For answer he went over to the window and stared up at the sash until I went over, after telling him to stop his foolishness. But the next moment I was ashamed, for there, stuck in the crack between the two sashes, was a kitchen fork, with which some one had been trying to pry open the catch. I never scolded him again for barking in the night.

Meets Justice Day.

"The day we went to see the President I was a little alarmed at something he did. Mr. Taft had invited a number of persons to meet Jasper, among them a very distinguished looking man wearing a fine black coat. He was in the next room and the door was open. I said to Jasper: 'Go into the other room and bring in the gentleman.'

"Jasper trotted out to the other room where the man was talking with some-one, seized his coat tails in his mouth and gently but firmly and expeditiously dragged him in and led him up to Mr. Taft, who was greatly amused.

"'This,' said Mr. Taft to me, with a twinkle in his eyes, 'is Mr. Justice Day of the United States Supreme Court.'

"For a moment I could find no words to apologize, but Justice Day laughed and patted Jasper and it was all right."

"WAR LORD" OF AUSTRIA GUEST OF KING GEORGE

Close Approach of Archduke Ferdnand to Throne Brings Distinguished Honors.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, and his consort, the Duchess of Hohenberg, arrived in London today. They will remain here until Monday, when they proceed to Windsor Castle as the guests of King George and Queen Mary.

The Archduke and his wife, although frequent visitors to England as private persons, have never been here "officially" and even this visit is not an official one for, as the Duchess is not of royal birth, she cannot be placed in an equality with her husband at royal functions.

Now that the Archduke, on account of the great age of the Emperor of Austria, is believed to be within reasonable distance of the throne, the governments of Europe are anxious to show some attention to him and his wife. Emperor William as the ally of the Emperor of Austria has frequently done this, and now that there is nothing incompatible in the interests of Austria and England, King George is anxious to do the same.

Hearing that the Archduke and Duchess were to visit the Duke of Portland at Welbeck Abbey, the King asked them to pay a visit to Windsor and enjoy some pheasant shooting in the royal coverts before going to Welbeck. The invitation was immediately accepted.

The Archduke, as Inspector General of the Austro-Hungarian Army and Navy is virtual "war lord" of the dual monarchy and looms large in all considerations of European politics. His ascent to the throne is looked forward to with some uneasiness.

TIGER PENALTIES HELP WASHINGTON KEEP DOWN SCORE

Officials Twice Set Back Missouri Eleven With Touchdowns in Sight —Pikers Lose 19-0.

By W. J. O'Connor.

AS advertised, the Missouri Tigers whipped the Washington U. Pikers at Francis Field, yesterday afternoon, in their annual football skirmish. The ultimate count was 19—0, all of Missouri's touchdowns coming in the second half when Washington was worn and weary.

Missouri had a vastly superior team —heavier, faster and better drilled and had the field been dry the Tigers could reasonably have expected to double their score. But the field was water-sogged and slow, permitting of hardly any forward passes, which were hazardous under the conditions.

Missouri relied entirely on the old army game of football, bucking the Piker line and skirting the ends for all their gains. The Tigers tried only one pass and it was successful for seven yards. Washington's much vaunted open play never materialized, although in the waning moments of the game, the Pikers rattled off five passes, two of which were good for gains. Two were intercepted.

Pikers' Attack Weak.

Washington seldom had possession of the ball and when they did, the Pikers couldn't advance it. Only three times in the whole game did the proteges of Bill Edmunds make first down. Missouri made first down 20 times, carrying the ball for a total of 483 yards on rushes, against Washington's meager total of 28 yards.

A combination of fortunate breaks early in the game beat the Tigers back from the Washington goal and saved the Pikers from being scored on in the first half. Missouri was penalized heavily, two penalties in the first quarter depriving the enemy of a golden chance to score. One penalty of 15 yards in the second quarter, followed a long run by McWilliams who planted the ball within striking distance of the Pikers' goal. The ball was brought back and Missouri was penalized.

Washington excelled in one department—kicking. "Pooch" Lewis, the Pikeway fullback, had a decided edge over Shepard, the Missouri kicker. Indeed, it was Lewis' long kicks, which had the height to let Washington ends make their tackles, that saved the Pikeway goal time and again.

Standing on his own goal line late in the last quarter, Lewis booted a spiral that eluded the Missouri safety men and tumbled over end to Missouri's 25-yard line, when McWilliams wrapped himself around it in a mud puddle. This long drive neutralized the effect of a series of smashing gains by Moore, Wiggins and McWilliams, who had marched almost the length of the field.

The Pikeway line was no match for Missouri. The heavy Tiger forwards broke through savagely and, almost times without number, smothered the Pikeway plays in their incipiency. Pothoff and Gray couldn't get started on their end runs and when they elected to hit the line they were bowled over backwards as though colliding with a Frisco freight.

Coach Brewer's Machine Hits Its Stride at Start of Third Period

MISSOURI showed the best interference seen on a local gridiron this season. In line-plunging the man with the ball was preceded by two backs who toppled the secondary defense with dispatch and precision. Unless nabbed from behind, the Tiger runner always went to the last safety man before being downed.

When the third period opened it was evident that Missouri was geared up to score. McWilliams, on a fake run, turned inside of tackle for big gains often. He was assisted by Moore and Wiggans, who skirted the end behind good interference and gained almost 10 yards on every try.

This trio carried the ball 65 yards on one triumphant march and then McWilliams went outside Washington's left tackle for a touchdown. He promptly kicked the subsequent goal.

Missouri played its best ball in this quarter and towards the fag end of the period Wiggans, Moore, Wilson and McWilliams ran through the Pikers at will. It was Wiggans who scored the second touchdown, going around Perrings' end after Mr. Perrings had been boxed and eliminated by Missouri's fanlike interference. McWilliams missed this goal.

In the final period Missouri intercepted a Pikeway pass on their own 20-yard line and in short order rushed the ball to the 4-yard line, where the Pikers surprised by a determined stand, resisting three attacks on their line without yielding a touchdown. A penalty of one yard, half the distance to the goal line, then seemed to disconcert Washington, and while the Pikers were watching for an attack at center, Lake slipped outside tackle for a touchdown. On the kick-out Missouri fumbled, losing a chance at the goal.

The wet field detracted not a little from the beauty of the game, depriving Washington of a chance to use its open play. However, had the field been dry, Missouri's weight advantage probably would have told in a still bigger score.

The lineup:

Washington.	Position.	Missouri.
Ransom	Left tackle	Kemper
Graham	Left guard	Drumm
Stewart	Center	Gallagher
Kammerer	Right guard	Clay
Scherer	Right tackle	Speelman

JAYHAWKERS YIELD TO NEBRASKA ON A WET FIELD, 9 TO 0

Kansas Finds Minnesota Shift Worthless in Mud and Is Unable to Score.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 15.—The University of Nebraska football team defeated the University of Kansas here this afternoon, 9—0, in a game of mostly straight, old-fashioned football, played on a field ankle-deep in mud under a drizzling rain. Both teams repeatedly made first downs, but Nebraska's work at crucial points in the game was the better.

The Northern players frequently circled the Kansas ends for good gains and the Kansas line again and again was shattered by the plunging Rutherford, Purdy and Howard, Nebraska's backs.

Kansas played fiercely, particularly in the third period, when three first downs were made in succession, two by Steuwe and one by Greenlees. Nebraska attempted many open plays but failed repeatedly to work the forward pass and lost ground on fake kicks. Because of the wet ball and uncertain footing, fumbling was frequent and both sides often were penalized for off-side plays and holding.

Minnesota Shift a Fizzle.

The muddy field made the Minnesota shift, on which Kansas had expected to make great gains, ineffective.

The first score came in the second period, when a series of bucks placed the ball on the Kansas 20-yard line. Max Towle, the Nebraska quarter, dropped back to the 30-yard line and neatly dropped the ball over for a field goal.

In the final period Towle returned a kick to the Kansas 20-yard line. A series of bucks put it within the 10-yard line and Halligan smashed it over. The kick-out failed, making Nebraska's total 9 points.

Tigers Did Not Show Full Hand Against Pikers

Neither Physical Nor Strategic Resources Drawn On to Defeat Local Men.

By E. B. Cochems,
Coach of St. Louis U.'s Famous Football Machine of 1907-1908.

That score of 19 to 0, to my mind, does not represent the difference in ability of the two teams, Missouri and Washington, on their showing yesterday at Francis Field.

Undoubtedly Coach Brewer held back many plays especially designed for Kansas. Besides this he did not place on the field his full quota of attacking strength.

The field was soggy and militated against fast playing. This condition also made impractical the carrying out of those nicer plays that depend for success on accurate execution.

Washington was superior in two departments, kicking and passing. The Pikers' passes were accurate, well-timed and well directed. But for the alert defense of the Missouri backs Washington would have scored in the fourth quarter.

Tigers' End Runs Good.

Missouri's best plays were end runs interspersed with sharp bucks in the line. These were split or delayed plays and worked regularly for substantial gains.

The interference of the Missouri backs, and even linemen, when the runner got beyond the line of scrimmage, was of a very high order.

The many Missouri substitutes who graced the sidelines indicates that Missouri is taking time by the forelock and that Brewer is preparing for the coming football seasons. If more coaches exercised the same prescience, football slumps would be rare occurrences.

All in all, it was a fine game. Every player gave everything he had in him, and, above all, as far as I could see, played cleanly.

McKinley and Manual Unable to Score in Hard-Fought Contest

On a mud-covered field, McKinley High and Manual Training School played to a 0—0 tie on the C. B. C. campus yesterday. The contest was featured by fierce battling in the fourth period, when Manual players brought the ball within McKinley's 10-yard line, but were unable to score.

The teams were evenly matched as to weight and handicapped alike by the heavy condition of the gridiron. Unlike a majority of the prep school games this season, the match was void of open play, line smashing tactics being used almost exclusively.

The lineup:

McKinley.	Positions.	Manual.
Cloud	Left tackle	French
Macey	Left guard	Kinsey
Childs	Center	Anderson
Nobse	Right guard	Traubel
Glasgow	Right tackle	Golterman
Methudy	Right end	Frichle
Monnig	Quarterback	Lenz-Finley
French	Left halfback	Baum
Blades	Fullback	Fuelch
Snyder	Right halfback	Hammerstein

Referee—Connett (Virginia). Umpire—Turner (Dartmouth). Head linesman—Cook (Illinois). Length of period—12 minutes.

BRODERICK IS VICTOR IN GOLF FINAL AT TRIPLE A

A. L. Broderick yesterday defeated E. C. Sullivan, 5 up and 4, in the final round of the Triple A golf championship. At the end of the first 18 holes, Sullivan was leading, 2 up. Broderick braced in the final rounds and won handily.

Previous winners of the Triple A title have had their names engraved on the big cup, which will go to the player winning it three times. The names already inscribed and the order in which they were put there are: Christian Kenney, Frank Fitzgibbons, C. L. Butts, J. W. Bowman, Rufus Clabaugh, Carl Piepho and A. L. Broderick.

OLD STYLE PLAY GIVES MICHIGAN GAME FROM PENN

Craig, Galt and Hughitt Smash Through Quaker Defense and Land 13 to 0 Victory.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 15.—Using the same terrific line attack that crushed Syracuse, the football eleven of the University of Michigan today defeated Pennsylvania 13 to 0. Michigan simply battered the defense of the Easterners to pieces. At no time during the game was Pennsylvania even dangerous.

Pennsylvania's attack was as erratic as her defense was mediocre. Now and then, at wide intervals, one of Brooke's men skirted a Michigan end for six or seven yards. Attempts to pierce Michigan's line were so unsuccessful during the first half, they were practically abandoned during the final period. Pennsylvania, the same as Michigan, gained little from forward pass plays. It was a distinct victory for old fashioned, sledge hammer football.

There were few sensations. The greatest of these came during the first period when Michigan secured the ball in Pennsylvania territory. The linemen opened big holes and the Wolverine backs did the rest. Craig, Galt and Hughitt seldom had to be content with gains of less than five yards, and, finally, Craig crossed the goal line. Patterson kicked goal.

Forward Pass Nets Gain.

One of the few forward passes successfully executed helped give Michigan a second touchdown. The play was made during the second period. It was a toss from Hughitt to Lyons, netting 25 yards, and it put the Yost men within striking distance of the blue and red goal. Craig crashed through tackle for a five-yard gain, which scored the touchdown. Patterson's attempt to kick the goal failed, the ball hitting the cross-bar.

Holding in the line cost Michigan a third touchdown. In the third period Paterson dropped back apparently to attempt a field goal. A trick play resulted, however, and Hughitt sprinted 30 yards for a score. The ball was brought back and Michigan was penalized 15 yards.

Coach Brooke made a desperate effort to strengthen his eleven in the second half. He called on the crippled Minds to replace Avery at fullback, and the fleet Marshall took Merrill's place at quarterback. Pennsylvania then shifted to the open game on offense, using Minds to start forward passes, but they were invariably unsuccessful.

Crowd Braves Rain and Snow.

More than 20,000 persons witnessed the struggle. The grand stand and bleachers were jammed to capacity and hundreds stood in the rain and snow throughout the game.

The lineup:

Michigan (13)	Positions.	Pennsylvania (0)
Musser	Left tackle	Crane
Cochrane	Left guard	Journeay
Patterson (Capt.)	Center	Simpton
Allmendinger	Right guard	Carter
Pontius	Right tackle	Harris
Lyons	Right end	Koons
Hughett	Quarterback	Merrill
Craig	Left halfback	Young (Capt)
Galt	Right halfback	Hill
Torbett	Fullback	Avery

Referee—Eckersall, Chicago. Umpire—Wrenn, Harvard. Head linesman—Marshall, Harvard. Time of periods—15m.

Michigan scoring: Touchdowns—Craig, 2. Goals from touchdowns—Patterson, one in two attempts. Substitutions: Michigan—McHale for Cochrane; Scott for Pontius; Catlett for Galt; Quinn for Torbett. Pennsylvania—Murdock for Peden; Bloom for Murdock; Wolf for Carter; McCall for Koons; Marshall for Merrill; Bolger for Hill; Minds for Avery; Avery for Bolger; Bolger for Minds.

Central-Smith Game Postponed.

The scheduled game between Central High and Smith Academy at Francis Field, yesterday, was postponed to next Tuesday afternoon. The game was to have been played on the Washington University field, but the W. U. officials refused to permit the contest, fearing the prep school teams would put the gridiron in poor shape for the afternoon game. The teams welcomed the postponement.

Tigers' Game Stand Near Finish Halts Yale 2 Yards From Victory

With Each Eleven Owning One Field Goal, New Haven Men Lack Punch to Put Over a Touchdown in Four Tries, During Final Period.

By Herbert Reed,
Former Cornell Star and Post-Dispatch's Eastern Football Representative.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.

YALE and Princeton fought to a tie on Yale field today, the score 3 to 3, Guernsey making a drop kick for the Elis and Baker scoring by the same route for Princeton.

The beautiful punting of Law stood in the way of Yale from start to finish, and this young man had quite as much to do as any one with the Tiger showing.

The Elis had one golden chance to strike for victory, letting the ball go on the forward pass route on the fourth down.

Hobey Baker was unable to get under way, save now and then, in carrying back kicks, and Wilson, the Yale quarter, outshone him in that department of the game. All the Yale backs, as a matter of fact, handled kicks well and carried them back to good effect. Ainsworth, for instance, nipped one punt on the jump when it seemed certain that the ball would be free, with any sort of luck.

Yale turned out a lively, fighting team that carried the battle to the Tigers, and the New Haven men were provided with a running attack that was dangerous at all times.

Right at the start it was apparent that there would be a kicking duel, and the Tiger booter began to shine at once. One of his kicks covered 57 yards, and taking plenty of room in which to make his drives, he was much of the time master of the situation. Had he been accorded the support he deserved there might have been another story to tell.

Yale's Attack Strong.

The old Princeton method of playing the ends, however, gave the Yale running game the opportunity it sought, and the Elis turned on an attack that was as well-devised as anything that has been shown this season.

The Yale eleven was very much on its toes from start to finish, and looked like a winner from the start. The Yale line, which has been a doubtful quantity from the beginning of the season, lived up to the possibilities that have been there all the time and the Elis smeared the Princeton version of the Minnesota shift with great regularity.

Law began his pretty kicking after the kick-off, there being no wind to speak of, and the light being good for the kicking game.

Wilson snatched the ball on the jump—a promise of the good work he was to do later in the game. Ainsworth could not make an inch and the Yale kicking game was opened up on the second down. Baker was promptly smeared on his own 30-yard line, and it was at once apparent that he was thoroughly covered. Law was thrown for a loss on a fumble, and Baker could gain nothing on the shift, which apparently was the entire Princeton stock in trade. There was nothing to it but to call upon Law once more and the Tiger hoisted the ball to Wilson at the latter's 40-yard line.

Yale Ends Smother Baker.

Another exchange of kicks gave the ball to Yale at the Eli's own 15-yard mark. Wilson snatched five yards on a run from kick formation and the ball was promptly booted to Baker on his own 40-yard line. Law lost six yards on a fake kick and the shift failing to work, the great Tiger kicker sent the leather sailing down to the black-haired Wilson at his own 35-yard mark. Here Yale started the run on first down that was a feature of the Eli type of play throughout.

Ainsworth picked up eight yards and then the ball was booted once more to Baker. Another exchange of kicks the Tiger captain signalling for a fair catch, gave the ball to Princeton 44 yards in front of the Tiger goal. The Tigers kept up their kicking game, Law making a fairly short kick that Ainsworth snapped up on the run. Ketcham dropped out of the line to talk with his quarter, with the result that there was no gain off tackle, and there followed immediately the first "break" of the game, Baker fumbling the kick and Yale getting the ball. The advantage was short-lived, however, for the leather went to the Tigers and Law hoisted it to the black-haired Yale quarter.

Baker's Fumble Gives Guernsey Chance to Kick Yale's Field Goal

WITH the leather at the center of the field, Knowles drove the ball into the corner. This maneuver put Princeton in a tight situation, but Law worked his team out of it by making a pretty kick from behind his own goal line. Wilson made a fair catch which was the wise thing to do, but it availed the Eli's little. Glick, after a kicking exchange, made a pretty gain in a fake kick, but there was nothing for it, apparently, but to resume the kicking game. Law hoisted the ball to Wilson at his 40-yard mark, and the kick was promptly returned. The Tigers were gaining on exchange of kicks, but Baker fumbled again and although the ball was recovered, Princeton was again in a bad situation. The subsequent boost to Wilson was carried back to the center of the field by that very alert young man and the following exchange of kicks found the Tigers in possession of the ball on their own 25-yard line. Baker's fumble on his own 25-

Harvard Tones Up for Yale by Walloping Brown

Crimson Machine, Shy Three Regulars, Runs Up 37—0 Score Against Brunonians.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 15.—The Harvard football machine, readjusted in essential points of attack and defense, in preparation for the game with Yale, was tried out against Brown today. The Crimson totaled 37 points, holding the Brunonians scoreless.

Harvard practically brought three elevens into play, and the first string players, Logan, O'Brien and Trumbull, who went to New Haven with Coach Haughton to watch Yale in action against Princeton, were not missed.

The first Crimson team played only through the first two periods, making 17 points on touchdowns by Brickley and Hardwick, who put the ball over after a long forward pass and on Brickley's goal from placement at 38 yards. Brilliant end running by Mahan made the first Crimson touchdown possible. His long distance punting gave Harvard repeated advantages in the exchange of kicks.

The Crimson's scoring ambitions seemed increased rather than diminished with the appearance of substitutes. A fumble by Gardner of Brown on his 25-yard line was recovered by Coolidge and the Harvard end carried the ball to the goal. Bettle and Willetts were towers of plunging strength in the new Crimson back field and, alternating in bull-like rushes, hammered the Brown line until Bettle went over for another touchdown.

Harvard's last score was a sensational one. Mills, substitute guard, caught the ball after fumbling it on a Brown kick-off and, eluding Brown's first and secondary defense, raced 82 yards to the Brunonian goal. Brown was never dangerous.

Lay Off Princeton--You're Taking a Long Chance When You "Buck the Tiger"

BILLIKENS RALLY LATE IN GAME, BUT ARE BEATEN, 34-0

Marquette's Whirlwind Attack in First Half Sweeps St. Louis U. to Defeat.

ROUGH TACTICS FEATURE

Milwaukee Team Frequently Punished for Rules Infractions in Final Periods.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 15.—Marquette University defeated St. Louis University today, 34 to 0, in a game marked by St. Louis great come-back in the final half. Marquette, however, tore the Billikens to pieces for the entire first half, and it was not until they came in for the second half that the St. Louis team showed what power of offensive play they possessed.

Analytically, Marquette defeated St. Louis by a whirlwind start, which so demoralized the visitors that it took them the entire first half to get really into the spirit of the game. Marquette first smashed the tackles to pieces, until St. Louis was letting the locals through on either side for good gains, and would vary the style of attack by unexpected tricky, and forward passes. Marquette scored before St. Louis was able to get the ball in their own hands, and scored again with St. Louis only having four downs before Marquette got back into offensive work.

Billikens Scare Marquette.

St. Louis, however, came out with flying colors in the second half, for the one touchdown Marquette did secure in the third period was after a spectacular getaway, and St. Louis repeatedly frightened Marquette by threatening the locals' goal. Marquette was unable except for the single touchdown, to get within striking distance of St. Louis' goal but twice in the period, and the final whistle stopped one threatened touchdown. Marquette, through a spectacular dodging run by Doyle, for 45 yards, placed the oval on St. Louis' two-yard line, just as the whistle blew.

Once before in the half, Marquette tried for a touchdown, and actually sent a man across the St. Louis line, but the locals were called back, the score disallowed, and the locals penalized 25 yards for rough play.

The game was marred in the latter half by much Marquette rough play. As a result of one fist battle in the open field, Trowbridge and Mackey, star guards, were both ordered off the field. Marquette was repeatedly penalized for off-side play, and St. Louis did not escape without penalties also.

Forward Passes Fail.

It was essentially a game of the new football. Forward passes were used by both teams, the quarterback kick was attempted, and both teams made some beautiful forward passes, for big games. Some equally pretty attempts, however, were frustrated by both teams, and St. Louis particularly showed its class by breaking up Marquette's favorite trick, the old shoestring, with variations. Marquette, with two signals given together, places a runner and two men for interference on the side line, ready for a pass and run, trusting to catching the opponents unawares. Every time this trick was tried, Billiken tacklers broke up the play.

The Billikens were given a heart-to-heart talk by Dennie between halves, and went on the field with fresh determination, which immediately brought results. Receiving the kick-off, St. Louis showed the form which its supporters have come to expect as the system of the squad, and in five minutes had the oval on Marquette's 20-yard line.

Sluggers Are Punished.

Here Marquette held desperately for downs, and it was at this stage that Trowbridge and Mackey did their heavyweight boxing stunt. The combined efforts of both teams separated them until the officials could order them off the field. In the confusion following this mixup, Marquette sent Prescott around the left end. St. Louis was expecting nothing on this end, because Marquette's left end rested on the side line. By a shift Marquette led St. Louis to look for a sprint around the right end, and instead Prescott skirted the line, with two men for interference, and when he stopped, tackled by Gassoway, was on St. Louis' 20-yard line. Whalen then carried the ball across for the final score.

St. Louis took the ball on downs, and with excellent work by Bradley in the final period, when it was so dark that spectators could only see a dark spot on the field, and the players could barely see the ball, good gains were made, but finally the Marquette men, after being kept away from the St. Louis goal, worked a forward pass, and then Du Framme, who went in at quarter, went across the line himself. There had been rough work, however, and the touchdown was disallowed, Marquette being sent back to the 30-yard line. Then Doyle slipped through the shadows, and when he stopped the ball was on St. Louis' 2-yard line. And there the game ended with the official whistle. The lineup:

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—The annual 10-mile run of the Central A. A. U. was held here today, with 16 starters, and was won by Fred Cameron in [illegible]. J. M. Ray was second and the favorite, Sidney Hatch, was third. All three ran under colors of the Illinois Athletic Club.

SPORT SALAD

by L. C. DAVIS

THE WITCHING HOUR.

IT is the witching hour of noon,
The stars are twinkling in the sky,
The silent plowman roars a tune
And drowsy tinklings greet the eye.

The calf is in his eerie perch,
The eagle winds across the lea;
The katy-dids have gone to church
And left the world to you and me.

From yonder ivy-mantled tower,
The faithful cricket bays the moon;
The tadpole skips from flower to flower
And sips the honey with a spoon.

Beneath yon rugged yew tree's shade
The cows lie basking in the sun;
The farmer takes his trusty spade,
And shoots a rabbit on the run.

Soldan Plows Through Sea of Mud and Defeats Cadet Eleven by 15 to 0

The McGray-Dewey Military Academy team, one of the fastest in Southern Illinois, was defeated by the Soldan High eleven at Pastime Park yesterday, 15—0. The players waddled about in a virtual sea of mud. This did not hamper the open play of the winners, however, as they negotiated about 150 yards on forward passes alone.

Touchdowns were scored by Klein and Smith, while a place kick from the 20-yard line by Swingley raised the total to 15 points. Klein's allround playing featured.

The lineup:

Soldan.	Position.	McGray-Dewey.
Peers	Left tackle	W. Ramshaw
Root	Left guard	L. Rawson
Cunliffe	Center	Schermick
White	Right guard	Buetel

COLGATE HUMBLES HEAVY SYRACUSE TEAM, 35—13

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Colgate defeated Syracuse in the annual big game of Central New York today by a score of 35 to 13.

Colgate ran through the Orange line with ease during the first 10 minutes of play and scored a touchdown. The Syracuse team held in the second period and Colgate was only able to score a goal from the field.

With the score 10 to nothing against them the Syracuse team came on to the field with renewed vigor in the second half and scored two touchdowns.

Huntington, the brilliant Colgate quarterback, then went through the entire Orange team for a touchdown from the kickoff and from that time on the result was never in doubt.

ROBINSON WILL COACH REGIMENT TRACK TEAM

Dr. Jesse Robinson, one of the speediest sprinters ever developed in St. Louis, and lieutenant of Company F of the First Regiment, has been appointed athletic director of the First Regiment. Lieut. Robinson will have charge of the track and swimming teams. He will coach the track and field candidates and will supervise the work of Arthur Senior, who has been made swimming coach.

Bimonthly track and swimming meets will begin within two weeks. Col. M. G. Edwards has appointed Lieut. Biendieck as basketball coach and Lieut. Hubbell as coach of the indoor baseball team.

The Regiment teams expect to make a good showing against the M. A. C. in all branches of sport this winter.

Intermediates Defeat Soldan Five.

The Intermediates of Central Y. M. C. A. last night defeated Soldan High School at basket ball, 38—25. The game was played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Lineup:

Intermediates.	Position.	Soldan.
A. Hites	Left forward	Ross
L. Bussman	Right forward	Marsh
Land	Center	Schupp
G. Healy	Left guard	Ruhl
Yemmy	Right guard	McCormick

Millikin Defeats Wesleyan.

DECATUR, Ill., Nov. 15.—Millikin defeated Illinois Wesleyan here today on an extremely muddy field, 12 to 0. Millikin scored in the first quarter on straight football. The second touchdown was made in the third when MacFarland fumbled an onside kick and Holcomb, subbing for Hoover, fell on the ball back of the line. Numerous forward passes failed. The game was called early in the fourth quarter on account of darkness.

ST. LOUIS' NEWEST BOXING CLUB TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

Card of Three All-Star Bouts Will Feature Inaugural of Queensberry A. C.

PACKEY MAKES OBJECTION

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

The Queensberry Athletic Club, with headquarters at the old Northwest Liederkranz hall, 3940 Easton avenue, will throw open its doors for the first time Wednesday evening when an all-star card of three bouts will be offered to its members. This is the program:

Young Denny of New Orleans, vs. Tommy Maloney of New York, eight rounds at 145 pounds.

Although it is the opening venture of the new club, the all-star card of bouts will go on regardless of the size of the "house."

Manager McNamara reports that the membership of the new club is swelling daily. Prospective members may join the Q. A. C. up to Wednesday at 3940 Easton avenue and at 518 Holland building.

The club has appointed Walter Bates, a former St. Louisan, now of Kansas City, to referee the bouts.

McFarland Is Balking.

Packey McFarland, the Chicago near-lightweight, may hold out for the selection of a referee to his liking for his bout with Harry Trendall at the Coliseum, Dec. 4. In Chicago yesterday, McFarland said that all arrangements for the match had been made, save the selection of a referee satisfactory to him. He may object to Eddie Randall, the M. A. C. boxing instructor, who is the National A. C. official referee, and insist that a Chicago man be named.

Emil Thiery, who handles McFarland's business, yesterday mailed a $100 check to St. Louis as appearance guarantee for McFarland.

C. A. C. Takes No Action.

The Columbia A. C. has not yet determined whether it wants to take another fling at the professional boxing game. The directors were to have met Friday to decide upon a proposed George Kirkwood-Benny McGovern bout, but failed to get together.

With the announcement that the C. A. C. was to stage a bout, Ollie Kirk bobbed up. The near-featherweight came from Dayton where he shaded Joe Hartman of Cleveland in a 15-round bout last week. Ollie believes he would prove a better card with Kirkwood than a Kirkwood-McGovern bout. Kirk is now boxing around the 125 and 126 mark, a weight agreeable to Kirkwood.

McGovern Is Agreeable.

Kirkwood and McGovern may have some hitch over the weight, if they are invited to box. According to Tony Ortel, McGovern's manager, McGovern will let Kirkwood come in at 124 pounds ringside, as suggested by Kirkwood, and have McGovern do 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Brennan Due Today.

Kayo Brennan of Buffalo, who isn't as Irish as his name would imply, inasmuch as his real monaker is William Brenner and is called "Dutch," will arrive today for his scheduled eight-round bout with Marty Rowan of St. Louis before the Future City A. C. Tuesday evening. Brennan has a remarkably good record, having lost only one bout in more than 60. That was a 10-round affair with Mike Gibbons, the latter weighing 161 pounds and having only a slight shade. Most of Brennan's victories were scored via the knockout route, and if Rowan shows and aggressiveness Tuesday, the Buffalo boy expects to add another kayo to his string.

As a semi-windup to Tuesday's bout, Tommy Sullivan has matched Tommy Deakin, the Britisher, and Johnny Paizza, the Quaker City boy. Paizza shaded Deakin in an eight-round bout a month ago. The curtain raiser will be between Archie McLeod and Al Hughes.

Action for Foley.

Jimmy Foley, the Canadian boxer, will probably be a busy individual from now on. He may be called upon to meet Tommy Dixon, the Kansas City featherweight, before the Future City A. C., Nov. 25, if Tommy Sullivan can get Dixon here. Arrangements have all but been made for Foley to meet Johnny Paizza, the Philadelphian, in the semi-windup to the main event at the Coliseum Dec. 4.

McGAY'S PLAYING LETS AMHERST BEAT WILLIAMS

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 15.—Amherst triumphed over Williams in their annual football encounter today by a score of 12—0. Captain McGay of Amherst carried the ball over the Williams line for a touchdown in the first period, and subsequently added two goals from the field. His punting also gave his team a constantly recurring advantage.

The Williams line was weak, and under the charging attack of the Amherst forwards was torn apart. Through the holes the Amherst backs, playing old-style football, repeatedly made gains.

MACK ALLISON LOSES $64 CLAIM AGAINST BROWNS

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15.—The National Baseball Commission today dismissed the claim of Player Mack Allison for $64 against the St. Louis club of the American League or the Kansas City club of the American Association.

Allison was released on Aug. 20 by St. Louis to Kansas City and contended that $64 was due him as salary from one of the two clubs, but the commission decided that he was not entitled to the money.

yard line gave the Eli's the ball and Ainsworth promptly tore off eight yards on a pretty tackle play. The back shift was called into action, but it was not good enough, apparently, to pound out the distance, and Guernsey was sent in to make the most of the opportunity for a goal from field. Guernsey's kick was low and hard, and he probably could have put it over for an even greater distance.

Baker Kicks a Goal.

After the kick off the Tigers turned loose the shift and sent Streit into the guard position with little result. Here the Tigers took a chance with the forward pass, but Wilson was on the alert as usual and intercepted it. The Tigers lost here one of their best chances of scoring. Baker, badly hurried by the Yale forwards, made a fair catch at the center of the field, and Law made his poorest kick of the day, Wilson making a pretty run back to the 30-yard line.

Twice more in the game Wilson made pretty runs back with caught kicks, once for 35 yards. It was early in the second half that Baker had his real opportunity, and he was equal to the occasion, shooting the ball over the bar from the 33-yard mark. Again the kicking duel was resumed, Princeton gaining on the exchanges, but failing to hold the advantage because of the superior ability of the Elis to carry back kicks. With the ball once more in Tiger territory Law was tackled for a loss and Baker failed to make an inch on the kick. The third quarter ended without further advantage to either side.

Yale Overlooks Opportunity.

With the opening of the fourth quarter, the game began to assume more of an indigo hue, for the Elis carried the fight to the Tigers. Ainsworth nipped a kick at the 30-yard mark, after Elis had driven the ball to Baker in the corner of the field. On a delayed pass Ainsworth ripped off a pretty run of 25 yards and it seemed right here that the Elis had a chance for victory. Wilson chose to hurl the forward pass on the fourth down, however, although the Yale running game had already proved itself, and the better chance seemed to lie in a drive off tackle. This was really the big moment of the game, and the wasted opportunity was all the more noticeable.

There were no more real openings for a score by either side. With the exception of a blocked kick by Phillips and the general all-round work of Ballin, the Tiger line was outplayed much of the time. The Elis had a faster and a better charge than the Tigers, and although the work of the Eli back field was more than merely commendable, it was the line, after all, that had the edge on Princeton. Down the field Avery, Carter and later Brann, were sharper than the Princeton ends, and Talbott and Warren were through and tackling behind the line much of the time. A peculiarity of Marting's work was that after he had made his pass he looked behind him to see how the play was working out, without at the same time losing an opportunity to play the type of game that has made Yale centers famous.

Yale Outdoes Tigers in Rushing the Ball

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 15.

AN analysis of the offensive and defensive play for the two teams shows the remarkable manner in which Yale outshone the players from Princeton, today.

By rushing Yale gained 139 yards in 44 plays to Princeton's 37 in 22 efforts.

Three first downs were scored against the Tigers' solitary gain in this respect.

Thirty-five kicks netted 1214 yards against 1185 yards for Princeton in 33 kicks.

Yale regained 180 yards by running back Law's punts, while Princeton picked up but 143 yards in a similar manner.

The Tigers tried three forward passes, two of which were uncompleted, and one intercepted; while Yale's lone attempt in this respect also went for naught because of a fumble when a touchdown hung on the catching of the ball.

Tiger Version of Minnesota Shift Is Failure Against Alert Eli Warriors

AT guard Ketcham was at his best, although the burden of the captaincy seemed to weigh rather heavily on him. Trenkman, the Tiger pivot man, was a little off in his passing, but in other respects played a good game. The defense in the work of the two lines, in fact, seemed to be one of method rather than individuals. The Yale forwards were more aggressive than the Tigers and seemed to carry their charge through better. Law alone accounted for fully 50 yards of the territory covered by the Tigers, and had the other departments of the Princeton plays been up to the same mark there might have been another story to tell.

The Tiger version of the Minnesota shift failed, as most keen followers of football had predicted that it would, when put to the test. The Tigers were unable to catch the Eli line-men off their feet, and the Yale back shift proved much more effective that the Tiger maneuver. The orange and black showed practically nothing else in the way of offense and it would seem to be demonstrated that on either a wet or a dry field the Princeton team will have to use something else.

Minor Leaguers May Not Admit Cuban Players

Doubtful Whether Islanders Will Be Given Official Recognition.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 5.—In an investigation of a case brought by player Hines, the National Board of Arbitration of Minor Baseball Leagues today found that the Traverse City club of the Michigan State League had violated a provision of the law in relation to salary limits. For the offense, the club must pay a fine of $100. The claim brought by Hines was allowed also.

To Secretary Farrell for further investigation was referred the application of the Cuban League for membership in the national association. It may be granted, but use of colored players on teams probably will cause its rejection. A few of the claims allowed today were:

W.-J. Team Defeats Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 15.—Playing a whirlwind brand of football, in which quickness had the better of strength, Washington and Jefferson College today defeated the University of Pittsburg by a score of 19 to 6. Washington and Jefferson had previously held Yale to a tie, nothing-to-nothing score, while the local university had defeated both Cornell and Carlisle.

HUGH DOHERTY AIMS TO LIFT DAVIS TENNIS CUP

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Hugh Lawrence Doherty, the former lawn tennis champion, chagrined over the loss of the Davis cup and the lack of promising talent among British players, intends to re-enter the game as one of England's hopes in the attempt to win back the cup next year.

Since Doherty gave up the title of champion in 1907 he has been seen only infrequently in public, but his game is said still to entitle him to be regarded as in the front rank.

Kohlemainen Sets Record.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Hannes Kohlemainen, the Finnish Olympic distance champion, running for the Irish-American Athletic Club today won the Metropolitan A. A. U. senior cross-country championship over the Van Cortlandt Park six-mile course. His time, 33:30 3-5 is a new record for this course. S. L. Leslie, of the Long Island A. C., finished second and R. Springsteen, Yonkers, Y. M. C. A., was third.

Colorado Star Gets Five Touchdowns.

FORT COLLINS, Colo., Nov. 15.—The Colorado Aggies overwhelmed the University of Wyoming here today, 61—0. Cross, the Aggies' captain, made five touchdowns, four of which were from the 30-yard line and two of the four on short end runs. Sorenson, the Aggies' quarter, made two touchdowns on short center bucks.

Dick Egan Joins Sox.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 15.—Dick Egan, of San Francisco, for six years second baseman for the Cincinnati Nationals signed today to make the trip around the world with the Chicago Americans. Egan will play second, replacing Schaefer, who will substitute and appear as a coach.

CHICAGO DEFEATS GOPHERS; CLINCH WESTERN HONORS

Maroon Players Perform in Excellent Style and Beat Minnesota, 13 to 7

STAGG DEFENSE IS GOOD

When Threatened in Final Period, Windy City Eleven Holds Enemy Safely.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 15.—Premier football honors of the Western Inter-Collegiate Conference for 1913 tonight rest with the University of Chicago by virtue of its 13 to 7 victory over the University of Minnesota on Northrup Field this afternoon.

Although the game was replete with flashes of individual brilliancy on the part of both winners and losers, credit for the victory must be practically equally apportioned among the Maroon players.

Nearly 25,000 spectators saw the Chicago eleven break down Minnesota's defense in the first period. Within 8 minutes of actual play, after a series of successful forward passes, Gray, the Maroon left half, scored the first touchdown from Minnesota's 2-yard line, where Norgren had placed the ball by a spectacular run of more than 25 yards. After the first touchdown, Minnesota's defense strengthened and for the next two quarters neither team scored.

Norgren Makes Second Score.

In the fourth period Chicago executed two forward passes that brought the ball to Minnesota's 3-yard line. Captain Norgren then hit the Minnesota line for two short jamming gains, which gave Chicago its second touchdown.

In the third period Minnesota, who heretofore had used only straight football, opened up with a number of forward passes and fake formations which proved excellent ground gainers. At no time, however, did Minnesota dangerously threaten the Chicago goal line until after Chicago had scored its second touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Shaughnessy, who was one of the most, if not the most brilliant individual player for Minnesota, was responsible directly for Minnesota's touchdown. Shaughnessy broke up the Chicago defense and carried the ball to within a few inches of the Maroons' goal line. Solon then going over for a touchdown.

Maroon Defense Holds.

At this juncture Minnesota rooters put forward a splendid display of enthusiasm, and their team seemed to respond vigorously to this stimulus from the crowds.

After Solon kicked the goal, Minnesota players began a desperate effort to tie the score, but the Maroon defense held firm and it was a case of "see-sawing" for the remainder of the contest.

Barron	Right Tackle	Goettler
B. Bierman	Right End	Baumgartner
Tollefson	Quarterback	Russell
Mattern	Right Half	Gray
Shaughnessy	Fullback	Pierce

Substitutions: Minnesota—Lawler for Tollefson; Fegan for B. Bierman; A. Bierman for Fegan; Mattern for A. Bierman; Fournier for B. Bierman; B. Bierman for McAlmon; A. Bierman for Mattern; McAlmon for B. Bierman. Chicago—Kennedy for Gray; Sparks for Huntington. Minnesota scoring—Touchdowns: Solon; goal from touchdown, Lawler. Chicago scoring—Touchdowns, Pierce, Norgren; goal from touchdown, Harris.

Officials—Referee, Masker (Northwestern); umpire, Benbrook (Michigan); head linesman, Capt. Mumm (West Point).

PENN STATE HOLDS NAVY TEAM TO 10--0 SCORE

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 15.—Pennsylvania State held Navy to a 10—0 score here today, and the game was not one in which Navy supporters can find much comfort. State was the first eleven this season to nearly equal Navy, and the midshipmen when met by real opposition did not show as well as it was hoped they would.

In line bucking Navy shoved Harrison across for a touchdown in the first period and Brown kicked goal. Brown was called on for a placement goal in the second period, after State held for downs inside the 10-yard line. In the fourth period the visitors five times held for downs inside their own one-yard line. These rockribbed defenses were the best exhibitions of gameness shown here for a long time.

Soccer Game Today.

The Stix, Baer & Fuller soccer team will hook up with the Famous-Barr team at Forest Park this afternoon. The Leaders will show several Scotchmen who are no novices at the game in their tilt with their rivals. Charlie Barrett, scout de luxe, of the Browns and Manager Gilbert will lead 200 rooters to cheer their favorites on to victory.

Georgia Still in Title Hunt.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 15.—The University of Georgia today won the right to fight Auburn for the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship of 1913, by defeating Georgia Tech here, 14 to 0, while Auburn for the first time in 20 years was vanquishing Vanderbilt, at Birmingham, 14 to 6. Georgia and Auburn next Saturday will play the deciding game here.

Creighton Scores 129 Points Against Omaha, Setting Modern Record

THE Creighton University team of Omaha, hung up a modern day record for total number of points scored in its game with Omaha University yesterday. The winners totaled 129 points and held the opposition scoreless. Only two other scores excel this, one by Princeton, 140, over Lafayette in 1880, and one by Yale, 130, over Wesleyan in 1886.

Princeton 140, Lafayette 0; 1880.
Yale 130, Wesleyan 0; 1886.
Princeton 115, Virginia 0; 1890.
Yale 113, Dartmouth 0; 1884.
Chicago 108, Minnesota 0; 1903.
Michigan 107, Iowa 0; 1902.
Yale 106, Wesleyan 0; 1887.
Gallaudet 108, Baltimore College 0; 1913.

Federal League Magnates Elect Jas. A. Gilmore

Lloyd Rickart Is Retained Secretary of Outlaw Organization at Chicago Meeting.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—James A. Gilmore of Chicago was today elected president of the Federal League at the annual meeting here. Mr. Gilmore was acting president during a large part of the past season.

M. F. Bramley of Cleveland was chosen vice-president, John A. George of Indianapolis was elected treasurer and Lloyd H. Rickart of Chicago, former secretary of the St. Louis Browns was appointed secretary and assistant treasurer.

The meeting consumed the entire afternoon and the club owners were not inclined to discuss it. Mr. Gilmore said that the provisions of the guarantee contract were approved and asserted each club had posted a guarantee of $25,000. He said the league's investments to date and improvements contracted for will total $1,000,000.

Six Federal clubs must find new parks before spring, but this subject was not discussed. No information was given out about the schedule nor were any contracts with major league players announced.

MATTY'S PITCHING GIVES GIANTS VICTORY, 6—3

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—Before a large crowd, the New York Giants downed the Chicago White Sox today by a score of 6 to 3. Pitcher Mathewson was in rare form, except in the eighth inning, when the Sox made four hits that netted two runs. The score:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T.	H.	E.
Chicago	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	2	0	3	10	2

RULES LAID DOWN FOR THREE CUSHION LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Conditions governing play in the Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League, which starts Nov. 26, were announced here today. Only one contestant from each of the eight cities in the circuit will be acceptable. Each player will play one game at home with every other contestant in the league.

The players and cities in the league are: C. R. Morin, Chicago; F. H. Benson, St. Louis; E. M. Helm, Cleveland; Martin Maly, Detroit; W. R. Cullen, Buffalo; Harry Cooler, Indianapolis; August Kickhefer, Milwaukee, and Charles McCourt, Pittsburg.

All games will be played under rules governing three-cushion championships.

INDIANA RALLIES, BEATS NORTHWESTERN, 21-20

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 15.—Indiana defeated Northwestern today, 21—20, in a rally in the last five minutes of play, after the purple seemingly had the game stored away. The failure of Whitte to kick goal after the third touchdown was responsible for the one point by which the purple lost. Erehart kicked every goal for Indiana.

The innovation of numbering players was tried and pronounced a great success by newspaper men and spectators. Large figures fastened to the back of the Northwestern men's jerseys enabled the onlookers to tell quickly and accurately just "who was who."

Hightower was the star for the purple. He made all three of the Methodist touchdowns and was the only efficient ground gainer.

ARMY RUNS UP BIG SCORE ON VILLANOVA

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Playing gilt-edged football throughout, the Army eleven had no trouble in defeating Villanova today, 55—0. The cadets showed much improvement in offensive tactics.

Merrilat, who played a star game at end, twice scored touchdowns on long forward passes. Hobb's fine running with the ball and splendid kicking was a big factor in the Army's victory. Hobbs once intercepted a forward pass and ran 60 yards for a touchdown. Villanova gave the Army a scare in the third period, when the ball rested on the cadets' five-yard line after a series of well-executed forward passes. The visitors found the Army's line too much for them at this point, and J. Reap's attempt at a field goal went wide.

CARLISLE CRUSHES DARTMOUTH TEAM IN LAST QUARTER

Green Team That Beat Princeton, Is Whipped by Indians, 35—10.

STRAIGHT FOOTBALL WINS

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Dartmouth football team, hitherto regarded by many as the best [illegible] in the East, was easily beaten this afternoon by the Carlisle Indians. The score 35 to 10 was even more one-sided than the figures indicate, for Carlisle's points all were due to straight, hard football.

Dartmouth scored on a goal from the field and a forward pass that was caught and carried over the goal line. The Indians made five touchdowns after they had battered the opposing line into helplessness. Most of their gains came from plunges through guard and tackle.

The game was played on the Polo Grounds, which a fresh layer of sod had transformed for this contest and the Army-Navy game to follow. Nearly 15,000 spectators, who saw the first big game in New York for several years, were lost in the stretches of the great stadium.

Pass Scores for Green.

Dartmouth played the open game expected of her; but the Indians, finding the weak spots in the Green line, depended on battering-ram plays that several times carried them the length of the field without losing the ball. Dartmouth tried the forward pass seven times, and in the second period it enabled Loudon to carry the ball over for his team's only touchdown. Capt. Hogsett [illegible] played a dashing game, and kicked the only field goal. Another attempt of his came within a few feet of sailing over the crossbar.

Welch Stars for Indians.

Dartmouth's open game had the Indians guessing in the second period, but otherwise there was little chance to doubt Carlisle's superiority. The Indians' interference was one of the features of the game. All the backs played well and Welch ran his team like clockwork. For Dartmouth, the [illegible] quarter played a sensational game. Lineup and summary:

Referee—W. R. Okeson, Lehigh. Umpire—Dr. S. B. Newton, Williams. Head linesman—J. B. Pendleton, Bowdoin. Time of periods—15 minutes. Dartmouth scoring: Touchdown—Loudon; goal from touchdown, Hogsett; goal from field, Hogsett. Carlisle scoring—Touchdowns, Guyon [illegible] Braklin; goals from touchdowns—[illegible]. Substitutions—Dartmouth: [illegible] for Hogsett; Hinman for Colby; [illegible]; Llewellyn for Ghee; [illegible]; Tuck for Murdock. Carlisle: [illegible] Vedernack.

Yale Beats Tiger Soccerites.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.—In a soccer game between Yale and Princeton today the Blue won, three goals to [illegible]. In the first half Gamble of Yale [illegible] and then Faber of Princeton, by [illegible], kicked the ball through his own goal, [illegible] ing for Yale. In the second half [illegible] scored for Yale and Bird for Princeton.

Princeton won the annual gun club [illegible] 180 to 184. McAlpine of Princeton was [illegible] gun with 45, and Taylor was [illegible] with 40.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

WANT TEN MILLION FOR CONCRETE ROAD COAST TO COAST

Lincoln Highway Enthusiasts Expect to Raise Fund and Get Federal and State Aid for Project.

St. Louis motor car owners and dealers will in a short time be approached to contribute to the proposed Lincoln Highway which is a great cross-continent road from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Henry B. Joy, President of the Packard Motor Car Co. is president of the Lincoln Highway Association and Carl G. Fisher and a number of other men, including J. J. Cole, prominent in automobile circles, are deeply interested in building the highway—interested to the extent of contributing as much as $150,000 each toward it.

The Lincoln Highway is to cross in an airline from Washington, D. C., to San Francisco, and it will touch but few of the large cities. It will extend from New York city through the following states: New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada and California.

These cities and important towns will be touched by the Lincoln Highway: New York, Jersey City, Trenton, Philadelphia, Gettysburg, Pittsburg, Canton (O.), Lima, Fort Wayne (Ind.), South Bend, Joliet (Ill.), De Kalb,, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton (Io.), Cedar Rapids, Grand Junction, Council Bluffs, Omaha (Neb.), Grand Island, North Platte, Julesburg (Colo.), Denver, Fort Collins, Cheyenne (Wyo.), Laramie, Evanston, Echo (Utah), Salt Lake City, Fish Springs, Ely (Nev.), Reno, Carson City, Truckee (Cal.), Sacramento, San Francisco.

The automobile interests of the country will raise $10,000,000 and will ask the Federal Government to appropriate a like sum and to this will be added contributions from the various states.

With this money a broad highway will be built with a concrete surface from end to end so that driving over it from New York to San Francisco will be like driving over an asphalt street in a city. It is expected that as soon as finished or even before, lateral roads to it will be built in all of the states through which it will pass.

OPPOSE PLAN TO PARK AUTOS DOWN TOWN

The attitude of many of the dealers in automobiles in St. Louis is in direct opposition to any system of parking cars in the downtown section, and their opposition is for business reasons. Most owners of automobiles are also opposed to parking. A prominent dealer said to the Post-Dispatch Saturday:

"Personally I would not be hurt in the least, as the people who buy my cars employ chauffeurs and could drive away after delivering a load, to a department store and come back at an appointed time. The direct injury would come to the man who sells small light cars of the kind that owners themselves drive. The owner of such a car now drives to his office, say in the Pierce Building on Fourth street, finds a convenient nearby place to leave it. He then opens his mail and possibly at 10:30 a. m. goes out in the car to see his clients.

"If that man is required to either park his car on Twelfth street or find a garage for it, he will stop driving downtown and in many cases he would abandon the automobile for the street car. The minimum cost of garaging a car downtown must be 50 cents a day, and maybe higher,, so that the smallest cost would be $12 to $15 a month, this in addition to the $25 which he pays to his regular garage out near his home.

"If there was immediate need for relieving the congestion on the streets of St. Louis, I think the dealers would readily co-operate in any plan, but, with the exception of Fourth street in front of the Pierce Building, Olive street between Fourth and Sixth streets, Sixth, Seventh and Tenth streets between Olive and Locust, and one block on Washington avenue east of Sixth street, there is no real congestion as yet.

"I feel that hasty action by the Street Commissioner and the Business Men's League committee would work great harm to the dealers in light cars and should not be taken.

METEOR BECOMES KNOWN

According to Sales Manager E. A. Strossberg of the Ideal Motor Sales Co., the Meteor, which was first introduced to St. Louisans at the automobile show, is fast becoming acquainted with St. Louisans. The Meteor is a popular priced car, built in Shelbyville, Ind., and in a "36" size to sell for $950, a "40" at $1275, and a six "45" at $1600. All models come completely equipped, including electric starting and lighting system.

A Six 45 was recently delivered to R. M. Falkenhainer of 3850 Russell avenue, and A. S. Berghofer Carriage Co. of Palmyra, Mo., has recently closed with the Ideal Motor Sales Co. as distributors for that territory.

GOOD ROADS MEET LACKED VITAL POINTS

"There has been much said about the poor attendance at the U. S. Good Roads convention which was held at the Suburban Garden last week," said Roy F. Britton, president of the Missouri State Highway Association, "and many causes of its failure have been advanced.

"The reason for the failure of the convention was because the United States Good Roads Association is not a well-known organization and has no following among the good roads people. It was trying to occupy a field that is already thoroughly occupied by the American Highway Association.

"When the promoters of the convention asked the Missouri State Highway Association and the Automobile Club of St. Louis for their indorsement of the convention we found that they knew nothing of the Missouri or National Good Roads movements, and the two associations mentioned would not indorse the convention.

"The American Highway Association is made up of men who are practical and have been in the good roads movement for a long time. That the public is vitally interested in the good roads movement was shown by the tremendous success of the Good Roads Congress held in Detroit recently.

"It is not true that there is a lack of interest in the movement. The Ozark Trail Association held a convention at Neosho last week and out of the 300 delegates named, over 200 attended. It was only a little local organization, where 200 people would be equivalent to 2000 in St. Louis.

"It is difficult to hold a national good roads convention because of the lack of vital interest; it is largely a matter of sentiment; it lacks the commercial element of the trade associations. In State and county organizations, the road question becomes vital, because some particular road is under consideration, and its condition affects the people; it is a home matter. This was shown at a "hurry call" meeting of the Missouri State Highway Association at Jefferson City last winter, when we had 400 delegates present.

"It is unfair to St. Louis to have such a failure in a convention. The moral of the whole thing is that in the future such movements should be guided by organizations which know the situation. The Automobile Club's advice should have been taken."

GERBER BUYS ABBOTT PLANT TO OPERATE IT

Arrangements for the sale of the Abbott Motor Co. of Detroit to Edward F. Gerber of Pittsburg, Pa., have been completed, a number of the chief stockholders having held a meeting in Detroit on Monday of last week, at which the proposition was ratified. The ratification includes about 90 per cent of the stockholders.

The proceeds of the sale are to be paid to the merchandise creditors of the company, according to the present plan, while F. M. Knapp and his associate stockholders are to take up the bank indebtedness and are to be released from their other indorsements.

Gerber is the man who tried to buy the Michigan Buggy Co. at Kalamazoo, Mich., when the latter went into bankruptcy. He has long been a prosperous distributer of horse-drawn vehicles and harness, and during the last few years also acted as a distributer for the Michigan cars made at Kalamazoo. His success in the sale of automobiles has been such that when the source of his supply was shut off by the Kalamazoo failure he immediately felt the call to become an automobile manufacturer himself.

His present plans provide for a continuation of the Abbott-Detroit line of cars, and retaining of the present factory organization and managing officials. Under the new ownership ample ready working capital is promised; in fact, instructions have already been given for full speed ahead on production.

BUILDING TO STORE CARS DURING DAY

A building permit has been applied for for the erection at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust streets of a four-story public garage building, which will accommodate 4000 automobiles. This building is intended to meet the demand for a place to store cars off the public streets in the downtown district during the day and to also supply garage service of a permanent character. Cars are to be called for and delivered at the call of the owners.

W. J. Holbrook of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Co., Henry B. Graham of the Graham Paper Co. and Nelson S. Gotshall of the Cole Motor Co. of St. Louis are the moving spirts in the enterprise.

In addition to a building permit for a fire-proof building it will be necessary for them to also secure the passage of a special ordinance to permit of the erection of a garage within the fire limits, which begin on the east side of Twelfth street.

TRADE GETS REBATE FROM LAST AUTO SHOW

There were a happy lot of automobile dealers in St. Louis Saturday afternoon after the receipts of the first afternoon mail. In it they received their rebate checks from the automobile show at Forest Park Highlands, Oct. 6—11. The rebate is a repayment after all expenses are paid and amounted to 60 per cent. A small percentage was retained in the treasury of the Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers Association to apply on the next show next October.

The attendance at the show was 54,300, which was an increase of 31 per cent over last year's record. The rebate returned does not cover the purchase of exhibitors' tickets by dealers. These tickets, which were sent by dealers to customers and prospects, cost the dealers 15 cents each and were not redeemable.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

MOON FIGURES SHOW MARKED INCREASES

An increase in actual shipments of 129 per cent in August over August of last year; of 44.9 per cent in September over September of last year, and of 96.1 per cent in October over October of last year, tells the story of the constantly increasing popularity of the motor car, according to a statement issued yesterday by Stewart McDonald, vice-president of the Moon Motor Car Co.

The shipments in August, 1913, totaled $41,462.29, as against $36,697.55 in August, 1912, a gain of $4,764.74. The September, 1913, shipments aggregated $59,575.35, as against $41,018.82 in September, 1912, a gain of $18,456.53. In October, 1913, the shipments reached a total of $89,414.05, as against $47,612.58 in October, 1912, a gain of $41,801.47. The average gain in actual shipments for the first three months of the 1914 season is 52 per cent, according to McDonald's figures.

McDonald also announced the shipment Saturday of four sixes and three 42's. Three of the sixes went to the Chicago branch in response to a telephone call from H. M. Newman, the manager, Friday night. The other six went to A. Koyan of Fremont, Neb., who signed an agency contract this week.

Two of the 42's went to the Chicago branch and the third to D. J. Bergen at Boston. Bergen owned a Moon 40 for two years and disposed of it to get the later model.

HUDSON HOUSEWARMING

The Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co. announces its housewarming and opening at its new home, 2315 Locust street, beginning Monday. The new home is one of the handsomest automobile buildings in St. Louis and marks the ever-increasing trend of the motor car industry toward Locust street. The show rooms will be open each evening this week until 9 p. m

J. H. Phillips, president and manager, has received an announcement of the Hudson Six-40, popularly known as the Hudson Light Six. The news states that deliveries are to begin in December, possibly a few towards the latter half of the present month. The fact that the Hudson Motor Car Co. refused to give out a word of information until the new car was actually being produced, tended to fan the flame of curiosity. Now Phillips has printed specifications and description of the car, with photographs, prices and full details.

It is designed for the army of motorists who demand a six-cylinder car at a price between $1500 and $2000, and is claimed to be the easiest riding car known to Hudson engineers.

On a standard chassis with 123-inch wheel base, six-cylinder 40-horsepower motor, left side drive, one-man top, and other late improvements, are built three types of body. The standard phaeton is modeled on the popular demi-tonneau or four-seated touring type, with adjustable disappearing seats for emergency use. These are permanently attached, are quite inconspicuous and yet allow instant converrion to a six-seated car. The Cabriolet is a new two-seated car of the roadster type. It is a combination of the roadster and coupe. It yet can be turned into an open or closed roadster in a moment. The third model now being turned out is the standard roadster—a snappy, attractive two-seated car with flush lines.

TO SELL ELECTRIC TRUCKS

The Van Anken electric delivery wagon is the newest arrival in St. Louis. It will be handled in this territory by the Rauch & Lang St. Louis Co., 4187 Delmar boulevard. The capacity of the car is 750 pounds, the equipment is Ide batteries, and the price is $1000 fully equipped. It is manufactured by the Van Anken Electric Car Co. of Connersville, Ind.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Awarded "First Position" at the World's Greatest Automobile Show

THE extraordinary supremacy of the 1914 Overland has been officially recognized by the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association.

This organization has awarded the Willys-Overland Company the position of honor at the great National 1914 Automobile Show which opens in the Grand Central Palace, New York City on January 3d.

Do you know that the people of over 50 nations are wiring, writing and cabling to Toledo for Overlands?

Do you know that in response to their repeated requests and urgent demands we are shipping from 50 to 60 carloads a day—which means 200 automobiles every day in the week?

Do you know that the 1914 Overland is today the most sought after car of its type in the entire civilized world?

Even in Detroit, the automobile hub of the world, there are more Overlands being sold than any other car of this type.

The Overland has made, established and won for Toledo with its individual plants alone, the title of the second greatest automobile city in the world.

Detroit, alone, leads and yet the 1914 Overland is outselling, even in Detroit, every competing car.

The Overland factories average 50 shipments to the average maker's one. The Overland factories will build 50,000 cars for 1914. This is more cars than all the factories of France; three times as many as all the factories of Germany and far more than the combined factories of Italy, Holland, Russia and Sweden.

Has it ever occurred to you that there must be some substantial reason for such unparalleled success? There is, and here it is.

No other factory in the world can build a car the equal of the 1914 Overland for less than $1200.

Our price—$950.

That's the reason and the answer.

Now here are the facts.

The 1914 value is increased but the 1914 price is decreased!

It is magnificently finished in dark Brewster green, with running boards and wheels to match, trimmed in polished nickel and aluminum—but the price is lower.

Then there is a larger tonneau, a jeweled Stewart Speedometer—a larger steering wheel, and deeper upholstery—but the price is lower.

There is an Overland dealer near you. See him today.

You Save $1 Per Pound Per Year

This much you save on the new series Lozier Light Six. It weighs 300 pounds less than the preceding Lozier and 800 pounds less than the Lozier of former years. The new car is 500 pounds less in weight than its average competitor.

We figure this saving to you $1 per pound per year. Let us explain how. Assume you drive a car that weighs 4500 pounds—most big cars weigh more than that. 4500 pounds is 500 pounds greater than the weight of the new Lozier.

From $200 to $800 a year is saved in gasolene and from $300 to $400 on tires. That is about $500 a year. A car that weighs 4800 pounds costs about $800 a year more than the Lozier. For every pound over 4000 you pay $1 per pound per year more than if you drive a Lozier.

Then there is the $1000 saving in the initial investment and you have a car that gives you maximum results. See the new Lozier. Ride in it.

New Improvements
- Three hundred pounds weight reduction
- One man operated top
- New silent floating axles
- Direct drive through rear springs
- Chain tread non-skid shoes on rear wheels
- Tire pump
- Special rebound snubbers on front axle
- Compressed cloth timing gears
- One hand operated windshield—bottom ventilating
- Crowned fenders
- Electric headlight dimmers
- Illuminated running boards
- Extra long foot rail
- Extra heavy hexagonal nickeled robe rail

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

R. G. Neighbors, sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car Co., Detroit, builders of the Huppmobile, was in St. Louis last week with the General Motor Car Co., local Hupp agents.

Charles M. Dooin, manager of the Phillies, has bought a KisselKar. He predicts that it will bring his team luck.

S. V. Harding has been made special manufacturers' representative of the Motz Tire and Rubber Co., with headquarters in Detroit.

The Buick Motor Co. will move into its new home, 3205 Locust street, Monday, where Manager E. P. Rhodes will with some pride show the new Buick six, an unusually handsome car.

E. E. Peake, secretary of the Motor Car Dealers' Association of Kansas City, spent several days in St. Louis last week. He has plans under way for a State organization of dealers in which the St. Louis trade will join.

W. D. Edenburn, locally well known and liked, has been made publicity representative of the Lyons-Atlas Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis. He is a live wire and was on the Indiana-Coast tour in July.

HAS DOWNTOWN GARAGE

The Mercantile Trust Co. has closed a deal, leasing the first floor of the four-story brick building at 1215 Chestnut street to the Federal Truck Co. of St. Louis. The lessees who are agents for the Federal truck in this territory will at once move their offices, salesrooms and service station to this building, 50x109 feet, where they will have ample, well-lighted quarters, and will be completely equipped for a first-class service station and garage which their increasing business makes necessary. They will make a specialty of garaging and caring for their customers' Federal trucks and are moving into these new quarters in the heart of the downtown district in order to be conveniently located for both trucks and pleasure cars.

CABRIOLET-SEDAN WEEK

This will be "Sedan" and "Cabriolet" week at the Oakland Automobile Co. salesrooms, at 3436-38 Lindell avenue, and the salesrooms will be open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. the entire week. New models of the Sedan and Cabriolet type of cars have been received and they represent the last word in exclusive motor car design.

Several manufacturers have added the "Cabriolet" to their lines, which is the newest addition to motordom, but the local Oakland company is the first to receive this model. It is a combination roadster and coupe and when closed resembles very much the coupe type of car, and when open presents the appearance of a roadster of the nattiest type.

The Sedan model received is finished in gray whipcord and every feature for comfort and luxury has been added. Other models of the Oakland line, from the small 35-4 to the big 60-6 will be shown.

BETWEEN CORNERS BELONGS TO VEHICLES

"I read an editorial in an afternoon paper in St. Louis which said that motorists drive their cars into Twelfth street at Locust and Olive at 40 miles an hour," said a local dealer. "This assertion can have but one effect, and that is to farther prejudice the public against the automobile, and it is flatly untrue. The writer of the editorial ought to know that not 10 per cent of the cars in St. Louis will go 40 miles an hour, all beliefs to the contrary notwithstanding. Also that at a speed of 25 miles an hour a motorist is in danger of arrest at any moment and by any policeman. Also that the average motorist is more afraid of running over a pedestrian than is the pedestrian of being run over, for it means a suit for $10,000 damages.

"Three-fourths of the accidents are caused by people crossing the streets in the middle of blocks. If you do not think so, watch any department store for five minutes and see a hundred men and women duck across in the middle of the block. That space belongs to vehicles, not to pedestrians."

LOCOMOBILE WINS RACE

Manager A. L. Ellwood of the local Locomobile branch, feels elated at the news that the Locomobile which was entered with 30 cars in the Los Angeles-Phoenix and San Diego Exposition automobile race, won, averaging 30 miles an hour for 574 miles, over the roads in that territory. One of the remarkable things accomplished by the Locomobile was that it beat four or five of the prominent racing drivers, including Barney Oldfield. The Locomobile was driven by Olin Davis, a private owner.

The Locomobile this year has won the Glidden tour, the St. Louis Automobile Club reliability tour, the Phoenix race and several others.

HORNS AND LIGHTS, MUFFLER CUT-OUTS AND SMOKE LAWS

These Are Being Considered by Auto Club and Business Men's League Conferees, Preparatory to Legislation.

The joint committees of the Automobile Club of St. Louis and the Business Men's League will hold another conference Thursday afternoon, Nov. 20, in the office of the Business Men's League, to frame an ordinance to eliminate some of the nuisances and abuses pertaining to automobiles.

"There were four subjects considered by the conference," said Roy F. Britton, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Automobile Club, who has been active in securing fair and just legislation regulating automobiles almost from the beginning of the use of the automobile as a vehicle of utility and pleasure. Mr. Britton is the best-informed man in Missouri on this subject. The subjects were smoke, muffler cut-outs, glaring lights and horns.

"It was found at the conference that the smoke ordinance which is now in effect is not enforceable. It provides that no car shall emit smoke detrimental to the health of the public. It was the opinion of the conference that an enforceable ordinance should be drawn.

"The conference found that the ordinance regulating the muffler cut-out, which Judge Kimmel declared indefinite, was more definite than ordinances enforced in other cities. All were in favor of an ordinance against the use of the muffler cut-out anywhere in the city. The Automobile Club's Legislative Committee is considering the advisability of amending the State law to prohibit the use of the muffler cut-out in any city, town or village.

"The conference wanted further information on the subject of lights. All of the members were of the opinion that the dazzling light was dangerous, but were not decided as to the best system of regulating them.

"The present horn ordinance provides that every automobile should be equipped with a horn giving a short, abrupt sound, and prohibiting the use of the horn except as a warning signal.

"This same ordinance is in effect in other cities. The conference thinks it satisfactory if enforced. No matter how many ordinances and laws we may have, these nuisances and other improper uses of automobiles will not be eliminated until the police officers enforce them. The police generally seem to think that only the traffic officers and the motor cycle men need pay any attention to these ordinances. The smoke ordinance, the muffler cut-out ordinance, the light ordinance and the horn ordinance can only be protective when enforced by every police officer in every part of the city."

ACCESSORY MEN TO HELP TRACE BURGLARS

One of the best attended meetings of the Motor Accessories Association was held Wednesday night at the Cafferata cafe, Delmar and Hamilton avenues. A plan was proposed and adopted by which every member of the association will be notified when another member has been robbed so that he can assist in the capture of the thief when he attempts to sell the stolen goods. One firm was systematically robbed of tire chains and spark plugs for six months and found the thief only when another dealer caused the arrest of the man who was trying to sell $6 chains for $2.

The association admitted 15 new members as follows: Auto Electric Supply Co., John Berry Automobile Co., Bintliff & Herb, J. J. Carter, Independent Tire Co., R. J. Leacock Sporting Goods Co., Leguerrier Auto Co., L. R. Liedtke Supply Co., Manhattan Electrical Supply Co., Modern Auto Repair & Reconstruction Co., Newsom Auto Supply & Tire Co., St. Louis Pneumatic Valve Co., Chas. Sonnemann, Stiermann Vehicle Co., Wiemeyer Motor Co. The association now has 91 members and maintains a credit bureau which lists all bad or slow pay accounts.

George M. Deibel of the B. F. Goodrich Co. was presented with a handsome gold locket as the prize for securing the largest number of new members. He brought in 11 of the 15 elected.

THE NEW LYONS-KNIGHT

The George C. Brinkman Motor Car Co., 2818 Locust street, will sell the Lyons-Knight automobile, manufactured by the Lyons-Atlas Co. of Indianapolis, in St. Louis.

The Lyons-Knight is made in one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country devoted to the building of automobiles. This company has for years supplied parts to the trade and owns and controls an American license to manufacture the famous silent Knight sleeve valve engine. Under this license the company can make unlimited quantities of the Knight engines for pleasure and commercial cars.

The company is backed by unlimited capital, and the men at the head of it have enjoyed years of success in manufacturing pursuits. The president, James W. Lyons, has had 25 years of experience in responsible charge of manufacturing and engineering work of the highest grade.

The manager of the automobile department is Harry A. Knox, who is one of the pioneers of the automobile industry in this country, and has had a wide and thorough experience in all the branches of the motor car industry since its inception in America.

The Lyons-Knight embodies all the best features of the European Knight engine and many desirable, new and exclusive improvements. The engine is the most silent made and unlike the poppet valve type its silence increases with use, and it continues to gain in power, efficiency and fuel economy.

OLDS LEAVES AUTO ROW

Much surprise was occasioned among automobile wiseacres at the removal last week of the Oldsmobile branch from 3205 Locust to 1045 North Grand avenue, their present building being taken by the Buick Motor Co., another member of the General Motors Co., of which the Olds Motor Works is a member.

"Why should we stay on Locust street," says C. G. Cabanne, manager, "with a rental and overhead expense of over $48,000 per year. By taking this building we are reducing our expenses from over $4000 per month to less than $1200. There are not many concerns which could show a gratifying profit with as large overhead as we had, and in our new place we can sell just as many automobiles, and give just as good service as we did on Locust street. There will be no change in any manner in conducting our business except that the branch will be operated on a smaller scale. The new Oldsmobile is going better than we ever anticipated and we are expecting a record-breaking year."

HEAVY CADILLAC SALES

According to Manager I. G. McNeice of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis, the month of October was the largest in point of sales in the history of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. of Detroit. A total of 2016 cars were shipped. Their retail selling value was $4,246,425. These figures indicate strongly the ever-growing popularity of the Cadillac, he thinks.

MAN WHO ESCAPED CITY SANITARIUM STILL IS MISSING

Joseph A. Boyce of 5812 Clemens avenue, son of Capt. Joseph Boyce, former City Councilman, escaped from the city sanitarium Friday morning and has not yet been found.

Dr. George A. Johns, superintendent of the sanitarium, said Saturday he learned that young Boyce had made an appointment to meet a friend at Grand and Olive Saturday morning, but watchers reported that he did not show up.

Young Boyce recently served a short sentence in the county jail at Clayton after entering an automobile belonging to Constable P. C. Bruno and wanting to fight when he was asked to get out.

After Boyce was released from the jail his father had him placed under the care of Dr. Johns at the city sanitarium, where he had been for several months when he escaped.

LARGEST MEETING OF CLUBS IS ENDED BY ILLINOIS WOMEN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 15.—"Down State" delegates returned home today from the largest meeting of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs ever held. At the election, 617 votes were cast. Mrs. Anne J. Wood of Quincy was unanimously elected recording secretary. For 14 years she has served the Federation as stenographer and knows more names and faces in the organization than any other woman. She is the retiring vice-president of the Fifteenth District. Mrs. Morton W. Thompson of Danville, was chosen treasurer. The president, Mrs. Frederick A. Dow of Chicago, will hold her office until next year.

For delegates and alternates to the biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held in Chicago in June, the following were chosen. Mmes. John F. Thompson, Richard Pennington, Frederick K. White, Thomas Hickey, Charles Zimmerman. Clifford H. Miller, Alma Schilam, Maurice O'Connor, Lelia Martin, all of Chicago; Charles E. Clifton, Evanston; A. E. Walker, Hinsdale; E. C. Page, DeKalb; A. E. Burnham, Dixon; George W. Thompson, Galesburg; A. B. McGill, Peoria; O. P. Bourland, Pontiac; D. E. Styles, Momence; E. G. Busey, Champaign; C. E. Smott, Petersburg; Maud Baldwin, Litchfield; L. C. Haynes, St. Louis; George H. Mayer, Kinmundy; J. B. Blackman, Harrisburg; Harriet Daniels, Murphysboro; Miss Elizabeth Martin, Monmouth.

After adjournment Friday the delegates visited the Park Bridge Home for Girls, which for several years has been a protege of the federation.

Symposium Is Arranged.

A symposium, at which the speakers were leaders of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association, was a feature of the federation that brought out the largest attendance. The Congregational Church, where the meetings of the week were held, was packed and an overflow meeting was held at the Baptist Church, one block away. As soon as a speaker completed her address in one church, she was taken to the other, where she repeated her words.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch spoke upon "The New Civic Duty of Women." Mrs. McCulloch is a citizen of Evanston.

Mrs. McCulloch advised the women to be non-partisan and by all means to keep the men guessing.

"At least until we are full citizens," she said. Her hearers laughed and she explained that in a dry town like Evanston "full" had but one meaning. She predicted that the granddaughters of the delegates would be able to say, "I was free born."

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, gowned in blue silk with sash and other drapery of purple, followed Mrs. McCulloch. Mrs Trout went back to early days when our "forefathers put one over on our foremothers by writing the Constitution and leaving women out." She spoke of the work clubs had done for suffrage and said the Middle West had had women's clubs before either Boston or New York.

Tells Lobbying Experiences.

Mrs. Sherman Booth told interesting stories of personal experiences at Springfield when lobbying for the suffrage bill.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk, gowned in brown velvet and silk and wearing a hat with several pale yellow plumes, made the final address. She asked for a new Constitution for the State of Illinois and said that it was her experience that the State House at Springfield could best be reached through the City Hall of Chicago. She said she thought non-partisanship fine in theory. Her final advice was: "Women this is your inning, do your duty at the primaries."

GIRL TAKES BANK ROLL WHILE MAN GETS LICENSE

Easterner Who Went to Chicago With $1800 Loses All His Money.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 15.—Robert Philips came on from Rochester, N. Y., 10 days ago, with love in his heart and two particular objects in his pocket.

One object was a bankroll of $1800. The other was a bundle of love letters and a photograph received from "Your darling Rosetta," whose name he had obtained from a matrimonial paper.

He met and courted the girl who had called him "my own dear boy," while saying that with $1800 she could buy a millinery store and make lots of money for them both. Then, too, there were dreamy bits of romance about her great, blue, affectionate eyes.

She got the money while he was going for the license yesterday, and when he came back with the wedding ring in his hand to join her on the way to the minister he somehow missed her. He has missed her ever since—also the bank roll.

Philips told the police he was anxious about (1) where she was; (2) how much of the bank roll was left, and (3) how much it cost to ride on a train from Chicago to Rochester, N. Y.

Will Attend Efficiency Congress.

Dr. John L. Brandt, pastor of the First Christian Church, and Charles A. Forse, superintendent of the Sunday school, will depart tomorrow for Davenport, Io., to participate in a "Church Efficiency Congress." Dr. Brandt will address the convention on "Problems of the Downtown Church" and Forse on "Church Advertising."

Dr. Brandt has just returned from Meridian, Miss., where he held a series of revival meetings, and will preach this morning on "Foundations," and tonight on "Victories of Christianity."

MEN AND WOMEN WEEP WHEN CHILD TESTIFIES IN ALTON

Even the Judge Shows Emotion as 5-Year-Old Girl Gives Evidence Against Uncle.

Weeping men and women in Justice Pfeiffer's court room at Alton yesterday applauded State's Attorney Haagen when he denounced Erwin Steele, 18 years old, charged with contributing to the delinquency of his 5-year-old niece, Fern Rayburn. Pointing to the young defendant, the prosecutor said vehemently:

"That young man ought to be hanged from the Alton bridge! If I were not a sworn officer of the law, charged with the task of preserving the peace. I would be willing to help hang him.

"The law of this State is inadequate to the treatment of such fiends as this. It should make his crime a capital offense."

Cheers and sobs were mingled, and one of the witnesses cried passionately:

"That's right, hang him to the bridge! I'll tie the rope!"

The child's parents, Sidney Rayburn and wife, were the objects of sympathy from their neighbors in the courtroom. The mother sobbed aloud when the child, on the witness stand, whispered the story of her experience in her own home, after Steele, as it was testified, had sent two older children out to buy candy.

Justice Pfeiffer was unable to conceal his own feelings, and his voice was choked with emotion as he ordered young Steele held for the grand jury under $5000 bond.

Confederate Daughters' Election.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Daisy McLaurin Stevens of Mississippi was unanimously elected president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at the convention here today after the only other candidate, Mrs. Nathan D. Ella of Virginia, had withdrawn. Mrs. Cornelia Branch Stone of Texas was named honorary president-general.

Few persons realize the value of a Post-Dispatch want until a lost ad has restored some valuable keepsake that had been lost.

SMOKE of Herbs for CATARRH

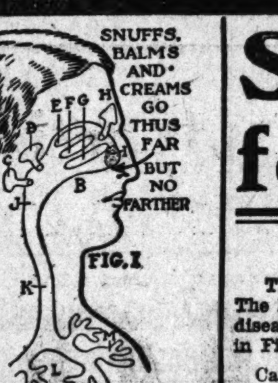

FIG. I

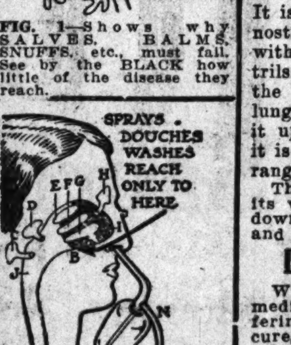

FIG. 2

FIG. 2—Shows how little can possibly be done by ATOMIZER and NEBULIZER SPRAYS, and by DOUCHES, WASHES and ALL LIQUORS. See by the black how far they all fall short of reaching THE SEAT of the disease.

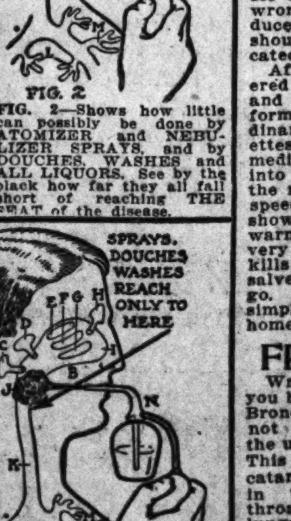

FIG. 3

FIG. 3—Shows how little good is done when a SPRAY or LIQUID is applied by way of the mouth. See by the BLACK how little of the diseased parts are reached.

The illustrations herein tell the whole story about the treatment of Catarrh. The BLACK, where the arrows point in Figs. 1, 2 and 3, shows how little of the disease, Catarrh, can possibly be reached by the usual methods of treatment and in Fig. 4 the BLACK shows the complete sweep made by Dr. Blosser's Remedy.

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. It is characterized by a discharge through the nostrils or into the throat. It usually begins with a cold in the head. Beginning in the nostrils it spreads to all the mucous membranes of the body, even getting into the stomach and lungs. The nasty discharge being swallowed, it upsets the stomach, and from the stomach it is taken into the blood, and poisons and deranges the whole body.

The disease is all the time inclined to work its way from the nose back into the head—down into the throat—into the bronchial tubes and lungs. Herein is its greatest danger.

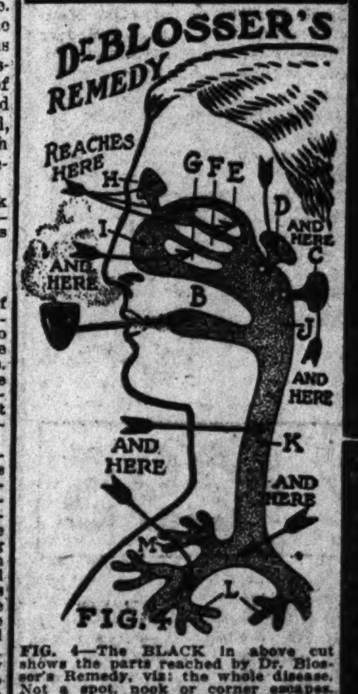

FIG. 4

FIG. 4—The BLACK in above cut shows the parts reached by Dr. Blosser's Remedy, viz: the whole disease. Not a spot, nook or corner escapes. It goes to C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, EVERYWHERE, and it wipes out the disease wherever it goes.

Dr. Blosser's Discovery

While engaged in the general practice of medicine Dr. Blosser had many patients suffering from Catarrh whom he was unable to cure, although he prescribed for them by the rules taught in medical books and colleges. He saw that the methods of treatment were wrong, and reasoned that as Catarrh is produced by breathing cold and damp air, so it should be cured by breathing a warm medicated vapor.

After nine years of investigation he discovered a combination of healing herbs, leaves and flowers (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) which, when placed in an ordinary clean pipe—made into medicated cigarettes or burned on a plate and by drawing the medicated smoke into the mouth and inhaling into the lungs, or by sending it out through the nostrils in a perfectly natural way, would speedily relieve all catarrhal diseases. As shown in the accompanying illustration the warm, healing vapor is carried directly to the very parts affected. This remedy fights and kills Catarrh where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly go. It is a most reliable treatment, and is so simple and convenient that it can be used at home by man, woman or child.

FREE SAMPLE BY MAIL

Great Good Cheer in The Evening of Life

Rheumatism, Thinness, Bad Cough and Most Infirmities of Advancing Years May be Avoided

You can see how we looked before using S. S. S.

It is astonishing how quickly elderly people respond to the splendid influence of S. S. S. In addition to its wonderful medicinal properties, it contains just the right exhilaration required for those who are getting feeble. This famous blood purifier starts myriads of cells into action; it arouses countless nerve centers to excite warmth and energy.

Beginning its work in the stomach, the appetite is strengthened; digestion improved means more, better and quicker nutrition. And as the arteries fill with richer blood the muscles become more firm and all the organs of the body are influenced to promote the return of general health. The reason for this is the remarkable action of S. S. S. throughout the cellular tissues of the body.

One ingredient in S. S. S. serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the tissues to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some disturbing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause rheumatism, bronchial cough, falling away of the flesh and the chills that come from thin, impoverished blood, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that this poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Then, too, S. S. S. has such specific stimulation on these local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and a proper relative assistance to each other.

In a very brief time S. S. S. has the reconstructive process so under control that remarkable changes are observed. All eruptive places heal, mysterious pains and aches have disappeared, and from head to foot there is a conscious sensation of renewed health. That strange, moody, morbid feeling of depression is lifted, and the entire system responds with surprising energy.

From the fact that S. S. S. is purely a botanical preparation, it is accepted by the weakest stomach and has great tonic influence in all the digestive organs. It is certainly a wonderful blood medicine and is prepared direct from native materials gathered by the experts of the famous Swift Laboratory. Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it.

At this time of quick weather changes S. S. S. will not only put strength into your body to resist sickness, but may save you from an otherwise more serious attack.

You will find S. S. S. on sale at most any drug store, but be very careful not to be talked into something else.

S. S. S. is prepared only by The Swift Specific Co., 275 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

RESCUER TO WED GIRL HE SAVED FROM DEATH

MISS CARRIE YOHN

Bride-to-Be Later Nursed Hero Back to Health When He Became Ill.

Miss Carrie Elizabeth Yohn of 3535 Evans avenue, is to be married Nov. 22 to Robert H. Benzel of 2647A St. Vincent avenue, who saved her from drowning in the Meramec River several years ago.

Miss Yohn went to Meramec Highlands with a party of friends and was riding in a canoe which overturned, throwing her into the river. Benzel was in another canoe. He leaped out of his canoe, swam to the struggling girl and rescued her.

From the acquaintance thus formed there came a courtship and engagement. Several months ago Benzel was ill and Miss Yohn went to his hospital to nurse him back to health. Benzel is employed in the water rates office at the City Hall.

The wedding will be at the Church of Our Redeemer, Utah and Oregon avenues, followed by a reception at Westgate Hall, Easton and Grand avenues. Mayor Kiel will attend the wedding.

CARELESS TOURISTS LOSE MONEY IN SWITZERLAND

Americans Whose Valuables Disappear Can Recover Them by Proper Effort.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 5.—Forgetful American tourists lose thousands of dollars in Switzerland every year because they do not trouble to claim their lost property, even in jewelry and money, unless it is worth a large sum. In most cases if the Americans should inform the police their property would be returned, as generally it is found, and in cases of theft the articles are frequently traced. Several large sums have been restored in this way.

Bellamy Storer, once American Ambassador at Vienna, lost a pocketbook containing a letter of credit for $6000 and $1000 in bills last summer at a Lausanne hotel. A fortnight later all was restored to him.

An American who "forgit" a thousand dollar bill in a Zurich hotel has not yet been traced, nor the American girl who left her jewel box containing valuable trinkets at Davos last winter.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS HELD SUPERIOR TO BRITISH

LONDON, Nov. 15.—David Starr Jordan, Chancellor of Leland Stanford University, during a lecture today at the Birkbeck Institute, under the auspices of the Education Committee of the London County Council, compared American and British universities' methods, greatly to the detriment of the latter.

The British practice of examinations, he declared, is a farce, because there is no relation between examinations and higher education.

"The essence of scholarship," he said, "is to know what to do in life. Therefore, the basic idea of American universities is to give man and woman the opportunity of making the most of their powers."

Chancellor Jordan denounced the idea prevalent in Europe that university degrees could be purchased in the United States.

"LEGALIZED MURDER" BY SURGEONS TO BE CHECKED

Clinical Congress Favors Laws to Stop Operations by Inexperienced Men.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—War against "legalized murder" by inexperienced surgeons was declared at the closing session of the Clinical Congress here today.

To check "criminal malpractice" the congress appointed a committee to visit the state legislatures of this country and the provinces of Canada to urge enactment of a law requiring physicians to have five years' experience in general medical practice before permitting them to practice surgery; ordering that two years of their practice be passed in active hospital work or under the direction of a surgeon generally recognized as of the highest attainments and requiring medical colleges to give full clinical advantages as part of their courses in medicine.

HOT FIGHT WAGED BY CITY TO BUY UP LIGHT PLANTS

Marshall Will Have Bond Election and One Girl Prefers Winning to Getting Married.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARSHALL, Mo., Nov. 15.—Marshall is on the eve of the most hotly contested election it has ever experienced.

If the city at the election next Tuesday can obtain the required two-thirds majority it will issue bonds and control the light plants.

The Missouri Gas and Electric Service Co., which has, for a number of years controlled the plants, is putting forth every effort to defeat the proposition, using column after column in the two newspapers and holding public meetings addressed by leading attorneys.

The citizens favoring municipal ownership are equally aggressive and yesterday, to give their side city-wide publicity, started a "free daily."

Both sides have been holding meetings alternately for a week, at the courthouse, and on a few occasions joint meetings have been held.

Families are divided, husband against wife, son against father, and the bridegroom-elect against his fiancee. One young lady, whose marriage is announced for Thanksgiving, vows she will remain single for an indefinite period if the bonds are not voted. The young lady, who is a stanch suffragette and a public speaker of some prominence, has been asked by the Citizens' Executive Committee to address a meeting Monday night at the courthouse.

ADOLPHUS BUSCH'S GRANDSON MARRIES MISS MARY M'KEE

Former President's Granddaughter Becomes Bride of Curt Reisinger in New York.

HARRISON REARED GIRL

Ceremony Is Informal Because of Recent Death of St. Louis Brewer.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YOK, Nov. 15.—Miss Mary Lodge McKee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. McKee and granddaughter of the late Benjamin Harrison, and Curt Reisinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo C. Reisinger and grandson of the late Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, were married in the Central Presbyterian Church this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The engagement of the young couple was first reported last January, but met with denial at that time. Formal announcement was made shortly after the death of Busch, and the wedding, which would have been a brilliant one, was informal.

Miss McKee lived with her grandfather while he was President. She was christened in the White House, in the presence of the members of the Cabinet. Each succeeding winter Mrs. McKee took her daughter to Washington, and last season they took an active part in society there.

Father Gives Bride Away.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, and was given in marriage by him, wore a wedding gown of heavy ivory white satin, combined with the same duchess lace her mother wore as a bride. The long tulle veil was arranged with a becoming little Dutch cap of the same lace, and fastened with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids, and wore the bridegroom's gift, a pendant of pigeon-blood rubies and diamonds set in platinum.

Mrs. Lowrey Gillett of this city, who was the only attendant, wore a pale pink satin gown, with tunic of silver lace. Her arm bouquet was of yellow chrysanthemums. Walter Reisinger was his brother's best man. The ushers were Stewart MacDermott, Hubert Ryan, S. Cowan Satta and Leon Wyle.

Many Out-of-Town Guests Attend.

Some of the prominent out-of-town guests were Mrs. Stephen Elkins, widow of the late Senator Elkins; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Miers, daughter of Frederick Penfield, Ambassador to Austria, and the former Austrian Ambassador, Richard C. Kerens and his wife of St. Louis. Gen. and Mrs. John W. Foster (Gen. Foster was Secretary of State under Harrison) and Gen. Tracy, who was Secretary of Treasury under Harrison; Capt. and Miss Alice DeLamar, Mr. and Mrs. Gwathmer, Mr. and Mrs. Klein of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Reid and Mr. and Mrs. Colket of Washington; Dr. and Mrs. Darlington, Miss Darlington; Mrs. Muller Ary, Mr. and Mrs. Abney; Mr. and Mrs. Yorke Allen of Indianapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Houston Dixon of Baltimore; Mrs. Hervey Bates; Mrs. Wilmerding; Miss Martindale, Mr. and Mrs. Coffin; Mrs. Hobart Brooks and Miss Katharine Brooks; T. Sanford Beatty and Miss Beatty of Washington.

Two Pastors Officiated.

The Rev. J. Remensnyder of the St. James Lutheran Church, assisted by the Rev. Milton Smith, rector of the Central Presbyterian Church, were the officiating ministers.

McKee is vice-president of the General Electric Co. at 30 Church street. The elder Mr. and Mrs. Reisinger have lived in this city for several years at 295 Fifth avenue, where Reisinger has a valuable collection of paintings. A year ago he offered to defray the expense of transporting an American art collection to the three Scandinavian countries, Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

After an extensive wedding trip, Reisinger and his bride will live at 535 Park avenue.

SHOOTS SELF; WINS BRIDE

Girl Weds Wounded Doctor at Bedside and Will Nurse Him.

CANTON, Miss., Nov. 15.—When Dr. W. B. Smith, a dentist, accidentally shot himself in the foot yesterday while returning from a hunt, he gained a bride, and the new Mrs. Smith is now nursing him.

As soon as Miss Ada Brown, Smith's fiancee, learned that an amputation of the wounded man's foot was necessary, she went to his bedside and they were married.

Mme. Alda to Sing.

The Missouri Athletic Club will have a table d'hote dinner Friday evening followed by a recital of Mme. Frances Alda of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, assisted by Gutia Cassini, cellist, and Frank La Forge. It is one of several delightful entertainments planned for the winter season. Frank La Forge, pianist, who has been heard here many times with noted artists, will be accompanist, and give several solo numbers. Mme. Alda's program is very attractive and so many reservations have been made that it will be exceedingly successful in every way.

WATER IS A REAL OBJECT

So Court Rules in Automobile Damage Suit.

APPLETON, Wis., Nov. 15.—Water is a real object, according to Judge T. H. Ryan, who today ruled against an insurance company which refused to pay W. F. Wettengill $350 damages to his automobile, caused by the machine running into the Fox River at Green Bay, when Louis Kirchner was killed, several months ago.

The insurance company held that water was not an object covered by the policy. The court decided in favor of Wettengill. The case will probably go to the Supreme Court for final ruling.

New Method of Reducing Fat

Good News From Paris.

A news item from Paris informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh a pound a day without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat-reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained of any druggist or the makers, the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., for seventy-five cents the large case, which is a decidedly economical price, considering the number of tablets each case contains.—ADV.

WEDS WITNESS IN HIS COMING TRIAL FOR AUTO KILLING

F. X. Schuler's Bride Is Girl Who Was in His Auto When It Killed Doctor.

Fred X. Schuler, 20 years old, son of Joseph Schuler, Republican politician and a saloonkeeper at Fourteenth street and Clark avenue, and Miss Esther Wagner, 20, of 1519 Newhouse avenue, were married Saturday afternoon at St. John's Catholic Church by the Rev. Father Brady.

The marriage comes on the eve of the trial of Schuler on a charge of manslaughter, at which his bride will be a witness. The case is set for Monday, in Judge Koerner's court.

The machine driven by Schuler, and in which Miss Wagner was riding, run down and killed Dr. Philip Scholz July 27, when he was walking to the curb after getting off of a street car in front of his office at 3402 North Fourteenth street.

Miss Wagner testified at the inquest that she was engaged to Schuler and was riding with him at the time the machine struck Dr. Scholz. The auto was running slowly, she testified, and she was reading a paragraph from a newspaper to Schuler just before the doctor was struck. She said the physician stopped after he got off the car, and apparently was waiting for the automobile to pass, but stepped in front of it when Schuler started to turn the corner.

The Coroner's jury exonerated Schuler, but an information was issued against him on a charge of manslaughter. He was acquitted at a hearing before Judge Clark in the Court of Criminal Correction. He was then indicted by the grand jury.

Is Your Rupture Making Life Miserable?

Does Your Truss Hurt? Can You Make It Hold?

Won't Cost You a Cent

If This 60-Day Test Doesn't End Rupture Troubles

If your rupture is giving you constant trouble, then that is positive proof that there is something wrong with your truss.

No man can do good work, either mental or physical, if he has to wear a truss which hurts all the time, or one he can't feel safe in.

If you keep on wearing old-fashioned elastic and spring trusses, they are sooner or later almost sure to let you get so bad you'll have to be operated on.

No More Belts, Leg-Straps or Springs

We have found a way to hold any man's rupture without harmful pressure, without any belt, band or spring around your waist, without having to wear leg-straps.

It is our guaranteed rupture holder.

It is as big an improvement over elastic and spring trusses and so-called "appliances" as the modern locomotive is over the first steam engine ever built.

60 Days' Trial to Prove It

We have so much faith in it—have seen what it has done for so many others—that we are willing to make one especially for your case and send it to you for sixty days' trial. Willing to give you plenty of time to see for yourself just how good it is.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way, then you can send it back and it won't cost you a single penny.

It is the only thing we know of for rupture that you can get on long enough trial to make sure; because the only thing good enough to stand a long and thorough test.

All About It in Free Book

Don't send any money. Just write for our big free book—cloth bound. 96 separate articles, 96 pages—and find out everything you want to know. It is full of facts never before put in print.

Shows just why operation is nearly always a gamble with death, and why it would seldom be necessary if it weren't for the mischief done by elastic and spring trusses.

Exposes the frauds and humbugs—puts you on guard against being fooled and against throwing money away.

And it tells all about our guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss. Shows how simple it is. Why it needs no belt or leg-straps. How it automatically protects you against every strain so your rupture can't be forced out. How it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture. How it has brought complete cure in thousands of cases that seemed almost hopeless. How it is water-proof and will hold in the bath. How you can get it on 60 days' trial and how little it costs if you keep it.

Gives voluntary endorsements from over 5000 people. Also explains the care and attention we give and why, because of rupture, we are successful in cases that would utterly baffle your local truss fitters.

Write for the book today. That will take only a minute. But it may free you from trouble and worry for the rest of your life. Simply use the coupon or a postal.

TEN METHODS OF FEEDING HENS FOR EGG PRODUCTION

Mashes and Grain Mixtures Used in Test at Missouri Experiment Station.

In response to the many requests received for methods of feeding the hens in the international egg-laying contest at the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, Mo., this article will deal with the 10 methods used in the feeding tests, the best of which can be applied to the commercial egg farm flocks, the ordinary farm flock or the city back-yard flock with assurance of improvement in the production of eggs.

The birds used in this test were one-half buff orpingtons and one-half white leghorns. The orpingtons were all of the same breeding, all pullets and as near the same age and weight as it was possible to get them. The white leghorns were composed of four pullets and one hen in each pen, of the same breeding, same age and practically the same weight. The 10 methods of feeding were as follows:

Connecticut Method.

Scratch grain mixture: Sixty pounds cracked corn, 60 pounds wheat, 40 pounds heavy white oats, 20 pounds barley, 10 pounds Kaffir corn, 10 pounds buckwheat, 10 pounds coarse beef scrap.

Dry mash mixture: Two hundred pounds coarse wheat bran, 100 pounds cornmeal, 100 pounds gluten meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 75 pounds standard middlings, 50 pounds fish scrap, 50 pounds beef scrap, 35 pounds low-grade flour.

An automatic feeder was used for the grain, and the birds were allowed to feed themselves, except during the long summer days, when it was necessary to close the grain feeder part of the time.

The dry mash was kept in a hopper, as well as grit, shell and charcoal, and was before the birds at all times. Succulent food, consisting of apples, mangel wurtsels, green cut corn and dried beet pulp was used. The dried beet pulp was used principally (soaked in warm water) about an hour before feeding time. It consisted (when dry) of about 8 per cent of the dry mash by weight.

Feed of All Kinds.

In one pen in the test 28 different kinds of feed was kept before the hens at all times. In this test it was found that the hens made a good record during the winter and spring months with this method of feeding, but during the summer they fell below the average. This would indicate that hens will do well when fed this way during the winter, but it is not a good method for hot weather.

New York Method.

Grain mixture for winter, 60 pounds wheat, 60 pounds corn, 30 pounds oats, 30 pounds buckwheat.

Grain mixture for summer, 60 pounds wheat, 60 pounds corn, 30 pounds oats.

These grain mixtures were fed night and morning in straw litter.

The following dry mash mixture was fed in a hopper, kept open in the afternoon only: Sixty pounds corn meal, 60 pounds wheat middlings, 30 pounds wheat bran, 10 pounds alfalfa meal, 10 pounds oil meal, 50 pounds beef scrap, one pound salt. The fowls consumed about one-half as much mash by weight as whole grain. The proportion of grain and ground feed (mash) was regulated by giving a light feeding of grain in the morning and about all they would consume at the afternoon feed (in time to find grain before dark).

When feeding fowls of heavy laying, restrict both morning and evening feeding to induce heavy eating of the mash, especially in the case of hens.

This ration should be supplemented with beets, cabbage, sprouted oats, green clover or other succulent food, unless the flock is on a grass covered range.

Grit, cracked oyster shell and charcoal should be accessible at all times. Green food should not be fed while frozen. All feed and litter should be fresh and clean and free from mustiness, mould or decay. Serious losses frequently occur from disease when fowls take into their bodies, through their intestinal tracts or lungs, the spores of fungus, causing molds.

Maine Method.

Dry grain fed in litter. Early morning feed—cracked corn at 10:30 a. m., equal parts of wheat and oats, about two quarts of the grain to 50 fowls, or in that proportion.

Dry mash, first month, 300 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds corn meal, 100 pounds cheap flour, 100 pounds beef scraps. Dry mash, second month, 200 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds corn meal, 100 pounds cheap flour, 100 pounds gluten meal, 100 pounds meat scraps. The mash for the third month the same as the second month, with 50 pounds of linseed meal added. The fourth month the same mash as the second month. The fifth month the same mash as the third month.

During the remainder of the test the same mash as the second month was used with 50 pounds of linseed meal added each alternate month. Green food in the shape of sprouted oats, cabbage, mangels, etc., grit shell and charcoal was kept before the birds at all times.

Canadian Method.

This is the most simple method of feeding and the hens made a very good egg record.

In the winter months the grain mixture is composed of two-thirds corn and one-third wheat, thrown into the straw litter. In summer one-third corn and two-thirds wheat. In the spring and fall months equal parts of corn and wheat. About a pint of the above mixtures, was fed to 10 hens in the morning and a little more at night. Rolled oats are fed from a hopper.

The hens were supplied with grit, shell, charcoal and some wholesome green food and nothing to drink but buttermilk. This is the best balanced for any one to use, especially adapted to use of the farmers and keepers of a small flock. It is simple and gives splendid results.

Saylor Method.

Dry mash: 15 pounds ground alfalfa meal, 15 pounds cornmeal, 15 pounds ground wheat, 15 pounds gluten meal, 15 pounds ground oats, 10 pounds ground oil meal or high-grade beef scraps, 15 pounds wheat bran, one box of condition powder.

The above dry mash was fed in hoppers three times a week and was fed on alternate days with one-fourth teaspoonful of condition powder added for every five fowls on alternate days. After the third week the moist mash was fed once a week to keep the birds in a healthy condition, every fourth or fifth week this mash was fed again for a week, adding one-fourth teaspoonful of condition powder to every five fowls.

Poultry House Floor.

I am building a poultry house after my own ideas and would like to know what kind of a floor you would recommend. Mrs. R. R. G., St. Louis.

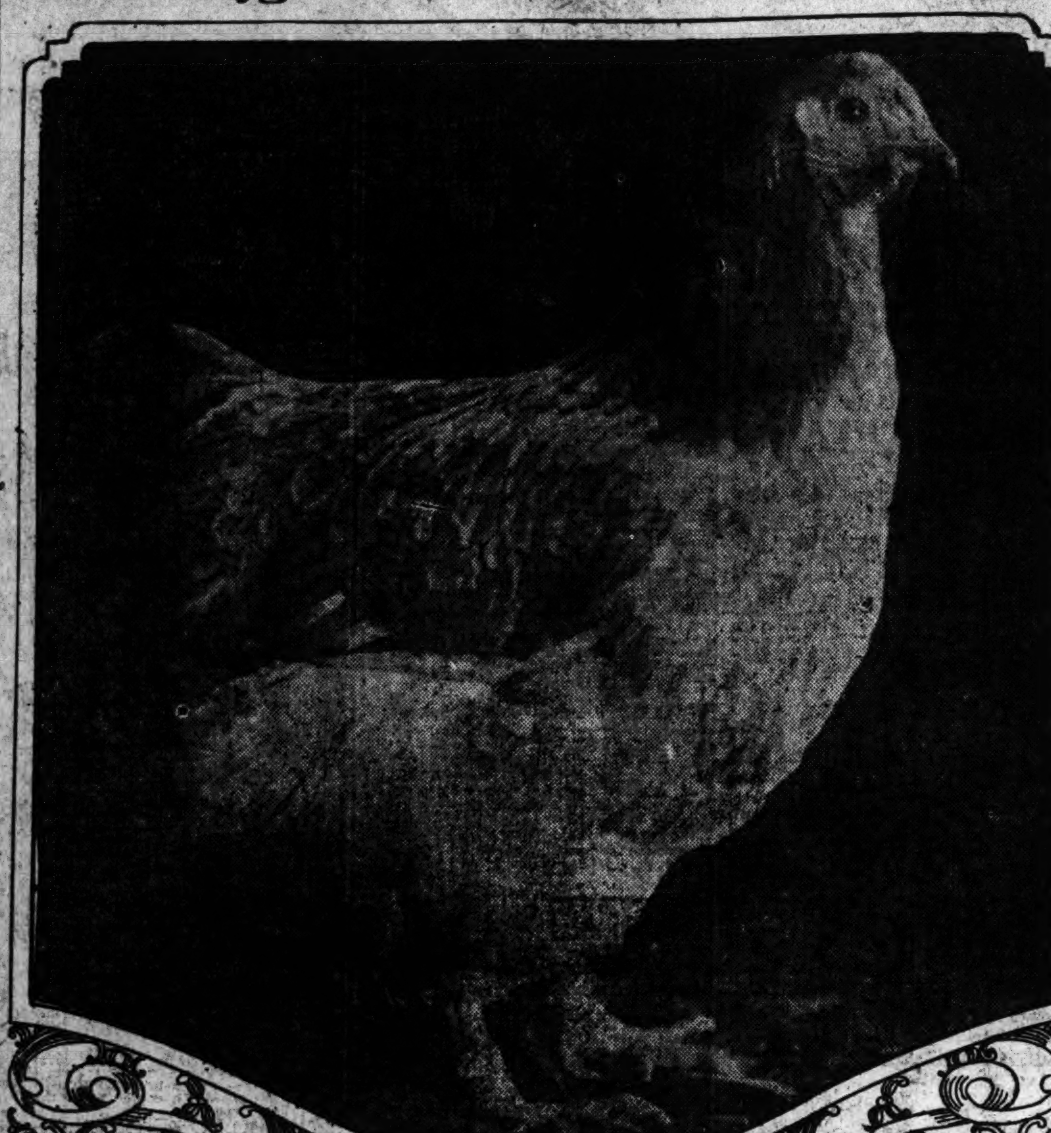
An ordinary dirt floor raised from 12 to 18 inches from the outside ground level, to keep it from getting damp, makes the very best floor for a poultry house.

Do not fool too long with sick fowls. The hatchet is sometimes the only practical remedy to give.

A good bone mill is quite valuable on every poultry farm. They are cheap and quite profitable.

Do not shut the house up when the first cold nights arrive, but keep the windows open, except those which cause drafts through the house, until the snow flies.

253 Eggs in Less Than One Year.



THIS Buff Wyandotte hen has laid 253 eggs in 11½ months in the National Egg Laying race at the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, Mo. She led all entrants for 10 months when her record was surpassed by that of the English White Leghorn hen, a picture of which was printed last Sunday. This hen is strictly an American product, as the Buff Wyandotte breed was originated in this country. She is known in the contest as No. 600.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED.

Indian Runner Ducks.

I was very much interested in the article on Indian runner ducks in the Post-Dispatch, Nov. 2. Will you kindly inform me where I can obtain the eggs of these ducks? J. J., Belleville, Ill.

We cannot refer you to any particular breeder. Would suggest that you write to any of the advertisers of these ducks on this page.

Roup.

I have a rooster that has been droopy. He seems to have difficulty in breathing and sneezes frequently. He does not eat much and does not retain what he does eat. His nasal passages are clogged. Can you advise what his ailment is and how to treat it?
H. L. R., St. Louis.

Your bird has the roup. Remove him from the balance of your chickens to a coop that is clean, dry and warm and treat him with any of the advertised roup remedies as directed.

Chicken Pox.

I have a small flock of Japanese bantams and knots are appearing on their heads and eyes. They are droopy and have little life. What shall I do for them?—H. J., Fort Smith, Ark.

Your bantams have the chicken pox. Separate the infected birds from the balance of your flock and put them in a dry, clean, warm coop; give them a dose of epsom salts, mix five drops of iodine with a teaspoonful of vasseline and rub the combs, wattles and heads of the infected birds once a day until the disease disappears. To prevent contagion, clean and disinfect your quarters and keep your birds warm and dry.

Dry Picking.

Will you please tell me if it is advisable to kill hens to eat when they are moulting? Also the best method of dry picking? B. J., Jefferson City, Mo.

The flesh of a fowl is softer and more flabby during the moulting period than it is before and after. There is no particular difference in the taste. It is profitable to dispose of, or kill hens at the beginning of the moult if you have pullets maturing to take their place as layers. The success of dry picking depends on the manner in which the bird is killed. The best method is to cut, with the point of a knife, through the mouth, the large vein that enters the brain above part of the mouth. This kills the bird instantly and paralyzes the nerve centers that control the feather muscles, which causes the feathers to come out easily without tearing the flesh.

Cold.

My chickens sneeze and have watery and swollen eyes. What is the matter with them and what should be done to cure them?—D. E. F., Texarkana, Ark.

Your chickens have caught cold from sleeping in drafts and damp quarters. Keep them in clean, dry, warm quarters and give the sick birds any of advertised roup remedies as directed.

Number of Females to One Male.

In order to make the breding pen strong in fertility, how many females should be placed in the pen with a single male?—G. F. D., St. Louis.

It depends largely on the variety you are breeding. With leghorns and minorcas or any of the lightweight breeds that are active, one male will be sufficent for a pen of from 12 to 15 females under ordinary conditions. In the American class, such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Rhode Island reds, one male should be provided for every 10 or 12 females. With the heavy breeds, such as brahmas, cochins and langshans, eight to 10 females should be mated to one male. Where 20 or 30 females are kept in one flock, no better means of obtaining a large per cent of fertile eggs is known than to keep two male birds, allowing one of them to run with the hens one day and the other the next day.

Entries.

I want to enter some of my chickens at the St. Louis Poultry Show. How shall I go about it? T. F. T., Silex, Mo.

Write to the secretary of the show at which you intend to exhibit, who will send you a premium list and entry blanks giving all the information necessary. You will notice in the calendar there are two shows.

Taming Fowls.

I have a flock of hens that are a mixture of Leghorns and Plymouth Rocks. They are unusually wild, and when I go into their yard they scatter in all directions and seem to be frightened. My neighbor's chickens are just the opposite. They are tame and contented, and he gets more eggs from less hens than I do. Can you give me some information that will help me along? W. A. D., Litchfield, Ill.

Let your birds get good and hungry and when you feed them go to the center of your yard with the feed and throw it a short distance from you, gradually lessening the distance between you and the feeding birds from day to day, and be as gentle as possible. In this way the birds may be made to approach rather close, and in a few days should eat from your hand. Chickens to produce well must be kept tame, and gentleness at all times must be observed if good results are to be obtained. Hens, when scared or disturbed by quick motions or otherwise, will not lay as well as when they are contented. Avoid hasty passing by windows or openings of the poultry house. Sometimes it is well to rap on the door or to draw the birds' attention so they will not be taken by surprise when you enter. When walking among the birds, do so with a deliberate step. It is good practice to call the birds to their feed with a low whistle, and use the same whistle when entering the pen or when the birds are disturbed in any way. By handling your hens in this manner you will be rewarded with an increase in the egg yield.

Frozen Comb.

Will it make any difference in the chicks if I breed a cock that had his comb frozen last winter? He is a very fine bird, and I do not care to buy another if I can use him successfully with this defect. E. S. S., St. Louis.

Your male bird will breed just as well as he would if his comb had not been frozen. Improper care and bad quarters ruin the appearances of a great many male birds each winter. This can be observed at the poultry shows. The cocks do not appear as clean cut and finished as the cockerels who have not gone through a winter.

Hope for Bald Heads

Well Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and his ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his friends did not know him, and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the growth of my hair to the following simple recipe which any lady or gentlemen can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—ADV.

Prescription That Soon Knocks Rheumatism

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. The poisons that settle in muscles, joints and back, causing severe pain, must be dissolved and expelled from the system or there can be no relief. This prescription from a noted doctor is said to be working wonders all over the country. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it here last winter. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half-pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." Results come the first day. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, one-ounce, sealed, yellow package. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago.

Stop Foot Torture

Corns, Callouses, Bunions, Frost Bites, Aching and Sweaty Feet. A spoonful of CALOCIDE in a warm footbath gives instant relief. If used frequently brings permanent cure. Get a 25c box at any drug store.—ADV.

TRANSFER TIME RECORDER

United Railways Experiments With Clock Device.

A time-recording clock by which each transfer will be automatically stamped, showing the hour and minute it was issued, has been installed on a street car on the Park line as an experiment. If it proves successful, all of the cars of the United Railways will be so equipped, according to Richard McCulloch, vice-president of the company.

If the new system is adopted, a time limit will be marked on the transfers showing the time allowed for use, and conductors on transfer lines will allow 15 minutes additional for delays at transfer points. The system of punching transfers by hand will then be abolished.

LIBRARY BENEFIT PLANNED

Drama for Jubilee of the Third Order of St. Francis.

The legendary drama in five acts, "The Miracle of Roses," will be repeated Sunday afternoon and night at St. Anthony's Hall, Compton avenue and Meramec street, in connection with the golden jubilee of the Third Order of St. Francis. The musical program at the matinee performance will be furnished by pupils of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

The play was given last Sunday in the same hall. The entertainments are for the benefit of the Third Order library.

ASTOR AND HARRIMAN WERE 22 YESTERDAY

Two of Country's Richest Young Men Celebrate Their Birthdays.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Vincent Astor and W. Averell Harriman, two of America's richest young men, will celebrate their twenty-second birthday today.

According to their secretaries, neither young man is to have any formal celebration of the day. Astor will spend the day at his country estate at Rhinebeck, although if the weather is fair he may possibly go with his fiancee and a party of friends to see the Yale-Princeton game at New Haven.

Harriman with a party of sportsmen friends has been for some time at his mother's ranch in Idaho where they probably may celebrate by bagging some big game.

WHEN BACK ACHES, WATCH KIDNEYS!

If Neglected Serious Diseases May Follow.

When the kidneys are clogged up and inactive, nature always warns you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, or feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes, or in the feet and ankles. If such symptoms are neglected, dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous but needless for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, when a little Croxone will quickly and surely end all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt relief and cure of such troubles, because it cleans out the clogged up kidneys and makes them work properly. It soaks right in through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering cells and glands; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poisons from the blood and drive it out of the system.

This new, scientific preparation, is entirely different from other remedies. It is so quick-acting and effective that it is practically impossible to take it without results.

An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.

Three doses a day, for a few days, is often all that is ever needed to end the worst backache or relieve rheumatic pains.—ADVERTISEMENT.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STOCKS CLOSE HIGHER ON THE WEEK, DESPITE SOME SELLING ON MEXICAN NEWS

Prices Are One to Two Points Over Last Saturday's Finals.

LONDON MORE CHEERFUL

Announcement of French Loan Is Well Received by Bankers.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"Mexico has from the very start of the period of international friction been an elusive influence for the Stock Exchange to reckon with.

"There are two ways of using the stock market as a test whereby to measure the real significance of an outside political or economic situation, and each is in turn used by observers of the market and the situation.

"One way is to make up one's mind beforehand what should be the financial effect of a given event or series of events, and from that to conclude what the stock market ought to do.

"This is an interesting method; it is the formula by which many great Wall street fortunes have been made. But it has also been the means of losing some great fortunes.

"If the observant citizen has made up his mind, because certain things are happening, that the stock market must decline, and if the market then refuses to decline—or perhaps goes up instead—his position is most unsatisfactory.

"If he has merely been basing public predictions on his deduction from events, he has no recourse but to speak contemptuously about the market and avoid the friends to whom he gave advice. If he speculated for the decline on his own account, he may as well cover his shorts and make the best of it.

"That apparently was what some aggressive professionals concluded to do on Tuesday and Wednesday, after backing their inferences by selling Monday's market on the morning paper news from Mexico.

Market a Barometer.

"The other way of doing things is to judge events in the light of the stock market's action, rather than to judge the market in the light of events. The application of this rule to the Mexican situation would produce some curious results.

"From the moment when our Mexican relations assumed what was popularly regarded as a menacing aspect, up to the present time, it has been difficult to discover any evidence that the Stock Exchanges were displaying alarm about them.

"It has repeatedly become a commonplace of inference and assertion, in people's ordinary exchange of impressions on the Mexican affair, that no outlet from the existing deadlock could be found, short of armed intervention by the United States Government.

"No one could surely say what would be involved by that. There were surface indications, on occasion, that representatives of foreign powers did not approve of our administration's policy, and at the opening of this week the newspapers carried sensational dispatches to the effect that Europe's program for its Mexican relations was about to break with ours.

"Such an event opened to excitable imaginations far-reaching possibilities. Yet the stock market refused to give any such apprehensions the reflections which might naturally have been anticipated.

"Even at Paris, where it was commonly asserted that a formidable shock was inevitable if the Mexican entanglement were not to be unraveled, the markets showed no disposition to prepare for such a shock by wholesale liquidation, openly based on the Mexican affair.

Stocks in Strong Hands.

"One or both of two conclusions would appear to be suggested by this attitude of financial markets. Either the cool judgment of the experienced investor has at no time concurred in the predictions of armed collision between the United States and Mexico, or else the Stock Exchange position was too sound to be shaken by any misgivings of the sort.

"There is undoubtedly a good deal of truth in both conclusions. What an investment market fears, in such episodes as that of Mexico, is war. And it fears that, because of the interruption to normal trade which would ensue, and because of the prodigious demands on capital, which are an immediate consequence of war.

"But the trade of Mexico could hardly be more completely paralyzed by war with the United States than it now is by internal anarchy, and, as for the matter of huge war loans, those would be looked for naturally only in the case of an invasion of Mexico on an extensive scale.

"But in that regard, the official statements of President Wilson, and the plainly manifest attitude of the American public, have shown all along that this contingency will, to the last extremity, be avoided. On this financial markets seemed to have rested their opinion.

"But it is also possible that occasional grave disturbance, in the nature of a sudden and sharp collapse, might easily have occurred on speculative markets in response to the mere apprehensions of a day or week.

"Were the markets, home and foreign, on the crest of a wave of excited speculation, some such action, even if only temporary, would have been wholly in line with precedent.

"That there has been no such demonstration of sufficient scope to be regarded as a response to Mexican developments, certainly lends some color to the theory that the period of prolonged and drastic liquidation, which is now behind the Stock Exchanges of the world, has left them in an intrinsically sound position.

Market Well Liquidated.

"That this is true of the American market, few people now dispute. There is not so general an agreement as to Europe; but the explanation is not difficult.

"Seven traditionally trying weeks in the European money market are immediately before us, and each great financial center has been watching every other with uncertainty and suspicion. Yet each distinct event, and its reception on the Stock Exchanges, goes to indicate that the apprehensions have been overdrawn.

"Berlin was to make trouble; but the German Bank reduces its official discount rate. Paris was to be a continuing danger point; yet the actual announcement of a $260,000,000 loan for the French Government is generally greeted as a possible avenue of relief for a situation which was at once adjudged to have been greatly aggravated by the holding back of capital and cash for use in subscription to this very loan.

"Possibly, before many days, we may begin to hear that the difficulties, even in the London situation, have been greatly overdrawn.

"Stocks closed the week quiet and steady, with prices 1 to 2 points above the finals of last Saturday."

FRENCH LOAN LIKED BY FOREIGN BANKERS

Paris Bourse Expects New Offering to Meet Big Subscription.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.—In their immediate bearing, the developments of the present week have been made for better feeling. The chief points of interest have been the news regarding Mexican relations and the formal announcement of the 52,000,000 pounds sterling French Government loan.

"Mr. Asquith's speech, asserting our Government's purpose of acting in accord with Washington, has improved the financial market's general sentiment regarding Mexico, and on the resultant hopes of a settlement of that vexed position, a general rush of bear operators occurred, to buy back stocks sold on the theory that a crisis was at hand.

"Nevertheless, our banking interests still find it difficult to discern how the Mexican problem is to be permanently and satisfactorily solved. Such a solution, if obtained, would mean real stimulus to financial recovery, because of the extensive financial interests involved in the situation.

French Loan a Factor.

"It is significant that the mere prospect of the early and satisfactory flotation of the great French loan should have given a favorable stimulus to the Paris bourse. French bankers will presumably use every effort to maintain comfortable conditions on the Paris money market, pending the offer of the loan.

"That formal offer is expected early in December. If it results in drawing out the hoarded money of the French public, it may mark the turning point in the European financial situation. If it does not accomplish that result, then the position of Paris may become really serious.

"The condition of our own discount market indicates maintenance of general caution. Cash supplies are likely to be scarce, and money rates will continue high.

"After the recent pause, tentative applications for new loans are again beginning; but they find poor response, and, although the actual state of international politics is better, the fact remains that confidence on the part of the investor is still feeble, while the actual and prospective demands for capital are very large.

"Germany is now attracting gold to the Reichsbank only through putting out small notes into its home circulation.

"No special facilities for importing gold are at present offered by Berlin. In fact, both Germany and France are afraid of incurring the possibility of a rise in our bank rate.

Higher Rates Are Likely.

"The forthcoming application of your railways for higher rates is considered altogether reasonable, because the similar demands by railway employes have been so largely granted.

"Somewhat similar conditions have existed here, but, although our freight rates were advanced only slightly last July, shippers are already fighting for reduction.

"We are coming to believe that President Wilson is likely to succeed in getting his currency bill enacted, subject to minor modifications. Your people are the best judges of its internal mechanism. But a feeling prevails here that a very serious mistake will be made if it leads to a rapid invasion of the field of foreign discount markets.

"The attention of the markets is still directed to the growing subserviance of Governments—especially our own—to demands of labor. There is a feeling that this policy is bringing some sort of labor crisis nearer. Your country is included in these apprehensions, which have their influence on our market's reluctance to buy your securities."

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The metal markets were quiet and practically nominal. Copper was nominal with lake quoted at 16.50c; electrolytic, 15.25@15.50c; casting, 15@15.25c. Iron unchanged.

COTTON ESTIMATES GROW DURING THE BETTER WEATHER

Fine Days Permit Clean Picking and This Will Add Many Bales to the Crop.

Beautiful weather has been the rule all over the cotton belt for the past week and the work of picking and hauling to the gins has gone on without interruption. Such weather helps in a great measure to overcome some of the curtailment of production caused by the frost in that it enables clean picking of the bolls that were forced open by the frosts and prevents waste of cotton in the open bolls.

Reports from the section west of the river, notably in Arkansas, tell of a decided improvement in grade. At the same time "mixed-packed" cotton is beginning to appear to the great annoyance of buyers. The low grades are in abundance and what to do with them is the puzzle. As has been the rule in the past, eventually all will be consumed, but at what price or how has not been determined.

The New York market is facing a very grave problem because of these very low grades. An accumulation of protests, begun years ago, adverse legislation and unsatisfactory conditions arising from their imperfect contract have combined to force a material change in the grading and fixing of differences of value in that market and next Wednesday the results of many consultations by the committee appointed to revise differences will be published. The great problem is to create conditions that will attract marketable cotton to New York in such volume as to make stable trading in that market.

Guard Against Low Grade.

At the same time guarding of the market against any flooding with low grade stuff that is said to abound in Texas must be looked after. The New York contract offers a premium for staple over one inch in length, provided that more than 80 per cent of the cotton tendered in each contract is of premium length. But there is no qualification as to minimum length, and the possibility of tendering large quantities of perished cotton on contract and smashing prices in that market is not remote, except as the committee guards against it.

In the spot markets there would be great relief if a place could be found for these low grades, even at very wide differences. A few years ago New York held in stock a quantity of short staple cotton, not much better than linters, and it weighed heavily on prices for months. As the classification in the New York market is determined by "value," the latitude of tenderable cotton is very wide.

The present tendency of estimators is to increase figures on the total crop. Several well-posted authorities assert that Arkansas will produce from 850,000 to 900,000 bales and that Oklahoma will produce from 600,000 to 750,000 bales. These additions to the total will make a marked difference in the final result, as it is generally conceded that the crops east of the river are very full, with the possible exception of North Carolina. While some estimators stick to their original ideas of 13,750,000 bales, a good many more are moving up to 14,500,000 bales.

Prices Are Irregular.

In the spot markets west of the river business has been very irregular and prices are nominal to a great extent. The lower grades can hardly be classed, but must be sold on types or actual samples, and prices are irregular. The movement of cotton toward the ports continues very free and exports are satisfactorily large. In the Atlantic states the grade averages very high and the premium for grade has declined.

Quite an accumulation of these high grades seems to be the result of the care exercised by shippers in not selling them too freely, a feeling brought about by the keen competition existing in all markets where good grades came forward in any great quantity.

Spinners do not seem worried over prices so much as the difficulty of obtaining the right quality. Present prices, from one angle, may seem high, but yarns are selling at a good price and are not too plentiful. Conditions in the yarn market point to a good demand for cotton and there is nothing in the cloth markets to indicate any lessening in the demand for yarns.

The low grades being slow of sale and, consequently, more difficult to finance, bring about a condition that favors concentration in the larger markets and will maintain steady movement of cotton toward these centers, even though the demand should become very light.

Mr. Banker

With the proposed New Currency law, the trust companies will be placed on a nearer par to the national banks. Trust companies grow because they advertised from the time of their inception. The trust companies have told through the daily newspapers the goods they have to offer for sale. The trust companies recognized the fact that they had something to sell—a something that the people needed—a something that was a big part of human life, and human life is human interest. The trust companies appealed to human interest—the vital part of existence. They have taught the people all about banking and the drawing of wills; they advertise their safety deposit vaults and try to tell the public that there is no mystery about banking. State and national banks have offerings to the public, the same as the trust companies. Then Mr. National Banker or Mr. State Banker or Mr. Private Banker, why not tell the public all about your business. You have no better medium in St. Louis than the Post-Dispatch. It is the one newspaper in every home and the only newspaper in many homes.

CATTLE LITTLE CHANGED AFTER IRREGULAR WEEK

Early Sharp Gain Is Lost by Middle of Period and Slight Change Follows.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	25,000	28,730	41,673
Hogs	50,000	45,087	59,213
Sheep	17,500	22,311	20,664
Horses and mules	4,000	4,293	3,360

Receipts of cattle the past week were not quite as heavy as the preceding period. Beef steers, however, were in good supply each day. Price fluctuations marked the trade in beeves throughout the week, as values swung back and forth and were unsettled. With only a moderate supply on sale Monday, market was strong and negotiations on a 10c higher basis than the close of the previous period. With a liberal supply on Tuesday, however, the advance was lost and prices came down to an even basis. This condition continued throughout the week and there was little change from the close of the preceding period. Few prime steers were received and the week's top was $9.10, with a good sprinkling of good to choice steers at $8.25@8.80, medium to good at $7.50@8.25.

Butcher cattle underwent practically the same experience relative to prices as did steers. A slight advance early in the week was lost by Wednesday, in fact, by the mid-week session prices were slightly lower than the previous week, as bulk of the butcher she-stuff was moving at a 10@15c decline. There were a few heifers that sold at $8@8.50, and a bunch of steers and heifers sold at $8.75. Bulk of the heifers went in a range of $5.75@7.75.

Cows Are Cheaper.

Cows were in good supply throughout the week, but closed 10@15c lower than the preceding period. A few good beef cows sold at $6.75@7, bulk of medium to good cows at $5.50@6.25.

Canners and cutters were very little changed throughout the week. Bulk of the canners went at $4@4.40, cutters at $4.50@4.75.

Bulls were in moderate supply and a good, strong, active market moved the showing.

Vealers opened on a steady basis, but as the week advanced prime kinds sold 25@50c higher. The top was $11, with a good sprinkling at $10.50@10.75.

Stockers and feeders showed an advance of a dime, but the movement was slow and the gain of little consequence. The market showed very little improvement over the previous week.

Receipts in the quarantine division were moderate and came from canner territory mostly. Steer offering was small and confined mostly to odd lots of common stuff, included in the canner contribution. Prices were unchanged on the steers offered for sale. Arkansas steers went to the killers at $6.15, while stock steers from the same State went at $5@6.10. Grown canner stuff was in good demand and prices a dime higher. Yearlings and heretics advanced 10@15c. Bulk of canners sold at $4@4.35, yearlings at $4.25@4.65. Fat she-stuff sold on a strong basis in a range of $5@5.50.

Hogs Make Slight Gain.

Only a good moderate supply of hogs was received and the market was a little irregular as it made a good gain the fore part of the week, most of which was lost the middle of the week and regained the latter part of the week. Prices were 30@50c higher on an average than the preceding week, but still show a good big loss from a month ago. Pigs and lights did not regai nthe entire loss on them.

The first of the week the top was as high as $8.30, which was 50c better than the low time the previous week. The bulk at the high time sold at $7.85@8.15. Later the top was down to $8.05 and the bulk went at $7.75@8. It was the good hogs with a little weight that met with the best demand. Most of the mixed light hogs sold at $7.65@7.90, and rough packers went at $7.50@7.60.

Lights and pigs were irregular sale at all times. Some choice little pigs sold for roasters at $7.75@8.25, but this is a trade that cannot be depended on to last very long. Best lights under 165 lbs. sold at $7.50@7.85, fair kinds $7.10@7.35, medium $6.50@7, and poor kinds $5@6.25, according to quality.

Sheep and Lambs Advance.

With a light supply of sheep on sale the market was active and prices on a much higher basis than the previous week and the highest in several weeks. The arrivals were all from local territory, that is, they were either Southwest or native offerings. A large per cent were sheep and as a rule they were pretty good quality and there was also a good many right good lambs offered.

Quite a lot of good lambs sold at $8, which was the top for the week and the highest for a good many weeks. Other good lambs sold at $7.75@7.90, medium grades, $7.25@7.65, poor kinds and culls $5@6.25, with a few a little lower. Buyers did not sort the lambs very deep. Yearlings sold mainly at $6@6.25, but there was only a reasonable number offered.

The first of the week mutton sheep sold largely at $4.65, but later at $4.85, showing a gain of 20c, and buyers were quite anxious for them at the advance. Some of the plainer grades sold at $4.65@4.75, the middle and latter part of the week. Best grade of stockers and choppers went at $3.35@3.85, fair grades $2.60@3.25, old cull sheep and canners $2.25@2.50, and bucks $3.75@4.

Horses and Mules Steady.

There was a liberal supply of horses on the market and they met with a good demand and prices showed a firm basis throughout the week. Eastern states furnished a good supply of buyers and they were fairly active in taking hold and paying the good prices. Good Eastern chunks and drafters sold well. Orders and buyers took these and any kind of a good big work horse at the right prices.

The Southern states were well represented, but there was not as many buyers from this section as frequently appear, but they were taking the toppy kinds of Southern horses at good prices.

Mules sold on a standard that was fully steady with the week before, and all kinds of good quality mules sold fairly well, but the type that sold best were the good quality miners. These brought good prices and shippers will make money by including a few of these among their consignments.

Missouri Wheat Crop Worth $9,063,977 More Than Last Year.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 15.—The Missouri wheat crop shows an increase of about 14,000,000 bushels over last year, the State crop report issued today says. There is a shortage of live stock.

Missouri's wheat crop this year was 35,390,833 bushels, or 13,844,113 bushels more than the 1912 crop of 21,546,720 bushels. The average yield per acre was 17.5 bushels. The value of the crop, figured at the State price of 81 cents per bushel, is $28,505,846. This is $9,063,977 more than the 1912 wheat crop.

The acreage for the 1914 wheat crop shows an increase of 7 per cent, as compared with 2,023,330 acres seeded in the fall of 1912.

Missouri now has 3,156,637 acres in wheat.

Most of this is fine, the condition for the State being 96.2. Seldom or never has a wheat crop gone into winter in better shape. Missouri farms show a shortage of all meat animals, but this scarcity of stock will go far toward relieving conditions brought about by a scant supply of feed. Seventy-one per cent of the crop correspondents report sufficient corn and other feed to carry stock through an ordinary winter. Blue grass, in the opinion of most correspondents, was not permanently injured by the heat and drouth of summer. The condition of pastures throughout the State is 76.

Hogs are scarce. As compared with an average year, the number of fat hogs on feed shows 67 per cent.

It is estimated that the prevalence of the disease is but 40 per cent. Recent fluctuations in the market, coupled with the high price of corn, have caused many farmers to dispose of hogs, which, under most favorable conditions, would have been given a longer feed. These same conditions have also sent a large number of brood sows to the fattening pen or to market.

The number of cattle on feed, as compared with an average year, is 55 per cent.

Sheep also show a shortage. An estimate placed them at 75 per cent, as compared with number on farms for average year.

The Government crop report, estimating the yield of corn at 2,463,017,000 bu, or 90,000,000 more than the forecast a month ago, caused a sharp fractional break in futures when issued the past week. Farm reserves of 137,972,000 bu, compared with only 64,764,000 bu a year ago, also were much heavier than expected, but the trade thought the figures to high. In the late week prices rose rather sharply on small receipts and good cash demands.

Aside from the crop report, which caused Liverpool corn cables to come lower, there was not much of importance in the market news, and best opinion is that corn is dragging close to the low level for some time to come.

It has often been the case that the November crop report marked the low point of the winter, especially when the forecast is bearish, as at present.

Winter weather usually follows the report, so that short sellers on the bearish figures are rounded up quickly, when the trade begins to talk of extra heavy stock-feeding demands.

Argentine news played a part in wheat, but the recent 4c advance has made the trade cautions in following prices up. Reports of damage from the Southern country are coming from more authentic sources, and indicate that considerable loss of the wheat crop there might result, unless rain falls over a wide area.

The Crop Report.

Details of the crop report follow:

CORN.—Total production, preliminarily estimated, 2,463,017,000 bushels, compared with 3,124,746,000 bushels last year. Yield per acre 23.0 bushels, compared with 29.2 bushels last year, and 27.0 bushels the 10-year average. Average farm price 70.7 cents per bushel, compared with 58.4 cents last year. Quality 95.8 per cent, compared with the 10-year average. Corn of 1912 crop remaining on farms Nov. 1 was 137,973,000 bushels, compared with 64,764,000 bushels of the 1911 crop remaining on farms Nov. 1 last year.

WHEAT.—Total production, preliminarily estimated, 753,233,000 bushels, compared with 730,267,000 bushels last year. Yield per acre, 15.2 bushels, compared with 15.9 bushels last year, and 14.2 bushels the 10-year average. Average farm price 77.0 cents per bushel, compared with 83.8 cents last year. Weight per measured bushel 58.6 pounds, compared with 58.3 pounds last year, and 57.8 pounds the 10-year average.

OATS.—Total production, preliminarily estimated, 1,122,139,000 bushels, compared with 1,418,337,000 bushels last year. Yield per acre 29.3 bushels, compared with 37.4 bushels last year, and 29.8 bushels the 10-year average. Average farm price 37.9 cents per bushel, compared with 33.0 cents last year. Weight per measured bushel 32.1 pounds, compared with 33.0 pounds last year, and 31.5 pounds the 10-year average.

Wheat's Position Stronger.

Aside from the Argentine news the position of wheat seems to be a little stronger. It is a well-known axiom of the grain trade to never sell the late months of a big crop or buy the late months of a small one.

It will be well to remember that a year ago speculators got short corn below 50c, owing to the record crop of 3,124,000,000 bu, and that the advance that came in the early spring, and later in the summer on drouth damage, was made the more easy on account of an extensive short interest.

The same position now prevails in wheat. Supplies are apparently [illegible] in all directions and the trade [illegible] to follow on advances. [illegible] wheat under 88c, however, with a discount of 2c compared with May, is being quietly absorbed by some very good traders, who are looking to the weather later in the year to develop talk of winter killing or early drouth reports.

Every winter brings some bull ammunition of this character, and while it may be a little early to bank on these developments, they should be kept in mind in distant forecasts on the market.

Statistics apparently are bearish, but the wheat movement in the Northwest shows signs of having been fairly well cleaned up, and it must be remembered that the possibility of competition with Canadian supplies, owing to the lowering of the tariff, may have forced farmers to sell their grain more freely this year than in some years past. The Canadian movement also shows some signs of lessening.

Acreage Is Large.

The Ohio crop report places the condition of winter wheat at 101 per cent of a normal, against 98 per cent at this time last year and 94 last July. Acreage is 101 per cent.

Argentine wheat shipments for the week totaled 488,000 bu, compared with 296,000 bu last week and [illegible]000 bu last year. Corn, 1,955,000 bu, against 2,380,000 bu and 7,320,000 bu.

India—Shipments this week amount to 224,000 bu, against 496,000 bu last week and 1,424,000 bu last year.

Australian shipments this week amount to 756,000 bu, against 896,000 bu last week and 384,000 bu last year.

According to an official report the wheat crop of England and Wales amounts to 53,128,000 bu, and oats 93,750,000 bu. This compares with 53,680,000 bu for wheat and 91,792,000 bu for oats last year.

Bradstreet's exports showed:

Wheat and flour—This week, 7,600,000 bu; last week, 7,833,000 bu; last year, 5,171,000 bu; two years ago, [illegible]513,000 bu.

Corn—This week, 15,000 bu; last week, 10,000 bu; last year, 25,000 bu; two years ago, 164,000 bu.

Shipments wheat and flour, July 1 to date, 113,148,000 bu; same period year ago, 85,448,000 bu.

Shipments corn, July 1 to date, 1,148,000 bu; same period year ago, 1,454,000 bu.

POLICE GATHER LID CLUB EVIDENCE FOR GRAND JURY ACTION

Reports on Special Surveillance for Last Week in Circuit Attorney's Hands.

STATUS TO BE DECIDED

Body Will Pass on Whether Club Charters Give Exemption From Dramshop Laws.

Lid clubs, it became known yesterday, have been under special police surveillance for the past week, and daily reports of what has transpired at them have been forwarded to Circuit Attorney Harvey for submission to the grand jury, which will begin an investigation into alleged fraudulent liquor traffic tomorrow. The campaign of observation will continue until midnight tonight.

As lid clubs can be prosecuted only on the theory that they are illegal dramshops carrying on a regular liquor business without a saloon license, the grand jury will be called upon to decide whether, by reason of the fact that they are operated under club charters, they can enjoy exemption from dramshop laws.

Patrolmen Watch Clubs.

Under direction of the Circuit Attorney, uniformed patrolmen were stationed inside the clubs at all hours of the day and night, making notes of the conduct of the clubs.

If drinks were served at a bar by a white-aproned bartender or delivered to tables by waiters, the fact was mentioned in the police report. The number of persons who visited the places, their identity, if it could be learned, and whether there were any women visitors, also were included in the reports.

The police obtained the names of bartenders, waiters and persons posing as officers of the clubs. They also made note of the class of drinks served and whether drinks were paid for with cash or by check. In each place where a cash register was used a special note was made of that fact.

The absence of reading rooms, gymnasiums and dining rooms in places conducted as clubs, under charters granted on the representation that the places were to be carried on for literary, athletic and social purposes, was reported, as well as information as to whether the clubs seemed to derive their chief revenue from the sale of drinks.

Police to Make No Arrests.

The police were not ordered to make any arrests. Chief Young was informed that any raids to be made should be postponed until after grand jury action.

At midnight last night a policemen was stationed in each club, with orders to remain there during his eight hours of duty. Two other shifts of policemen were to be substituted during the remaining 16 hours of Sunday.

Clubs in Central District under the police eye are the Waiters' Club, 204½ North Seventh street, which, according to the police, is frequented by men only; Deutscher Kellner Verein, 12½ South Broadway; Red Men's Club, 918 Pine street; Theatrical Mechanics' Association, 16 South Sixth street, and Negro Democratic Club, 2019 Chestnut street.

After the police reports describing conditions in the various clubs have been reviewed, the grand jury will summon club attaches and members as witnesses.

COURT ORDERS NEVADA LIGHT SERVICE RESTORED

Mayor Gets Injunction in Favor of Consumers Who Refused to Put Up Deposits.

NEVADA, Mo., Nov. 15.—Mayor W. B. Martin, acting for the City of Nevada, today obtained an injunction in the Probate Court here against the local Utilities Company, prohibiting the discriminating of service to consumers who had not placed a deposit with the company to insure payment of bills. The court ordered that all service which had been cut off be restored.

Thursday evening the company cut off the light and power service of virtually half of the business district. The action came as the climax to a long controversy.

The State Utilities Commission has had the Nevada case under consideration but offered no relief. Accordingly, the city took the matter in its hands and asked the injunction.

The petition filed today charged that the company is insolvent, has large outstanding debts, is wholly unable to meet obligations and that, for this reason, money placed on deposit with the company would probably be forever lost and the depositor would have no remedy under the law. The court granted the petition in full.

GIRL SUES FOR $25,000

Avers Electrical Shock, While Using Telephone, Injured Her.

A suit for $25,000 damages was filed yesterday by Miss Buelah Carter of Baldwin, Ill., against the Southwestern (Bell) Telegraph & Telephone Co. on account of injuries arising from an electrical shock she says she received when she was using a nickel-in-the-slot telephone.

She avers she went into a drug store at Whittier street and Easton avenue, Aug. 16 last, to use the telephone and received the shock when she lifted the receiver. According to her petition she was rendered unconscious and since has suffered from nervousness.

GIFTS MAILED NOW WILL BE DELIVERED ON CHRISTMAS EVE

Postoffice Department Adopts New Practice to Encourage Early Posting of Packages.

"Not to be opened until Christmas."

This inscription on a parcel post package will insure its delivery no sooner and no later than Christmas Eve, regardless of how much ahead of time the parcel is mailed.

To prevent a repetition of the usual ante-holiday flood of mail this Christmas, the Postoffice Department has arranged facilities that will be of great convenience to those who will do their shopping early.

Every year the great majority of persons wait until the last minute to send presents so that the packages will not reach their destination before Christmas Day. This has resulted in an annual jam at express, freight and postoffices.

With the growing popularity of the parcel post, the mail carriers anticipate an enormous lot of work and it is to do away with the eleventh hour rush that a new rule has been established.

This rule provides that all packages labeled to show that they contain Christmas gifts can be mailed weeks in advance and not be delivered until Christmas eve.

Large special racks have been provided in each city and Christmas packages will be held in these racks ready for delivery by an emergency corps at the proper moment.

Another convenience for shippers will be a special Christmas mailing department that will be established in both the Eighteenth and Eighth street offices within the next week.

Clerks Will Attach Stamps.

Those wishing to mail packages and not caring to be troubled with the purchase of stamps may take their parcels to the Christmas department, where clerks will weigh them and accept cash for the requisite amount of postage. The sender can leave the money and go on about his or her business and the mail clerks will attach the stamps.

Postmaster Selph hopes the public will take advantage of the new system and do its Christmas mailing early.

UNIONIST CENSURES MANN AS FRIEND OF MINE OWNERS

Speaker at Labor Convention Says Congressman Hinders Investigation in Colorado.

By Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 15.—The Colorado coal miners' strike was a subject of debate on the floor of the American Federation of Labor convention today, and a resolution was adopted instructing the Executive Council to co-operate with the United Mine Workers of America in obtaining a Federal investigation of conditions in the strike district.

John H. Walker, of the United Mine Workers, said that through the aid of Representative Mann the mine owners had been able thus far to avert a Congressional investigation in Colorado.

A resolution on behalf of the railroad shopmen was adopted on motion of President Gompers and ordered telegraphed to President Wilson.

The convention indorsed a Congressional bill establishing a minimum wage of not less than $3 a day for civil service employes and also the Lewis bill for reclassification of the wages of postofice clerks.

The Legislative Committee was instructed to seek amendment of the Federal eight-hour law, which had been interpreted so as to cover few articles purchased under contract by the Government.

The Federation requested Congress to print copies of the lobby investigation of the Mulhall charges for general distribution. The Federation adjourned until Monday.

WOMAN LOSES LIBEL SUIT

Jury Finds for the Post-Dispatch in Schwer Case.

A jury in Judge Grimm's court yesterday afternoon returned a verdict in favor of the Post-Dispatch in a case in which it had been sued for libel by Mrs. Otto J. Schwer, divorced wife of Dr. Schwer. The suit grew out of publication in the Post-Dispatch of proceedings in the divorce suit of Dr. Schwer against Mrs. Schwer, which was won by Mrs. Schwer at a second hearing. Mrs. Schwer sued for $25,000.

In deciding for the Post-Dispatch the jury found that its report of the Schwer divorce case had been reasonably fair and accurate.

BRITISH ESTATE FOR A ST. LOUIS NEWSPAPER MAN

Andrew E. Murphy of the Post-Dispatch Is Legatee of Wealthy Uncle.

Friends of Andrew E. Murphy, of 5927 West Cabanne place, for 10 years a member of the Post-Dispatch staff, have recently learned that, through the death of his uncle, Gen. Thomas J. Murphy of the British Army, last March, he has inherited a considerable estate in the United Kingdom.

He said last night that he would probably go to England within a few months, with a view to settling the estate. He visited England last summer, but did not make known to his St. Louis friends, at that time, the fact of his inheritance.

Gen. Murphy, who had a long and distinguished record of service, died at Bath, in Somerset, England. He was for 30 years in India, and was in the United States, on leave of absence, during the Civil War.

In recent years, following his retirement, he lived in London, where he was a well known figure in club life. He was a bachelor, and was a [illegible] of Surgeon-General Sir Thomas Gallwey.

NOBODY CAN TELL IF YOU DARKEN YOUR GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE TEA

Druggist Says that Sage Tea when Mixed with Sulphur Prevents Dandruff and Stops Falling Hair.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, then left to age and carefully filtered will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching, and falling hair.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally; so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur;" it surely helps folks appear years younger.—ADV.

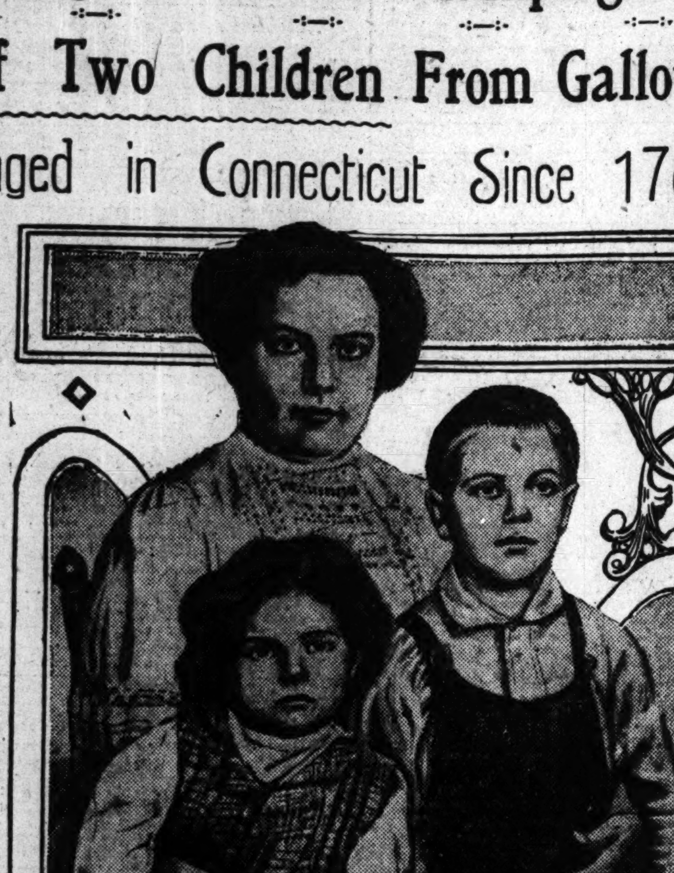
Suffragists Leading an Active Campaign to Save Mother of Two Children From Gallows

No Woman Hanged in Connecticut Since 1786

Pardon Board Will Be Asked to Commute Sentence of Mrs. Wakefield, Convicted of Plotting Husband's Death, Because Other Women Have Escaped Death.



MRS. WAKEFIELD AND HER TWO CHILDREN.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 15.—Aroused as they never have been before, Connecticut women of every walk in life are shouldering the burden of preventing the State from inflicting the death punishment upon Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield, convicted several days ago as an accomplice in the murder of her husband.

From every conceivable vantage point wives and daughters of prominent men, suffragists and women opposed to their sex exercising the right of franchise are attacking as disgraceful and unwarranted the carrying out of the court edict that Mrs. Wakefield shall be hanged.

From every corner of the State the protests of the women are being voiced in the form of publicly circulated petitions to which many thousands of names are being signed daily, in publicity campaigns and in personal demands being made upon members of the State Board of Pardons, legislators and jurists. Although Mrs. Wakefield still is in a cell in the prison death house, no word yet has been received by her indicating what will be the result of the notable crusade which is attracting nation-wide attention because of the persistency with which it is being waged.

Undaunted by the declaration of Gov. Baldwin that he is powerless to intervene over the head of the Board of Pardons, of which, however, he is a member, the women leading the fight have concentrated their efforts more and more in the last two days and will center their attack upon the legal board which may commute the sentence. The first hearing of the case by the board will be granted Dec. 8.

No Woman Executed Since 1786.

If Mrs. Wakefield dies for the murder of her husband, in the actual commission of which she was not accused of having taken a hand, she will be the first woman put to death in the State since 1786.

Connecticut's leniency toward women who have been convicted of murder is explained in part by its efforts to atone for its unsavory record in Colonial days, when six women were burned or hanged as witches. In 1745 Elizabeth Shaw, a feeble-minded girl, was hanged on her father's testimony that she had killed her infant child. She was executed after she had ridden a mile to the scaffold seated on her coffin and crying aloud to be saved. But since Connecticut became a State only one woman has been legally put to death within its limits.

Mrs. Wakefield is 24 years old and is one of six children of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Webster of Middlebury, an uncultured but honest couple, who for years have eked a bare living out of a rocky farm.

The daughter received practically no education and she was only 17 when she was married to Wakefield, a Bristol farmhand. She became housekeeper for James Plew, a Middlebury farmer.

Plew and Wakefield soon quarreled about her. Wakefield was found slain last June. Plew confessed the deed, but he and Mrs. Wakefield blamed each other for plotting the murder so that they could be married. Plew, who has a wife and child, and Mrs. Wakefield, who has two children, have been sentenced to be hanged on March 4, 1914.

Five Must Favor Pardon.

Several suffragists organizations are circulating petitions to the Board of Pardons, asking that Mrs. Wakefield's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment. The Board of Pardons comprises Gov. Baldwin; any Judge whom the Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court may designate; Morris W. Seymour of Bridgeport, a lawyer; Frank H. Turkington of Morris, one time Sheriff; Dr. S. B. Overlook, of Pomfret, and Lewis Sperry, of Windsor, a lawyer.

It has been stated in the Connecticut press that the vote of the Board must be unanimous to commute a sentence, but the law was changed four years ago to make a favorable vote of five members effective.

Mrs. Wakefield's children are with her parents. The boy, who is six years old, and the girl, who is four, know nothing of their parents' fate, and they daily say to their grandmother, "Mamma will be home today." Plew's infant son is with the boy's mother.

A pathetic appeal purporting to have been written by Mrs. Wakefield's mother to Gov. Baldwin, urging clemency for her daughter, has been printed in many newspapers. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Webster cannot read or write, and she has made no appeal to anyone. She said to a reporter:

"[illegible] was always a good girl, but Plew had a terrible power over her. They are worse than my girl is if they think of hanging her. I would go to her if I had the money and knew the way. Wakefield and Plew both threatened many times to kill Bessie, and between them she had a life of terror."

Some Women Favor Death.

The fact that many women have been convicted of single-handed and premeditated murder in Connecticut in the last half century, and that all have escaped the death penalty, and that Mrs. Wakefield is not even charged with a part in the actual killing of her husband, has incited a wide-spread revolt against the decree of the extreme penalty in her case.

But all Connecticut women are not of one mind on the subject, and many of them think that Mrs. Wakefield should go to her death with Plew, the Post-Dispatch presents herewith the diversified views it has obtained of Connecticut women who are prominent in the suffrage movement, anti-suffrage organizations and in social life.

Mrs. Alexander Troup, president of the New Haven Political Equality Club, contends that no exception should be made in Mrs. Wakefield's favor on the ground of sex.

"But," said Mrs. Troup, "the State has no right to take away the life which it cannot confer, and, having taken, cannot restore. Life was given by God for his own purposes, which men have no means of definitely knowing, and, therefore they have no right to take the risk of thwarting those purposes by taking life perhaps prematurely. Of course, I should not go so far as to deny the right of defending one's own life by taking that of another, but that is beside this question."

Mrs. Carlos French Stoddard, another New Haven woman leader, agreed with Mrs. Troup in condemning capital punishment, in advocating a single standard for men and women criminals and in holding that if Plew dies on the gallows Mrs. Wakefield also should be executed.

"Women Should Have Voice in Laws."

Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn of Hartford, president of the Connecticut Woman Suffragist Association, said:

"We are not actuated by sympathy for Mrs. Wakefield for we do not believe that she is entitled to much, but we hold that no woman should be hanged under man-made laws. Connecticut bars women from participation in the law-making function, and no woman should be hanged unless women concur equally with men in the procedure which determines life or death. We are opposed to the institution of capital punishment as a savage, degrading and brutalizing relic of barbarism, and sooner or later it will cease to be the law of our State. Deplorable though it would be, the hanging of Mrs. Wakefield would do more than any other agency to hasten the inevitable day of equal suffrage in Connecticut."

Mrs. Leo Herz of New Orleans, a coworker with Mrs. Troup and Mrs. Stoddard in the suffragist ranks, said:

"If women had the right to vote they would abolish capital punishment. It ought to be abolished for both men and women. Mrs. Wakefield's execution will be doubly unjust, because she is one of those who has had no vote or voice in making the laws."

Mrs. William J. Blickensderfer of Stamford, whose husband is a wealthy business man, announced that she would devote all of her energies in an effort to save Mrs. Wakefield's life. Mrs. Blickensderfer tried hard to save Mary Rogers, the Vermont murderess, who was hanged in December, 1905, and she recently has succeeded in having the death sentence of Pasquale Esposito of Mianus commuted to life imprisonment. She has been engaged also in reformatory work among criminals. Mrs. Blickensderfer said:

Amazed at Women's Opposition.

"It is amazing to learn that women are opposing commutation. I feel sure that such opposition is the result of hastily formed opinions, for naturally every womanly attribute would revolt at the hideous proposal of taking a woman's life in such a cowardly manner. Having done so much for the men, I at least would be inconsistent if I did not try to save the life of one of my own sex."

Mrs. Terrence S. McDermott, a prominent New Haven suffragist, said: "Women must not let sentiment run away with judgment in Mrs. Wakefield's case to the degree of trying to upset the law. If Mrs. Wakefield is guilty she should pay the extreme penalty, whether it be hanging or life imprisonment. But I strongly believe that capital punishment should be abolished and some other form adopted."

Mrs. Daniel H. Markham, president of the Hartford Anti-Suffrage Association, said: "While personally I think that capital punishment should be abolished for all, I believe with my anti-suffragists in enforcing the laws as they stand until they are repealed. Connecticut always has been a well governed State, and we think the justice has been done in Mrs. Wakefield's case. She has had a fair trial and there appears to be no reason why she should not receive her deserts. No matter what the suffragists may do, we probably shall take no action for or against the unfortunate woman."

ST. LOUIS POSTOFFICE TO STORE POSTAGE STAMPS

Local Office Named as Distributing Station During Christmas and Holiday Rush.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Postmaster-General Burleson today selected the postoffice at St. Louis as a temporary storage place for postage stamps, to meet emergency demands incident to the Christmas rush by postoffices in the territory surrounding St. Louis.

Five million postage stamps in packages, already marked as to their value and denomination, will be sent the Postmaster at St. Louis, and other Postmasters in the vicinity of St. Louis will be instructed by Third Assistant Postmaster-General Dockery to apply for their extra supplies to St. Louis. Under this plan time will be saved in getting stamps from a nearby source rather than from Washington.

$4,775,000 TO MISSOURI

State Leads in Amount of Federal Deposit to Move Crops.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—To date the Secretary of the Treasury has deposited more money in banks in Missouri for movement of local crops than in any other State. Today the total deposited in Missouri banks amounted to $4,775,000. Illinois, with $4,000,000, comes next in amount of deposits for this purpose.

SHOE MAN CHARGES TROMBONE PLAYER WITH DOG FRAUDS

MAIL SWINDLE ALLEGED

Millionaire's Complaint Tells of Disillusionment After "Winning" Kennel Prizes.

George Warren Brown of 40 Portland place, president of the Brown Shoe Co., yesterday caused the arrest of William Grosskopf, a trombone player, of 1619 Wash street, on a warrant charging use of the mails to defraud. The following interesting story is contained in the allegations in Brown's complaint:

Last February the trombone player called on the millionaire shoe man at his office and blew his own horn with such virtuosity as to convince Brown that his visitor was one of the greatest living experts on collies. Brown is the owner of a fine kennel of collies.

Grosskopf said that there was to be a big collie show in New York and that he was going to enter a dog. He suggested that Brown also make an entry, as the first prize would be a handsome and valuable silver cup.

Entries Are Authorized.

Brown agreed and commissioned the trombone player to act as his agent, paying him, he says, $5 to put the dog in condition for the show and defraying his incidental expenses in New York. On Feb. 22 Grosskopf went to Brown with the glad tidings that his entry had taken first prize and won the silver cup. The gratified fancier then paid Grosskopf $25, which, the latter said, he had advanced for the entry fee. Grosskopf explained that the cup was to be exhibited at other shows and would not be delivered to the winner until June.

On March 12 Grosskopf wrote to Brown, calling his attention to a collie show in Philadelphia. Brown, believing himself the owner of a blue-ribbon dog, authorized Grosskopf to enter dogs for him at Philadelphia and paid him $28 expense money.

Soon afterwards Brown received a letter from Grosskopf urging him to enter a dog in a Kansas City show, where the first prize was to be a Blue Merle female collie of great value.

Joins a Chicago Club.

Brown did not agree to exhibit in Kansas City, but later authorized Grosskopf to enter his dog in a show at Bloomington, Ill., where, the musician told him, the same Blue Merle collie offered at Kansas City was to be the prize. Grosskopf took to Brown the pleasant information that his dog had swept the boards at Bloomington, and received $25 for expenses. Grosskopf showed a letter signed "R. A. Mittelstadt, secretary of the Bloomington Collie Club," and certifying that Brown was the winner.

It was then easy for Grosskopf to induce Brown to become a member of the United Kennel Club of Chicago and to give him $12 as the yearly fee in advance.

But, as the months passed and none of the prizes which Brown fondly believed he had won put in appearance, he at last became suspicious. By means of correspondence, he alleges, he learned that none of his dogs had ever been exhibited at any show by Grosskopf; that there had not been a dog show in Bloomington for 16 years; that Mittlestadt was not secretary of a collie club in Bloomington; and that his membership card in the Chicago Kennel Club was a counterfeit.

Grosskopf's Explanation.

Grosskopf was arraigned before United States Commissioner Mitchell and was held under $500 bond for a hearing on Nov. 26.

After his arrest Grosskopf said that he sold a dog to Brown in 1911 for $40, one of the considerations being that he was to exhibit it at dog shows for Brown. He said Brown later gave $25 to him to pay as an entry fee at the show, and later paid him $50 more for entry fees. He failed to exhibit the dog, he said, because the shows did not offer competitions in the class to which the dog belonged.

After failing to enter the dog, he said, he reimbursed Brown for the $75 entry fee by giving him another dog valued by him at $75.

MOTORMAN IS ACQUITTED

Jesse Hopkins, a motorman for the United Railways, was acquitted Friday of a charge of manslaughter by a jury in Judge Kinsey's court. A work car on which Hopkins was motorman collided with a wagon driven by Louis Thomas, Aug. 12, on the Manchester road.

Thomas, a truck farmer, was thrown from the wagon and killed. The evidence tended to show that Thomas drove his team over the railway track to get out of the way of an automobile behind him.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of Louis Meyer, who departed this life Nov. 17, 1911.

Silently the shades of evening
  Gather round my lonely door,
Silently they bring before me
  That dear face I see no more.

Rest in peace, your cares are ended,
Rest in peace, your work is done;
You are gone, and those who loved you
  Now are coming, one by one.

Sadly missed by CARRIE.

In Memoriam.

In affectionate remembrance of my dear, devoted sister, Mary A. Higgins, who departed this life six years ago today, Nov. 16, 1907.

May her precious soul have peaceful rest. Her memory will ever be most lovingly cherished and her loss most deeply felt by the only sister.

HARRIET A. HIGGINS.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear father and grandfather, Jacob Armbruster, who departed from us two years ago, Nov 10, 1911.

In the graveyard sleeping,
  Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
  In this lonely, silent grave.

You will never be forgotten,
  Never shall your memory fade,
Loving thoughts will always linger
  Round the grave where you are laid.

LOST AND FOUND

IF YOU LOSE ANYTHING, and will advertise it here, you will surely recover it if found by an honest person. A 3-time ad seldom fails. Remarkable recoveries are brought about every day through this column. Your druggist our agent.

IF YOU FIND ANYTHING, bring it to the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau, 210-12 North Broadway. Get a claim check. Advertise the article. Reclaim it if the owner does not.

THE LAW—People who find lost articles are interested in knowing that the State law (sections 8263 and 8273, R. S., 1909) is strict in requiring them to seek the owners through advertisement and otherwise, and that a failure to do so, if same can be proven, involves a severe penalty. (52)

FARMS FOR SALE

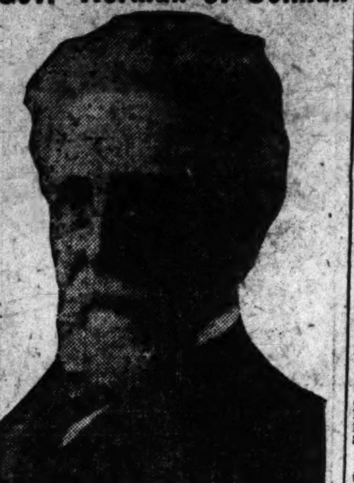
Gov. Norman J. Colman



Spent the last 30 years of his life building up and improving what he claimed to be the "Best Stock Farm" in the entire State of Missouri.

212 acres of splendid, rich, fertile ground, rolling, but not broken, 12 miles from St. Louis on the Olive Street and Mill Creek roads, near Creve Coeur Lake, and overlooking the Missouri River and its famous bottom lands for miles; good house and all necessary outbuildings, family orchard of miscellaneous fruit and plenty of fine water. This is a splendid farm, situated in the richest and most picturesque part of the County, on fine roads, with good transportation. The Creve Coeur branch of the Missouri Pacific R. R. runs through the place, and Colman station is only a short distance from the residence.

This must be sold. Parties looking for a bargain should waste no time in seeing this. For price, terms and other information, see

REAL ESTATE FOR EXCHANGE

FARMING IMPLEMENTS Wtd.—To exchange my $700 equity in new 4-room cottage in East St. Louis for farming implements. Box B-97, Post-Dispatch.

INCOME PROPERTY Wtd.—Nicely located good 8-room, Springfield, Mo., suburban home; cement cellar, cistern, well, henhouse, woodshed, barn, about 2 acres land, several minutes' walk to car line; about ¾ mile to State Normal; exchange for good land that will net 6 per cent; price $4000; some discount for cash. R. 2, Box 65, Humansville, Mo. (99)

FARM—For exchange, or for sale; 17 acres; new 3-room bungalow, in California; soil and climate especially adapted for English walnuts, almonds, prunes, apricots, olives, figs, grapes, etc., which will net owner from $10,000 to $15,000 annually after trees come into full bearing. Inexhaustible supply of water 8 ft. below surface; most beautiful scenery in the world; good roads, beautiful big trees, and clear streams; days hot and nights cool; 3 miles from biggest orange ranch in California, 4 miles from big town, where there are large canneries and creameries, and 6 miles from county seat; about 5 acres in good stand of alfalfa, 7 crops a year, balance plowed and leveled ready for seeding or tree planting; 16 acres of alfalfa will keep 16 cows and 80 hogs year around. Cows net $10 a month each. Creamery man calls every day for cream. All S. P. trains stop at back gate. Store, school and church within 500 yards of place. This land sown in barley and alfalfa this winter will insure a good, steady income from the future alfalfa sales alone. My family is now living upon the place, but my business compels me to remain in St. Louis. This is an exceptional opportunity to secure a small California ranch for $300 per acre; encumbered $1250. What have you to offer? Prefer county, but will consider any. Box T-187, Post-Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS COMPOSER TO WRITE PAGEANT MUSIC

Fred Shepherd Converse Will Divide Labors With Local Man.

Fred Shepherd Converse, one of the founders of the Boston Opera Company and a distinguished composer, is to divide the duties of writing the music for next spring's St. Louis pageant with a local composer, it was decided at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the pageant Saturday.

The local composer is as yet not selected. Converse, chosen at the suggestion of Percy MacKaye, pageant master, is the author of an opera, "The Sacrifice," and is at present at work with MacKaye upon an opera. He is the composer of several pieces which form a part of the program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other large orchestras.

He was graduated from Harvard in 1893, and later served for three years as an assistant professor there. His musical education was obtained in Munich.

Converse is to write the music for "The Masque of St. Louis," the prophetic part of the pageant, which is to be written and staged by MacKaye. The local composer is to write the score for the historical portion, which is under the direction of Thomas Wood Stevens.

COCHEMS ARRANGES FOR PROGRESSIVE LECTURES

St. Louis Will Hear Cockran, Lindsay and Other Speakers This Winter.

The City Central Committee of the Progressive party last night arranged with Edward B. Cochems, chairman of the Speakers' Bureau of the National Progressive party, to include St. Louis in a lecture circuit that will bring to this city several Chautauqua favorites in the near future.

Among the most prominent speakers who have been engaged by the bureau are W. Bourke Cockran, Judge Ben Lindsay of Denver, Fred Landis of Indiana, Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, daughter of Julia Ward Howe who wrote the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and Bainbridge Colby of New York.

The expense of bringing the speakers to St. Louis was guaranteed by several hundred Progressives who heard Cochems detail the plans of the circuit at the Planters Hotel last night.

The first of the lectures will be given about Dec. 8 and the others will follow a month apart. Child labor, the divorce evil and other matters embodied in the Progressive Party's platform will be the subjects discussed.

Judge Bert Nortoni of the Court of Appeals, Arthur N. Sager, Dr. W. H. Mackenzie, Eugene Vogt, Paul Janis and Julian Gibson made brief addresses indorsing the lecture program.

Physician Drives Women Home Then Goes to Police Station.

Mrs. Margaret Kipping, 61 years old, of 7003 Michigan avenue, was knocked down by an automobile driven by Dr. Robert E. Gaul of 3557 Sidney street, at 5 o'clock yesterday evening, while she was crossing Michigan avenue near Sidney street.

The physician placed her in his car, drove her home and summoned her family physician, who found she had suffered bruises and cuts. Then Dr. Gaul drove to the Carondelet Police Station and made a report of the accident. He said he was driving slowly and that Mrs. Kipping stepped from the sidewalk in front of the machine. No charge was placed against him.

TWO NEGRO PRISONERS ARE PUBLICLY WHIPPED

Crowd Views Plying of Lash at Whipping Post at Delaware Workhouse.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 15.—William Reason and James Byard, two young negroes, convicted of entering two houses with the intent to commit larceny, were whipped with 20 lashes each at the whipping post of the Newcastle County Workhouse today. They had been sentenced to 40 lashes, of which they received 20 last Saturday.

The agitation in Congress over the cases of these two men attracted attention to today's whipping and the attendance of spectators was unusually large. Reason was led out and the 20 lashes applied to his back by Warden Crawford, after which Byard received his second installment.

The two scarcely flinched as the "cat" was applied to the bare backs.

Warden Crawford told inquirers he had never seen blood drawn since the whipping post had been established at the workhouse. Several of the witnesses said they approved of a whipping such as they had just seen, as it inflicted no physical injury and as a mental reminder of punishment might prove more effective to some criminals than imprisonment.

NEGROES FAILED IN ATTEMPTED HOLDUP

Saloon Keeper Produced Revolver Instead of Cash and Highwaymen Fled.

At 11:45 o'clock last night two negroes walked into the Hohmann-Williams saloon at 7200 N. Broadway and were served with drinks. Both exclaimed at the same time, "I'll pay for them." But instead of taking currency from their pockets they produced revolvers and ordered Charles Hohmann, who had served them, to give them the money in the cash register.

Hohmann turned as if to comply and grabbed his revolver which was lying near the cash register. One of the negroes fired. The negro had been leaning over the bar and held the pistol so close to Hohman that the lower part of the saloon keeper's face was powder burned, though the bullet missed him. The negroes then ran from the saloon. Hohmann, dazed by the shot fired so close to him, did not return the fire.

LLOYD OSBORNE SUED FOR DIVORCE AND CHILDREN

Wife of Stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson Charges Desertion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—Lloyd Osborne, stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson, was made the defendant today in an action for divorce brought by Katherine D. Osborne, charging desertion and asking custody of their two minor children.

A property settlement, alleged to have been agreed upon between the two out of court, is embodied in the complaint and the plaintiff asks that it become a part of the decree.

Mrs. Osborne was Miss Katharine Durham before her marriage in Honolulu, April 26, 1896. She alleges that she and her husband have lived apart since October, 1901, when, she says, he deserted her.

Thief Snatches Woman's Purse.

Mrs. Jane Lyon of 4404 McPherson avenue was robbed of her hand bag containing $1, a pair of gloves and a handkerchief, at 9:30 o'clock last night, while walking at Taylor and McPherson avenues. Mrs. Lyon was carrying a raised umbrella. The robber pulled this down over her head, grabbed the hand bag and ran.

Franciscus, Frank Johnson, William R. Kinsey, W. H. Lee, E. S. Lewis, Oliver Campbell and Judges Shield, Dyer, Allen, McQuillin, Adams, Hennings, Nortoni and Reynolds.

Hagerman, who was 65 years old, is survived by two sons, James Hagerman Jr., former City Collector, and Lee Walker Hagerman, former member of the House of Delegates. He was a former president of the American Bar Association and of the St. Louis Bar Association, and a member of the Noonday, St. Louis, University and Bellerive clubs.

WOMAN IMAGINES SHE MADE TRIP TO HEAVEN

Hallucination Said to Have Been Caused by Discussing Religion While Depressed.

Mrs. Della McCain of Granite City, who has suffered from mental depression since the birth of the younger of her two children, was sent yesterday to the Illinois Hospital for the Insane at Jacksonville.

Her mania took a religious form, according to the witnesses at the official inquiry into her mental condition. This religious element was introduced, members of the family believe, by the call of some friends at a time when she was suffering from an attack of depression. They talked of religious matters to her and soon afterward she became possessed of a belief that she had made a journey to heaven. She continued to tell at the top of her voice of her imagined experiences until it was found impracticable to keep her at home.

ROBBED OF $35,000 GEMS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 15.—L. Crossman, a Chicago diamond merchant, notified the police of Minneapolis and St. Paul today that he was robbed of diamonds valued at $35,000 on a Rock Island train from Davenport, Io., to St. Paul.

He said he believed the robbery was committed just before reaching St. Paul.

Falls Between Cars, Leg Amputated.

William H. Meacham, 32, of 1815 La Salle street, a switchman for the Terminal Railway, fell between two cars Friday night in the yards at Seventh and Cerre streets. His right leg was injured so badly that it had to be amputated above the knee. He was taken to St. Mary's Infirmary and is in a serious condition.

PEOPLE'S LEAGUE TO ASK U. S. INQUIRY IN BRIDGE DELAY

Dr. W. W. Boyd Says Congress Will Be Requested to Investigate the Causes.

VOTE ON PLANS FAVORED

He Predicts Bonds Won't Carry Unless Approaches Are Independent of Terminal.

Congress will be asked by the People's League to investigate the causes which have delayed the construction of the free bridge, authorized in 1906, according to Dr. W. W. Boyd, president of the league.

"Congress has three times extended the period in which we may complete the free bridge," said Dr. Boyd yesterday, "and we now have until Feb. 15, 1915, in which to construct the approaches in Illinois and make it a complete structure that can be used to compete with the Terminal Association.

"The bridge was authorized by the public in 1906, when $3,500,000 of bonds were voted, 10 to 1, for the purpose of destroying the river arbitrary maintained by the Terminal Railroad Association. The Terminal Association still maintains this arbitrary on coal, one of the principal items in the St. Louis freight bill, and yet city officials have tried to construct the bridge approaches so that they will join the Terminal's tracks on the east and west sides of the river.

Eager to Complete Bridge.

"This plan has prevented the completion of the bridge, I believe, together with the fact that a 50-year franchise on the bridge was granted before the structure even was completed. The public has three times refused to vote bonds to complete the bridge under these conditions, and I am convinced it never will vote the necessary bonds until the franchise is absolutely repealed and the approaches are made independent of the Terminal Association."

Dr. Boyd said the People's League membership was eager to complete the free bridge, under plans satisfactory to the league, and that he had no doubt the additional bond issue would carry by as great a majority as the original bond issue, if the bridge plans were properly modified.

Favors a Popular Vote.

When asked to specify the plans preferred by the league, Dr. Boyd replied that it was a question which should be decided by popular vote. He said the league was on record as favoring the submission of the three approach plans which have been most prominently advocated, a majority of voters to decide which should be constructed. He referred to the Reber, or located approach; the Alton & Mississippi approach, and the northeast or Gerhart approach.

Dr. Boyd said the league would consider an appeal to Congress as a special order of business at its next meeting. Although a motion to appeal to Congress was adopted last Wednesday at a meeting, J. P. McDonough, an official of the Central Trades and Labor Union, offered the motion, following a debate on bridge approaches by Frank H. Gerhart and Philip W. Haberman, who is counsel for the Alton & Mississippi River Belt Railway.

CLAYTON MAN ARRESTED ON SHOOTING CHARGE

Offender Held for Malicious Destruction of Property Answers New Complaint.

John A. Theby was arrested in Clayton Saturday morning charged with felonious assault upon the person and released upon bond of $1500 to appear for trial next Thursday before Justice A. H. Werremeyer. This is the second arrest of Theby on two different charges growing out of the same original complaint made by John W. Eberly, caretaker at Washington Park on the North and South road.

Eberly complains that Theby shot at him three times with a pistol and once with a shotgun. Eberly has also sworn out a warrant against Theby and his son charging malicious destruction of property in cutting down two trees, an elm and a walnut, valued at $50, belonging to Russell E. Richardson.

Eberly, in his complaint, says that on the night of Nov. 11, between 12 and 1, he was awakened by noise of chopping. He went out and found Theby and his son cutting down Richardson's trees and while attempting to drive them away the two men shot him.

Theby has filed an answer to the complaint alleging that some other person fired the shots and denies that he or his son did the shooting.

SON-IN-LAW OF FORMER CONGRESSMAN, BIGAMIST

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 15.—Arthur B. Carter, son-in-law of former Congressman Frank M. Nye, was given an indeterminate sentence with a minimum of five years in the State prison in District Court here, late today, after he had confessed committing bigamy.

According to Carter's story, in February last he was married to Miss Selma L. Bondeson, while his wife, Mr. Nye's daughter, was away on a visit. He was married to Miss Belle Nye in March, 1897. They have three children. Carter told the court he could give no reason for his action.

BIG DOWN-TOWN PARKING GARAGES BEING PROJECTED

W. J. Holbrook Seeks Permit to Erect 12-Story Building for This Purpose at Twelfth and Locust Streets—Sites Sought on Chestnut Street.

10-CENT STORE FOR OLD FAMOUS CORNER

Isaac T. Cook in the East Trying to Close Lease to Company at Annual Rental of $70,000 — Door Opener Firm Is Formed.

Transactions which will give new possession of valuable locations in the business district east of Eighteenth street, betwen Market street and Washington avenue, soon will be announced. The most important will affect Washington avenue and Locust and Chestnut street properties.

Isaac T. Cook is in the East, trying to close negotiations by which the American Five and Ten Cent Store Co. will acquire a 15-year lease of the former quarters of the Famous and Barr Co., at the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Sixth street.

The proposed lease will give the Five and Ten Cent store the right of occupancy of the corner side of the Washington avenue building, five stories, 70x226 feet, and of a six-story building in the rear, having a frontage of 100 feet on Lucas avenue. The annual rental will be $70,000.

The May company, which holds the corner under a 99-year lease, is represented by Samuel Bowman & Co. A. G. Lund of Washington, D. C., represents the prospective lessee.

The premises, embracing 90,350 square feet of flooring, will provide quarters for a mammoth store of this character.

The ten-cent store company has stores in many large cities of the East.

Twelfth Street Garage.

W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., is seeking a permit to erect at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust streets a 12-story garage. The building, the cost of which is estimated at $250,000, will be fireproof and will have a parking capacity of 4000 machines. The site has a frontage of 200 feet on Twelfth street and 155 feet on Locust street. The owner of the site is the Locust Street Investment Co., of which W. K. Bixby is president. Holbrook represents a syndicate, the members of which include N. S. Gotshall of the Bagnell Automobile Co., and H. B. Graham of the Graham Paper Co. A special ordinance will have to be enacted before the building can be erected, the parking of automobiles in the business district east of Twelfth street now being prohibited.

Offers are reported for sites on Chestnut street, between Eighteenth and Twelfth streets, which presumably are desired for large garages. A corner at Twelfth and Chestnut streets is said to be wanted for a site for a building similar to that proposed by Holbrook.

Two buildings of this character in the business district, it is thought, would meet the requirements.

Automobile traffic is now heaviest on Chestnut street, due obviously to the fact that it is a through thoroughfare, without street car tracks.

Attractive Situation.

The realty and building situation east of Twelfth street is becoming more attractive. Many buildings are projected, while others are in prospect.

The Clinton Realty Co. has obtained a permit for the erection of a nine-story fireproof hotel structure, at the northeast corner of Eleventh and Pine streets. The hotel will be known as the Majestic. It will have a frontage on Pine street of 208 feet. The excavating required for the foundation has been completed.

The site recently was sold to Simon Van Raalte for $200,000 through the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., which is behind the project.

This improvement, which will cost $150,000, it is believed, will appreciably strengthen Pine street. A. B. Groves is the architect.

Leases have been signed by which the Pneumatic Devices Co., capitalized at $50,000, will occupy the upper floors of the building being erected by the Y. W. C. A. on Locust street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. Nelson S. Gotshall and Henry B. Graham are the chief stockholders in this company, which has been incorporated to manufacture a device for opening and closing doors.

Locust Street Projects.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. is promoting several transactions for improvements on Locust street.

The Union Dental Co., of which Dr. A. Lemoine is the head, a client of the Mercantile Trust Co., has leased the entire second floor of the new two-story building at 604 Market street. The Thompson Restaurant Co. occupies the first floor of this building, which was erected especially for it. The location is near the new American Hotel Annex, a 14-story steel-ribbed concrete structure, which is being erected by Louis A. Cella at a cost of $500,000.

The apartments at 5913 McPherson avenue were sold by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. to Nathan Frank for $13,000. The deed was executed by Otto L. Busch. This is a modern three-story building of suites of five rooms each. The building, which has a lot 33x130 feet, yields an annual rental of $1740.

The new store and flat building at 308-11 DeBalliviere avenue has been sold by Ralph Coale of Cornet & Zeibig to William P. Marshall for $18,500. Marshall gave in part payment to Thomas O'Laughlin a lot at the northeast corner of Delmar avenue and Beverly place, 57x145 feet. The DeBalliviere avenue property is just north of the handsome building recently erected by the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. at the corner of Berlin avenue.

High Street Sale.

A notable feature was the purchase by John J. Dowling, secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, of the southeast corner of High and Lindell streets, for $17,050. The sale was made by auction at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange under the direction of Gus V. R. Meachin, special commissioner for the Mueller estate. The above mentioned price is subject to an indebtedness of $49,000.

The area of the site is 75x125 feet. The improvements include a two-story building with stores on the corner, returning an annual rental of $4800, the revenue of the premises having been greatly increased under the management of Frank B. Ruhr. The purchase included a three-story business and residence building at 917 Franklin avenue and tenement buildings at the southeast corner of Jefferson avenue and Warren street.

ST. LOUIS FOLKS ASTONISH DRUGGIST

We sell many good medicines, but we are told the mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, is the best we ever sold. St. Louis folks astonish us daily by telling how QUICKLY Adler-i-ka relieves sour stomach, gas on the stomach and constipation. Many report that A SINGLE DOSE relieves these troubles almost IMMEDIATELY. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Sixth and Washington.—ADVERTISEMENT.

SITE IS PURCHASED IN NORTH ST. LOUIS FOR BRASS FOUNDRY

Eureka Company Buys Tract 300 Feet Along Terminal Right of Way.

SCREEN FIRM GETS SITE

Million-Dollar Plant to Be Erected and Is Expected to Lead to Other Sales.

The Eureka Brass Co. has purchased a tract of 300 feet along the right of way of the Terminal Railway in North St. Louis. The purchase, which will become the site of a large and modern brass foundry, is situated on the west side of Bulwer avenue and includes the corner of Red Bud and Althone avenues. A large outlay has been allotted for the building and plant, which will surpass any of its kind west of the Mississippi.

The concern specializes in the manufacture of bronze, brass and aluminating castings of all descriptions and railroad car journal bearings and Babbitt metals.

While the amount has not been made public the purchase, it is believed, entailed a large expenditure.

The site has superb terminal facilities and is well adapted to the requirements. It is just north of the Merchants Bridge and east of Broadway and is a locality that is challenging the attention of large manufacturers.

The St. Louis Screen Co. has purchased just north of the aforementioned tract a site for a million-dollar plant.

The sale, was made by J. C. Darst, for the Penrose Investment Co., of which George Strodtmann is president. The Penrose company, it is understood, will realize by the sale a splendid profit.

The transaction is expected to excite other purchasers in this district, whose prices are increasing apace.

Darst has made many big sales in this locality and is regarded as an authority on land therein.

LUCILLE APARTMENTS SELL FOR $42,500

A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. Buys 12 Acres on Gravois Road.

A. H. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. reports the sale of a six-family apartment building known as the "Lucille Apartment," located at 5527 Waterman avenue. The building is a new and modern structure, each apartment containing six rooms, with all the modern improvements and conveniences, including sleeping porches.

The apartment was built by J. Dougherty and was owned by Catherine Ryan. Miss Ryan sold it to Charles Koehler for $42,500. Henry Korn represented Koehler and F. G. Quinn, of A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co.'s office, represented Miss Ryan. The A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. will have charge of the apartment building.

A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. also reports the sale of 12 acres of ground located east of Gravois road, between Neosho street and Itaska avenue, from Charles Koehler to the A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. The company will immediately subdivide the land into building lots. Price paid was $22,500.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 781 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

DEED RECONVEYS HOME TO ORIGINAL OWNERS

Snarl in Transfer of Windermere Place Year Ago Is Straightened Out.

Charles Z. Trembley yesterday deeded to Charles B. Truitt the latter's former residence at 2 Windermere place. The transfer was made on Trembley's initiative and without profit to him. The only requirement was the execution by Truitt of two second deeds of trust, one for $4000 and one for $2500 in Trembley's favor, in addition to the payment of about $2750 to pay back interest and taxes against the property. The first deed of trust is for $20,000.

Truitt, it is stated, disposed of the house to Trembley a year ago for a financial consideration. Later Truitt, it is said, held that this was for a loan and demanded the return of the property. Trembley declares that he bought the property at the instance of Mrs. Miller, who was then a member of his firm, and who was a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Truitt.

BELL TELEPHONE CO. BUYS SITE IN WEBSTER

General Manager Hiss Immediately Will Begin Erection of Modern Building.

The Mercantile Trust Co. has sold to the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone Co. the corner of Lockwood and Elm avenues, in Webster Groves, for the account of C. L. Merrill. This property fronts 95 feet on the north line of Lockwood avenue by a depth of 265 feet on Elm avenue to Moody avenue.

The telephone company has been considering the purchase of a location in the county for several years, and General Manager William J. Hiss selected this location in Webster Groves as being the center of the fast-growing population in St. Louis County. It is the intention of the telephone company immediately to erect a modern building on this lot.

TWO-STORY BUILDING ON DELMAR IS SOLD

Lease on Property Indicates Valuation of $35,000—Price Not Given.

The two-story building in process of construction at 5643-51 Delmar boulevard, has been sold by the Avon Realty Co. to Edward C. Dameron. The price was not announced, but the building has been leased, it is said, at a rental which establishes a valuation of $35,000. Barngrover & Specht effected the transaction.

The first floor will provide quarters for stores, while the second floor will be divided into apartments. The premises will be equipped with a central steam-heating plant.

NEGRO GIRLS' SCHOOL IN A. R. TAYLOR HOME

Oblate Sisters of Providence Purchase 3-Story Brick Residence for New Work.

The Mercantile Trust Co. has sold to the Oblate sisters of Providence of Normandy, Mo., the home of Amos R. Taylor, 3128 Laclede avenue, a three-story brick and stone building containing 16 rooms and three baths.

The sisters expect to use this property as a training school for young negro girls and believe it well adapted for their purposes both as to location and style of building, the large rooms and spacious halls being adaptable to school work.

The sisters will take charge of the property as soon as Taylor is able to surrender the premises.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are healthy, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested food, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like. At 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio. All Druggists.

INEZ MILHOLLAND STILL A LAWYER DESPITE MARRIAGE

Suffrage Bride Does Housework in 10 Minutes, Lets Servants Do Rest.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Miss Inez Milholland, known not only as a beautiful suffragist, but as an active one, gets married and goes to housekeeping in a cozy flat. Does she, as Mrs. Eugene Boissevain, mistress of her husband's home, retire from her law practice and give up her work for the emancipation of woman? Not she.

"Housekeeping?" she said serenely to a reporter. "It doesn't bother me. I don't let it bother me. I get my housekeeping done for the day in 10 minutes."

The young woman at the switchboard in the hall volunteered the information that Mrs. Boissevain was a real business woman, if she was married.

"She leaves home just like any business man in the morning and doesn't come back until half past five of six at night," said the young woman.

Leaves Housekeeping to Another.

The statement about doing her housekeeping in 10 minutes is no figure of speech with the newest suffrage bride.

"In 10 minutes from the time I leave my room," she said firmly, "I am ready to go downtown. I leave things in trim for the housekeeping to be done by someone who is fitted to do it, who knows how to do it. I am most inexpert at housekeeping and go to my law office and earn my living at my own particular job."

"The servant question"— ventured the reporter. But the servant question doesn't bother the newest suffrage bride, either. She has been keeping house several weeks and has had the same cook all the time.

"However," she observed, "I do think co-operative kitchens or something of that sort would be a good thing. Over in Holland, where I spent three months visiting branches of the Boissevain family after my marriage, there are such kitchens in Amsterdam and other towns. The housewife takes her food materials to the kitchen in the morning, and then is free to do what she will. At dinner time the food is ready for her table, nicely cooked. There are co-operative laundries, too. Each neighborhood has its own co-operative kitchen, within easy reach of the various families.

Defends Right to Work.

"There is absolutely no reason why a woman who doesn't like housework and can do something else better should be tied down to her work. I should go crazy if I had to do housework one whole day."

Children, Mrs. Boissevain admitted, complicate matters for the woman who wants to be out in the world.

"Young children need their mother. But the age at which they can be left to others is much less than it formerly was supposed to be. At three, now, children can be at kindergarten, and it is good for them to associate with other children.

"The world has demanded too much of mothers. It has expected the woman to be the cook, nurse, teacher, dressmaker, manager, psychologist and several other things. She couldn't do it, of course, and the whole thing was unfair to the child and unfair to the mother. What man would try to respond to such a demand? They'd strike at once."

Mrs. Boissevain's housekeeping hasn't had the supreme test yet, for her husband isn't here. He will arrive from Holland in two weeks. She is, however, entertaining his brother, who is said to be well satisfied with her coffee.

No Fear of Citizenship Loss.

Mrs. Boissevain doesn't share the fears of the suffragists who think she has lost her citizenship by wedding a foreigner.

"When a woman about to marry a man who is not a citizen of the United States announces her intention to the Government and specifies that she intends to live in this country, she retains her citizenship," she said. "At least, so it has been decided in other cases, and I believe it will be in mine."

BELLEVILLE GIRL SECRET BRIDE FOR 16 MONTHS

Although Mrs. Magdalena Schwalb of Freeburg had entertained Miss Emma Darenbach of Belleville many times in the last 16 months, she did not know the Belleville girl was her daughter-in-law. She learned that only yesterday when the young woman went to visit Mrs. Schwalb and Joseph Schwalb announced the visitor would stay in Freeburg hereafter as his wife. Schwalb produced a certificate issued in Springfield, Ill., July 29, 1912, showing that he and Miss Darenbach had been married at that time.

When they returned from Springfield, the bride went to her parents' home and Schwalb returned to his mother's home and neither told of the wedding until yesterday. The couple will reside in Freeburg.

EAST ST. LOUIS MAN RUN DOWN BY MOTOR TRUCK

Thomas P. Davis Probably Fatally Hurt as He Steps From Street Car.

Thomas P. Davis of 3132 Converse avenue, East St. Louis, was run down by a motor truck at 6:30 last evening, at Twenty-sixth street and Bond avenue, just after he had stepped from a car and before he could reach the curb on the further side of the street. His skull was fractured, and at the Henrietta Hospital, where he was taken, it was said that he would probably die.

Sylvester Barnett of 422 Brady avenue, driver of the truck, was arrested. The truck belongs to the Hagist-Jett Commission Co. Barnett said he was running 15 miles an hour and did not see the man until the lamp struck him, knocking him under the wheels. He did not take the precaution to stop or run slowly as he approached the street car. This precaution would have prevented the accident.

Illinois Sportsmen Organize New Association for Better Laws.

C. L. Heim of Marine, Ill., a former Deputy State Fish Warden, yesterday announced his plans for the organization of a society to be called the Illinois State and Game Protective Association, the purpose of which will be the conservation of wild ducks and bass.

It is intended to enlist hunting and fishing clubs and prominent sportsmen in the membership. Temporary officers are: J. R. McMurdo, an East St. Louis attorney, president; C. L. Heim, secretary; Henry Albrecht and D. B. Beatty East St. Louis representatives. One effort of the organization will be to obtain uniform hunting and fishing laws in all the Mississippi Valley states.

CITIZENS DO NOT APPRECIATE ARMY, SAYS GARRISON

Secretary Tells Banqueters Service Never Was of Such High Tone.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Secretary of War Garrison declared at a dinner given in his honor at the Lotus Club tonight that the people of the United States as a whole did not regard the army in the proper attitude and did not feel toward it as they should. The Secretary made his statement in discussing the effectiveness of the army even in time of peace.

"For one thing," said he, "I think the people fail to discriminate between their absolute hatred of bloodshed and war and the function of the army in respect thereto. For the fireman, physician, engineer and for the clergyman, none of us has words other than of praise and encouragement. And yet, for the soldier, whose very presence is a protection against others attempting to use force and whose efforts in our behalf, when force is used against us, are essential to our defense, the people have either a negligent attitude or very often one of disapproval. I cannot on any reasonable ground account for this.

"If is were true that the officers and men of the army were swaggering bullies seeking to engage in war for war's sake, or undesirable citizens who brought disgrace upon the uniform and the country, there would be reason for this public attitude. But exactly the contrary is the case. The army, both officers and men, never was of higher tone than today, nor as high, in my opinion."

Secretary Garrison cited as convincing proofs of the highly efficient character of the army the numerous instances in which it has been used effectively in time of peace. The relief work at San Francisco, Omaha, during floods in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys and in California forest fires, the administration of executive functions in the Philippines and Cuba, Porto Rico and Santo Domingo and the building of the Panama Canal he pointed out as instances.

ST. LOUIS SOCIETY'S RAGTIME PADEREWSKI

Gene Rodemich, Trained to Be Classical Pianist, Finds Forte Is Playing Rollicking Strains for Tango and Turkey Trot in Exclusive Clubs and Homes—Is Protege of Wooster Lambert, Millionaire Drummer

Was First to Play Turkey-Trot Dance in Six-Eight Time and Maori in Slow Tempo—Reducing Syncopation to a Money-Making Business—His Hesitation Waltz, "September Love," Christened by Miss Ann Drew

WHEREVER St. Louis society assembles, in its clubs or homes, to indulge in the supple postures of the hesitation waltz, the graceful maze of the tango or the bouncing gymnastics of the turkey trot, the dance is not now considered de rigueur without the assistance of Eugene F. Rodemich, better known simply as "Gene," who rejoices in the nickname of "the ragtime Paderewski."

The announcement "Gene will play," is sufficient to set the bluest blood a-tingle and the most aristocratic toes a-tripping. A tango tea, a club hop or a wedding dance without Gene would be as stale, flat and unprofitable as Hamlet with Hamlet left out, in the estimation of many whose names decorate the Social Register.

A boyish stripling of 23 years, with the high forehead, intellectual face and sensitive mouth of a scholarly musician, Rodemich can fling himself into the interpretation of ragtime with a racy abandon, a broad humor and an elan which make him seem the very genius of syncopation.

As he plays it, ragtime has the swashbuckler's rhythm, the melodic "punch," the irrepressible energy, in which these bustling and red-corpuscled United States have found the expression of their national musical spirit.

This is the more remarkable in that Gene had a severe training as a pianist of classical music and owns to having had an ambition to become a "second Paderewski," without the "ragtime" amendment. Even today, when he has turned the present rage for new dances to profitable business advantage, he confesses to casting at times a fleeting glance of regret towards the promised land of Bach and Beethoven.

But he plays ragtime with too much animation and enjoyment not to feel that it has real merits. These he defines as distinctness of melody, vitality, and, above all, dynamics. However, it is as yet "musical body without soul." He cannot endure to hear another play the music in which he himself frolics and revels, and which he makes the rollicking counterpart in tones of the ebullient dances which society just now affects.

Rodemich came by his musical talent through inheritance, his father, Dr. Henry Rodemich of 1734A Chouteau avenue, St. Louis, being a skilled violinist. The boy's gift was recognized by Louis Hammerstein, formerly organist at Temple Israel, who gave him lessons for eight years on the piano and organ, and in counterpoint and harmony. He displayed such promise that his teacher predicted for him a career as a concert pianist.

Young Gene had a gift which musicians consider rare and invaluable—that of absolute pitch. If a tone were struck anywhere on the keyboard he could instantly name its position on the scale. If a chord were sounded, he could name the tones of which it was composed. Stranger yet, if it were a discord that was struck he could dissect it into its jarring components. These feats he accomplished entirely by the ear.

He became devoted to classics like Beethoven's sonatas and Chopin's compositions, and especially to grand opera. Some years ago he accomplished the exploit of playing without a rehearsal the piano part of an orchestrated version of "The Secret of Suzanne," before the Chicago Athletic Club. His "hero as musician" was Fritz Kreisler, most temperamental and emotional of violinists.

But long before he ceased his lessons, Gene made the discovery that he was a musical "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," as he would phrase it. While he was borne aloft as in a fiery chariot upon the pinions of Beethoven's genius, he cast a glance upon earth and learned that he, the "second Paderewski" that was to be, had an innate instinct for ragtime.

At first the discovery rather shocked him. But he found that he could play syncopated music as he had heard no one else do. Its drumming tom-tom pulse under his fingers became an onward rush, full of verve and swing. His ragtime did not trample jerkily, but made a steady, headlong charge. The crude, barbaric tunes became less strident, and were decorated and refined with counterpoint melodies which flowed into his mind as he played.

EUGENE P. RODEMICH.

This gift the boy would probably have kept secret, as a sort of musical skeleton in the closet, had it not been for financial circumstances. It was necessary for him to begin earning his own living.

One of his first "jobs" was as pianist on the Governors' boat which accompanied President Taft on his voyage down the Mississippi River to New Orleans, in 1909. The assembled gubernatorial talent may have been high in politics, but it did not lay claim to erudition in music. In fact, the Governors wanted ragtime, and Rodemich felt it his duty to give them what they wanted.

Afterwards he went to Chicago as pianist at the College Inn., where it was found necessary to intersperse his program with ragtime. His engagement there continued nearly two years.

Returning to St. Louis, he became pianist for an orchestra which made a specialty of playing for dances. The vim and dash with which he whirled off dance music attracted individual attention, and he obtained his first personal engagement, he relates, at the home of Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus of 33 Westmoreland place. He had a drummer as assistant.

"You and the drummer make more music than a whole orchestra," he says guests at the dance told him. Then and there Wooster Lambert took the pianist under his protection. Lambert is a young millionaire who holds a card in the Musicians' Union and is considered an impresario of the bass drum. He is also an enthusiastic dancer.

Lambert was not content with oral preaching of the praises of his protege. He had circulars struck off and mailed among his friends, calling attention to Rodemich's talents. Miss Ann Drew, one of the most skillful dancers in the city, also aided in spreading the fame of Gene. The result was a deluge of engagements at the most exclusive clubs and homes.

At first he occasionally sought to interpolate classical selections in his programs, but reproachful questions such as "Who's dead?" discouraged his efforts to "elevate" the dance. On the other hand, he was continually informed by society men and women that when he played ragtime they "just couldn't make their feet behave."

Gradually it was forgotten that Gene had ever had a classical training, and a rumor spread that he was a self-taught musician, with a natural genius for ragtime. It even became possible, on the occasion of a recent fashionable wedding on the South Side, for the hostess to inquire of him, with much dubiousness:

"Can you play anything but ragtime?"

It appeared that she wanted him to play for the dance, but was uncertain whether it would be necessary to get another musician to play during the reception. On that evening Gene astonished a number of his admirers by prefacing his dance program with a series of brilliantly performed selections from grand opera.

He ascribes much of his success to the fact that he never plays a ragtime piece as it is written, and never twice alike. His fertile fancy—he is a good composer—is continually embroidering the theme with new melodies and harmonies, which he might be puzzled to write down after he has finished. So strong is this impulse in him that he employs to assist him whenever possible a violinist who has a faculty for weaving extemporaneous obligatos about the melodies of the dances they play.

Rodemich was the first, he says, to play the turkey trot dance in six-eight instead of the customary two-four time. The effect is one of greatly enhanced vivacity.

"I just monkeyed into it while playing at the Glen Echo Club," is the way he explains the improvement.

He also says he was the first to play the Maori to a slow tempo. He could not have carried this innovation through, he relates, without the assistance of Eddie Limberg and Lewis Dozier, popular members of the young dancing set.

They danced the slow Maori first at a private home, and then at a dance at the Country Club. Other dancers at first protested vigorously against the retarded tempo, but were finally converted by the example of Dozier and Limberg. Since then, according to Rodemich, the modified Maori has spread all over the country.

With unusual acumen, Gene decided about a year ago to systematize his popularity in business form. He took as a partner W. G. Haenschen, a Washington University graduate who wished to make popular music a profession, and opened an office in the Princess Building. There he keeps a card index of engagements and of musicians available for employment whenever he is called upon to furnish an orchestra. He employs none, he says, but members of the Symphony orchestra.

It is customary among society folk, he states, to let their bills for music run two or three months, and it has been the habit of other directors to make their musicians wait also for their pay, the effect being that they became dissatisfied and played lifelessly. He has remedied the situation by making an inflexible rule that all the musicians in his employment are paid on Monday of each week, when he also informs them of the engagements arranged for them during the week.

In the busy season Rodemich usually has at least three engagements a day. At the noon hour he plays regularly in the dining room of a department store. In the afternoon there is frequently a reception, and at night a dance. His average net income, he says, is about $150 a week. A hesitation waltz which he composed, which was dedicated to Miss Drew and named by her "September Love," has had a considerable sale.

Recently he was sent for from Denver to play a dance engagement for the University Club of that city, and he has been invited to Memphis twice to play for dances there. In St. Louis he has played at all the leading clubs and at the homes of most of the hostesses prominent in society.

In the stress of business, he admits, he has no time to practice classical music, except what he contemptuously calls "routine orchestra stuff," in which he would probably include the ubiquitous "Sextette from Lucia." But for no other engagement will he miss hearing Fritz Kreisler play at the Odeon this winter. Gene, the "ragtime Paderewski," sometimes forgets for a moment that he is the genius of the turkey trot and the musical mascot of society's dances.

NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

Eugenics Could Make Over the Human Race in 100 Years

IRVING FISHER Yale Professor of Political Economy, writing in the Good Health Magazine, expresses the belief that "it is easily practical to alter and improve the human race and do it in a very short time." He also says: "In the light of modern eugenics we could make a new human race in 100 years if only persons in positions of power and influence would wake to the paramount importance of what eugenics means."

"Galton," says Prof. Fisher, "when he first proposed eugenics, was under the impression that we inherit from our ancestors in a way which would make possible improvement extremely slow. He put forward as a theory (what we now know to be incorrect) that each child gets half of its nature from its parents, one-quarter from its grandparents, one-eighth from its great-grandparents, one-sixteenth from its great-great-grandparents, and so on indefinitely back, the sum total of those fractions when added up to infinity, just unity or the whole inheritance. The marvelous laws of inheritance are now being fairly well explained and understood. They were discovered first by a priest named Mendel, in the year 1869. But when he gave his discovery to the world, he found the world was blind and deaf, as it often is to new discoveries, and it waited until the beginning of the twentieth century, when DeVries and other scientists rediscovered the Mendelian principle, which today is the foundation stone of the science of heredity and eugenics.

"We can best understand Mendel's laws by taking the case of an Andalusian fowl. We shall consider the two species, pure bred black and pure bred white, and confine ourselves to observing the inheritance of the single characteristic, color. Of course, as long as the black mate only with the black their children will be black and as long as the white mate with the white the children will be white. But if a white mates with a black, the children will not be either black or white, but blue. All will be blue. But the most interesting facts appear in the next generation, when these hybrid blue fowls mate with the black or the white or with each other. The original or the cross between the white and the black is an entirely new color, blue, which may be considered a sort of amalgam of black and white. But a cross between the blue and the black will not be any new color, but will be either black or blue—and the chances are even. That is, in the long run about half of the children of blue and black parents will be blue and half will be black. None of the children will be white. So also crossing the blue with the white will result in half of the children being blue and half white. Still more curious is the result of mating blue with blue. One might imagine that in this case all the children would be blue, but only half will be blue, while a quarter will be black and a quarter white.

"We have spoken of one character or characteristic—color. The same laws apply to other characters. Often different characters are inherited quite independently of one another. Each of us is a basket or bundle of very many qualities, each quality being a little compartment of the basket with two beans in it. There is, as were, a pair of beans for every unit trait, whether that trait relates to color, to musical ability, or to any one of hundreds of other kinds.

"Now, what is the chance that the child draws a white bean from both baskets? Evidently it is one chance in four; for there are four ways equally probable in which you can take these beans, viz.: (1) black from the father basket and black from the mother, (2) white from the father and white from the mother, (3) white from the father and black from the mother, (4) black from the father and white from the mother. So the children could draw both white once in four times, both black once in four, and a white and a black in the other two cases. And that is why from two blue Andalusian fowls, on the average you will have one-quarter of the children black, one-quarter white, and the other two-quarters, blue. Again let us stop to emphasize the fact that the black children of these hybrids are just as pure blooded as their black grandparents, and will mate with other pure-blooded black in exactly the same way as though there had never been any white in their ancestry. The white strain has been left behind, or been 'bred out.'

"The same Mendelian principles undoubtedly apply to the human race, although as yet only a few traits have been carefully studied. Eye color is one of these. Imagine a marriage of a thoroughbred, black-eyed Italian with a thoroughbred, blue-eyed Irish. What will be the result? All the children will be black-eyed, black being dominant over blue; but these black eyes are not the genuine article that the Italian parent possessed. They are a blend, and it is only because the black element dominates over or conceals the blue element that we cannot see on the surface that there is any blue there. But it may come out in the next generation; for, if these half-blooded individuals marry among themselves one-quarter of their children on the average will be blue-eyed. The other three-quarters will be black-eyed, but only one-quarter will be 'really and truly' black-eyed, i. e., black-eyed like the Italian. The remaining half are hybrid black, like the parents. It is only a sort of imitation, so to speak.

"The appearance of blue eyes in the second generation is the long observed but formerly mysterious 'atavism,' or reversion to the grandparent.

"But, you say, what has all this to do with eugenics, and what difference does it make whether eye color or even skin color is one thing or another? It makes very little difference, indeed, but there are certain qualities that are exceedingly important. There are certain qualities which rank as defective. Feeble mindedness is a lack of a very important character. Suppose now that a normal or 'strong minded' person, if we may use that term as distinct from feeble-minded, marries a feeble-minded person. Assuming that the 'strong-minded' person is a 'thoroughbred,' all the children will be apparently normal. None will be feeble-minded. 'Strong-mindedness' is dominant over weak mindedness. Yet all these children that seem to be perfectly normal lack something in their bodies. This deficiency is simply covered up but can crop out in later generations. If two of these hybrids between the weak-minded and the strong-minded marry each other, one-quarter of the children will be feeble-minded, one-quarter thoroughbred strong-minded and the remaining half, though apparently strong-minded, will carry the taint in them just as their parents did. They are half-breeds. On the other hand, if two feeble-minded people marry, all of the children will be feeble-minded. Certainly we can and ought to forbid and prevent such marriages.

"But feeble-mindedness is a recessive quality, so that if the feeble-minded marry only with normal individuals the feeble-mindedness does not blight the next generation, and if the apparently normal children of such marriages take pains to marry only really normal individuals, avoiding not only the feeble-minded but even those like themselves who have feeble-mindedness on one side of their family tree, there will be no feeble mindedness cropping out in future generations. The same observations apply to deaf mutism and some other defects.

"Not all human abnormalities are recessive. Thus Huntington's chorea is dominant, so that every child of the unfortunate victim of this malady will contract it when it reaches the right age. Marriages of such people should, therefore, never be allowed, even with normal individuals."

Oil-Burning Ships 60 Per Cent More Efficient Than Coal-Burners

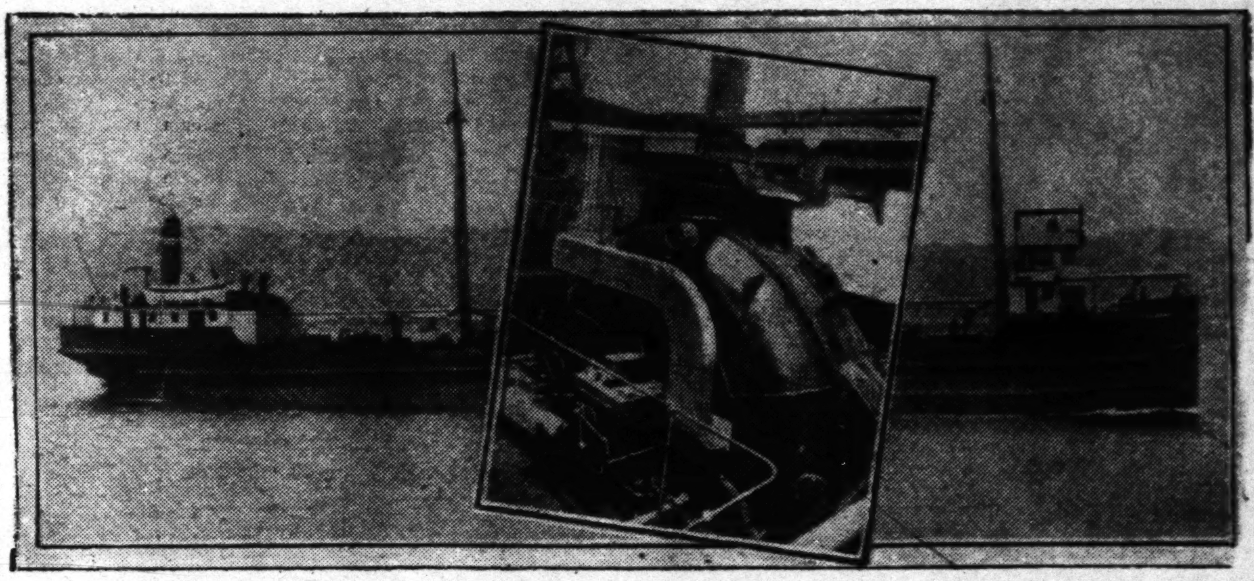
ALL British naval vessels are to be equipped as oil burners, the admiralty having experimented until it is convinced that this fuel is more economical and gives a wider radius to a vessel than coal. It has been ascertained that the burning of one pound of oil will convert 13 pounds of water to steam, whereas a similar weight of coal converts only 8 or 8½ pounds. This means that a given weight of oil will carry a ship more than 50 per cent further than an equal weight of coal; and the liquid has another notable advantage, inasmuch as it occupies only 86 per cent of the space required for coal. Altogether, it is not exaggerating to say that as a means for moving ships oil is at least 60 per cent superior to coal—that is, while ships can carry sufficient coal to take them some 1800 miles at a speed of 22 knots, they would be able to travel 3000 miles if oil instead of coal were burned in their furnaces. This is graphically shown in the map picture above.

First Electrically Propelled Ship Built for the Great Lakes



Propeller Motor of the "Tynemount."

THE fynemount, the first electrically propelled ship to be built, has recently left Newcastle-on-Tyne. It was built for the Marine Electric Propulsion Co. of Montreal, for service on our Great Lakes, is 250 feet long, 42 feet beam, 19 feet deep and carries 2400 tons of cargo. She has two six-cylinder Diesel engines, each developing 300 horsepower, running at 400 revolutions per minute, and to each is direct coupled a three-phase alternator. The power of both these generating sets is led into a three-phase squirrel-cage motor of special construction which is direct coupled to the propeller. The length taken up by the propelling and auxiliary machinery of the "Tynemount" is only 36 feet as against about 46 feet in a vessel of similar type and style fitted with ordinary boilers and steam engines.

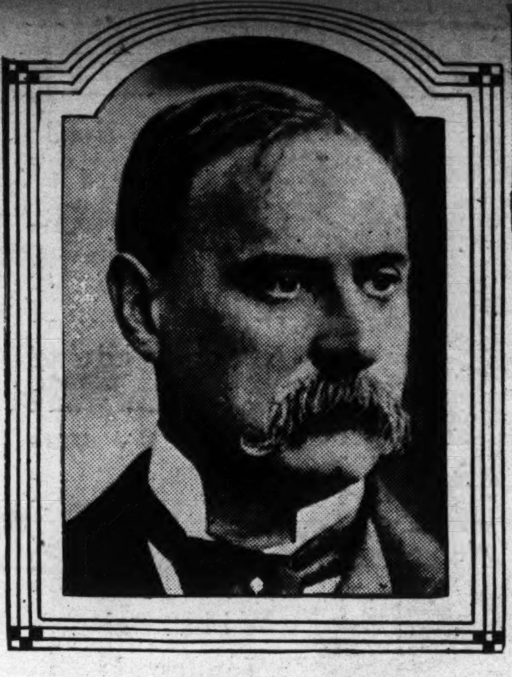
Clothes Are Made of Paper

THE best results yet attained, in various attempts that have been made to produce a wearable cloth from paper are said to be those produced by a patented process employed in Saxony. Narrow strips of paper are spun into yarn, which may be woven to form cloth. Better results are had by spinning paper and cotton together, and still better cloth is made by a combination of paper and woollen yarns. The fabrics do not, of course, possess the strength and durability of ordinary cloth, but useful clothing is made of them at a low price. They may be washed without injury.

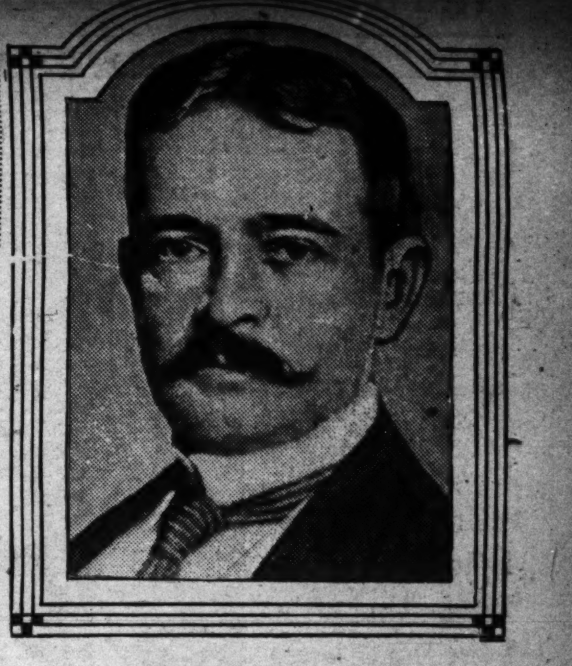
World's Largest Precision Machine

THE testing machine, recently installed by the United States Bureau of Standards, Washington, is considered the largest precision testing machine in the world. This machine is used for testing columns, blocks, beams, girders and other shapes of steel, wood, concrete or materials employed in construction, in order to determine the breaking strength, spring under load and other engineering data. This machine is sufficiently large to test specimens of any length up to 34 feet. It can exert a pull of 1,500,000 pounds, of a compression of 2,200,000, yet is sufficiently delicate that the pressure of a finger upon it will be registered.—Coal Age.

SCIENCE Conquering CANCER



SIR FREDERICK TREVES,
English physician who has cured many cases of cancer by radium treatment.



DR. ROBERT ABBE

Here Is a Summary of World-wide Efforts Toward Eradication of Humanity's Most Baffling Malady—Many Cures Through Use of Radium Rays Reported at International Conference of Noted Medical Men.

CANCERS are being cured today, and without the surgeon's knife. Radium is the "medicine" that transforms the hideous, agonizing sores into sound, healthy flesh.

In the following paragraphs the latest information on the subject is condensed, the facts derived from the most authoritative sources, such as the reports of the cancer hospitals in America and Europe, the addresses delivered by cancer specialists at the recent International Medical Congress in London, and articles in the leading medical journals of the world.

Physicians and surgeons still hesitate to assert that in radium an unfailing cure has been found for cancer, but the greatest specialists have announced within the last few months many seemingly complete cures—cases, for example, in which the evil growth has entirely vanished and has not reappeared after a lapse of several years. Dr. Robert Abbe of New York and Sir Frederick Treves of London, England, have taken the lead in proclaiming this new treatment to the world.

No one claims that all cancers can be cured by radium, but there are many cases in which what certainly looks like a definite cure can be effected.

Cancer is "a class of morbid growths or tumors which occur in man, and also in most or all vertebrate animals." (Encyclopedia Britannica, 11th edition.) The term "malignant disease" is commonly used as its synonym.

Cancerous growths are composed of living cells contained in a more or less dense fibrous framework. They have no well-defined limits, but involve tissues in their vicinity and tend to spread by the lymphatic vessels and veins and to cause similar growths in distant parts of the body. They constantly increase, generally rapidly. Pain, generally intense, usually accompanies them. When cut out too late, they are apt to recur at the same spot or somewhere else.

Until the radium treatment gave real hope, there was no cure for cancer except that the Roentgen rays had been used successfully in a limited number of cases and in other cases when cut out in its earlier stages the cancer did not return.

No germ of cancer in the human body has been discovered, but in some birds afflicted with the malady, notably in chickens, scientists claim to have found a microbe. As to the causes of cancer, the medical world still is in doubt. Constant irritation, it is known, contributes largely to the production of a cancer. Under this head may be mentioned contact of the tongue with a broken and jagged tooth, and the "burning" due to long experimentation with the X-ray. Physicians, it is said, have contracted cancer in this way.

Dr. Robert Abbe of New York has pointed out that the way in which radium cures cancer proves that this is not caused by microbes; for only the gamma rays destroy cancer, and the gamma rays have no effect on microbes. Dr. Abbe says:

"It is a trite saying that there has been no known cure for cancer. Surgery has expended its utmost force in cutting out every vestige of disease, or in destroying by cautery, caustics or freezing. They occasionally cure the patient; they never cure the disease, they only remove it. We must look to forces like organic chemistry or biochemistry or agents like Roentgen rays or radium."

In its first stage cancer is a purely local disease, manifesting itself in the form of a lump. In this stage it can generally be removed by the surgeon's knife.

In its second stage the lymphatics already have become involved. In this stage it often may be cut out, but the operation necessarily is extensive, as all the surrounding tissues for a considerable distance must be removed. The permanence of such cures is always doubtful. The use of X-Rays or radium on the parts after the operation makes the cure more probable. Many such cases that almost certainly would have recurred have been healed entirely by the radium treatment after operation and have not recurred after the lapse of several years.

In the third stage secondary tumors have started in other organs of the body, the infection having been conveyed from the original focus by the lymphatics and veins. Such cases rarely are operable, for they involve the cutting away of too much of the body.

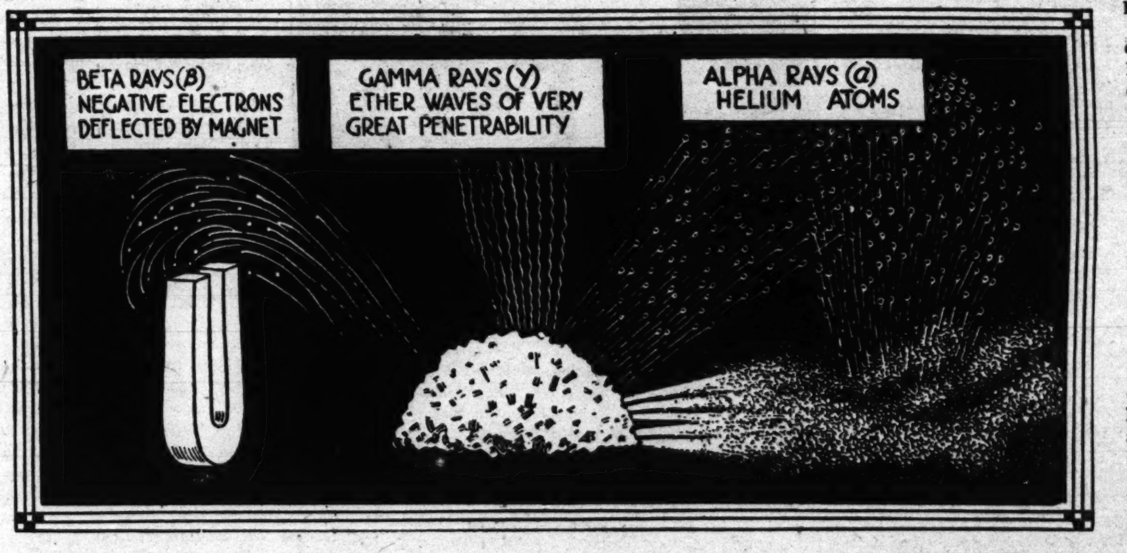
There seems little doubt that inoperable cases of cancer actually are being cured with radium. They are reported by some of the most famous physicians and surgeons in the world, and from those hospitals which have the greatest facilities for and experience in treating cancer.

Radium is an excessively rare but widely distributed element, discovered by the Curies 15 years ago and extracted in minute quantities from a rock called pitchblende. It is called radium because when present, even in almost infinitesimal quantities, it causes the substance in which it exists to glow with a phosphorescent light. When concentrated as in radium chloride, or radium bromide, the forms in which it is generally used, it emits rays that have a powerful effect upon whatsoever they reach.

That radium would destroy human flesh was accidentally discovered, in 1901, by Bacquerel, the famous French chemist, who was severely burnt by a minute quantity of radium which he was carrying in a tube in his pocket.

There are three kinds of rays emitted by radium:

1. The alpha rays, which are believed to be atoms of helium charged with positive electricity. These rays destroy the flesh by burning, but they are stopped by the interposition of a sheet of paper, and their range of action is within half an inch.



BETA RAYS (β) NEGATIVE ELECTRONS DEFLECTED BY MAGNET
GAMMA RAYS (γ) ETHER WAVES OF VERY GREAT PENETRABILITY
ALPHA RAYS (α) HELIUM ATOMS

The three rays, each of different strength and qualities, which emanate from radium.

Method of Radium Treatment of Cancer

THE treatment of cancer by the use of radium appears simple to the layman, but it is not to be administered except by operators possessing a thorough scientific knowledge of the nature of the element.

The process is to inclose a small quanity of radium, or a gas or emanation of radium, in a sealed leaden tube, which is embedded in the cancer and allowed to remain a certain number of hours, circumstances controlling the period. The action of the gamma rays from the radium is such as to overcome the malignancy of the cancer and restore the tissue to health.

2. The beta rays, which are electrons negatively charged. They are deflected by a positive magnet. They penetrate several millimeters of aluminum, glass, etc., but are stopped by lead two millimeters in thickness, and their range of action is about an inch and a half.

3. The gamma rays, which are nonelectrified radiations. These penetrate far more deeply than the alpha or beta rays, 1 per cent of them surviving after traversing seven centimeters of lead, 150 centimeters of water or 20 centimeters of iron. They retard vitality and depress the growth of cells for a considerable distance around them; hence, when the alpha and beta rays are filtered out, the gamma rays destroy malignant growths, as healthy tissues resist far larger doses of them than are needed.

The difference in the penetrating power of the alpha, beta and gamma rays makes it a simple matter to prevent the first two from reaching any particular spot, while the third penetrate to it in full force. If the radium be inclosed in lead one-twelfth of an inch thick, only the gamma rays pass through.

Radium also emits a gas, called its emanation, which again emits alpha, beta and gamma rays. The emanation is, weight for weight, 100,000 times as active as radium itself. It has this advantage over its parent: that after 24 hours the deleterious alpha and beta rays become almost exhausted, while the gamma rays do not lose their effectiveness until between three and four days have passed.

Sir Frederick Treves, M. D., chairman of the Executive Committee of the Radium Institute, London, announced on Oct. 2: "The Scientific Committee of this institute has demonstrated that this emanation has exactly the same properties as pure radium, and is as efficient as pure radium for curative purposes."

This emanation is pumped into hollow metal plates and glass tubes, fixed by liquid air, and shipped to surgeons for use anywhere. Its activity decreases rapidly, falling one-half in three and one-half days.

The Radium Institute has set aside one gramme of radium for producing these emanations, and it is distributing emanations equivalent to an average of 150 milligrammes of radium a day.

The Radium Institute also charges water with the emanations. This is especially good for rheumatism and gout. Patients drink about half a pint of the emanation water daily for six days in each of six weeks. After a rest, the course is repeated, if necessary.

A man, aged 27, admitted Aug. 25, with a large sarcomatous growth blocking up the back of the nose and throat. He could not breathe through his nose, had lost all sense of smell and was deaf in his right ear. A platinum tube containing 82 milligrammes of radium was embedded in the tumor for 12 hours. Five days later the growth had shrunk perceptibly and the sense of smell and ability to breathe through the nose had been regained. On Sept. 16, on examination with a laryngoscope, no traces of the growth could be found, and the patient, who had regained his hearing, was discharged, apparently cured.

A woman, aged 25, with a large sarcoma in the abdomen. An incision was made down to the growth and a platinum tube containing 144 milligrammes of radium was embedded in the tumor and left for 24 hours. Within twelve days the tumor had shrunk to less than half its original size and the woman's weight had risen from 70 pounds 1 ounce to 84 pounds 10 ounces. At present writing she is still in the hospital and steadily improving.

A dispenser at a London hospital was admitted on July 21, with a large epithelioma on the back of his tongue, so far advanced as to be inoperable. Eighty-two milligrammes of radium were embedded in the center of the growth. Three weeks later not a sign of the malignant growth could be detected, and the patient was discharged, apparently cured, except for the presence of two or three secondarily invloved glands about the collar bone, which are to be surgically operated upon later, if necessary.

At the Radium Institute, London, these cures are reported:

A woman with a large periosteal sarcoma (cancer attacking the outer covering of the bone) of the collarbone, who had been told by surgeons that only removal of the whole arm and shoulder could cure her, was received about seven months ago. A tube containing 100 milligrammes of radium was embedded in the tumor for

Not Enough Radium in St. Louis to Treat One Case of Cancer

THE scarcity of radium, and the exceedingly high cost of it which follows as a necessary consequence, militates against the general treatment of cancer by its use. A few physicians in St. Louis are said to possess minute quantities of the substance, but it is estimated that there is not enough radium in the city to treat one case of cancer with the thoroughness observed in the great hospitals of Europe.

THINGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

America Leads in Telephones

A WRITER in the current number of the British Postoffice Electrical Engineers' Journal says the total number of telephones in the world at the beginning of 1912 was 12,218,000. Of this total North America, including Mexico and the West Indies accounted for more than two-thirds, or 8,693,300; the bulk of them (8,357,625) were in the United States, where there was one telephone for every eleven of population. Europe possessed 3,153,000 telephones, one for every 126 of the population. This proportion would be better were it not for the exceedingly backward condition as regards telephony of countries like Bulgaria, Greece and Bosnia-Herzegovina. Denmark headed the list with one telephone for every 24 of her population, and Sweden followed with one in 28. In Norway the proportion was one for 38, in Switzerland one for 41, and in Germany one for 56; and if Great Britain and Ireland compared rather unfavorably with the last-mentioned country with one in 65 she was well ahead of the Netherlands, with one in 195, France with one in 150, Belgium with one in 179, and Austria with one in 298.

In Asia, including India, China and Japan, the number of telephones was estimated at 205,000 which is, of course, infinitesimal compared with the huge population. The number given for Australasia is 142,000, Australia having 101,500, or one for every 44 of the population, and New Zealand over 40,000, or one for 25. Africa accounted for 36,000, about half being in South Africa, and South America for 88,000.

The number of cities possessing upwards of ten thousand telephones is put at 102; of which 69 were in America (64 in the United States). 39 in Europe, two in Asia (Tokyo and Osaka, with 32,557 and 14,630), and two in Australia (Sydney) estimated at 22,000, and Melbourne at 20,500). New York easily took the first place with 441,128, and Chicago, a bad second with 279,383, was closely followed by London with 220,782. Berlin with certain suburbs had 177,854, and the only other cities which had more than 100,000 were Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

A list is also given of the ten best-developed cities from the telephone point of view. Here all the names are American, with the single exception of Stockholm. Los Angeles comes first with one telephone for every 4.1 of her inhabitants, San Francisco second with one for 4.2, and Stockholm third with one for 4.6. Then follow Omaha, Spokane, Salt Lake City, Dallas, Des Moines and Houston, Portland (Ore.) being last with one telephone for every 6.6 inhabitants. Of cities with over a million inhabitants Chicago had one telephone for every 8.1 of her population, Boston one for every 9.9, Philadelphia one for every 10.1. New York one for every 11.3, and Berlin one for every 17.1. London with one for 32.5 was only slightly better than Paris with one for 33.7, and Buenos Aires and Vienna were nearly equal with one for about 38 inhabitants.

Kill the Rats

RATS and mice live in conditions peculiarly favorable to disease says the Manchester Union. They emerge from their ghoulish hiding places and run over human food, leaving their trail of germs which produce disease. If they are taken by the family cat, they revenge their death by leaving the germs on the whiskers of the feline which devours them. She comes into the house, is caressed and kissed by the child on the floor or in the crib, and some time later there is a funeral and flowers are placed on the little grave, when it would have been better to have set traps or poison for the rodents that infected the cat that infected the child. It is now fall. The rats and mice will soon be coming from the fields to the houses and barns. Kill them. The Government never gave better advice, and this without reference to the cost of feeding the "varmints."

Moving Picture Audiences

LONDON, England, is the greatest film-consuming center in Europe, but is still a long way behind the record established by New York. The Paris cinematograph theaters number only about 200, as compared with the 470 in operation in New York. The cinematograph audience on a Sunday night in Paris is estimated at 100,000.

Exercise Will Reduce a Widening Waistband

THE surest way to reduce a large abdomen is with a series of exercises performed lying flat on the back. These will not only reduce the stoutness, but will have a highly beneficial effect upon the digestive organs and will strengthen the muscles of the abdomen as nothing else can.

The exercises are divided into two parts: (1) Those consisting of raising the body, and (2) those consisting of raising the legs. For all of these the shoulders must be held well back. Each exercise should be repeated from 10 to 30 times, at a speed of about 20 movements a minute. Inhale while rising, exhale while lying back.

All these exercises operate by stimulating the muscles of the abdomen, of which there are many, some inside the bony case and some fortifying the walls of this part of the body. The front of the abdomen is formed of a pair of powerful flat muscles, running from the costal cartilages, at the lower part of the chest, to the pubic bone. At each side of these is a set of powerful muscles running obliquely and joining the lower ribs, the spine and the hip bones. Below all of these is a triangular muscle running like a belt, its apex at the hip bone, its base at the middle line of the body, where it is fastened to the side of the straight up and down muscles. In athletes the junctions of these muscles are marked by conspicuous depressions.

Besides these there are the muscles of the small of the back, and, inside the body, a pair of very important ones called the ilio-pseas. The latter extend from the lumbar vertebrae to the thigh bones. It is they that raise the leg and turn it outward.

In the following exercises every one of these muscles is brought into play. Their contraction squeezes the liver, stomach, kidneys, intestines and other internal organs, giving them a massage that has an extraordinarily beneficial effect in stimulating and aiding the action of each and every one of these organs.

The leg-raising exercises should be alternated with the body-raising exercises.

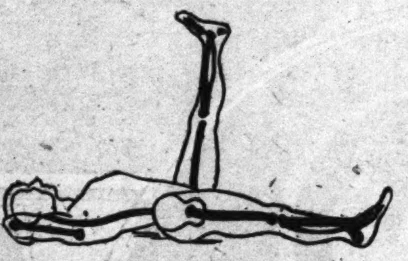

Fig. 1.—Begin by raising both legs together, without bending the knees and without ever passing the perpendicular. Then do the same with each leg alternately. Do it gently, not rapidly.

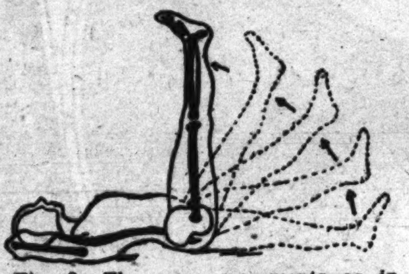

Fig. 2.—The same movements as in foregoing, but performed with sudden jerks.

Gray Hair Restored

"WALNUTTA HAIR STAIN"

Restores gray, streaked or bleached hair or moustache instantaneously. Gives any shade from light brown to black. Does not wash or rub off. Contains no poison and is not sticky or greasy. Sold by all druggists, or we will send you a trial size for 20c postpaid. Large size (eight times as much), 60c. If your druggist don't sell it, send direct to us. Send the yellow wrapper from two bottles purchased from a druggist and we will give you a full-sized bottle for nothing. WALNUTTA CO., 2208G Clark Av., St. Louis, Mo.

Morphine

If you are a sufferer from the drug habit, write us and we will convince you beyond a shadow of a doubt that you can be cured without suffering, inconvenience or loss of time. Absolute secrecy guaranteed. Thousands of successes and unquestionable testimonials. Address CARNEY COMMON SENSE TREATMENT, 567 Lebanon st., Melrose Mass.

INVESTING FOR PROFIT FREE

FOR SIX MONTHS. It is worth $10 a copy to anyone intending to invest any money, however small who has invested money unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit. It demonstrates the real earning power of money, the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses. It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how to make the same profits. It explains how stupendous fortunes are made and why made, how $1,000 grows to $22,000. To introduce my magazine, Investing for Profit, write me now, I'll send it six months absolutely FREE. H. L. BARBER, Pub. R 191 28 W. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO, ILL.

FREE TO THE RUPTURED

STUART'S PLAPAO-PADS are the wonderful new treatment for rupture which has enabled thousands to successfully treat themselves in the privacy of the home, at slight expense. Not made to be used forever, like the truss, but are intended to cure and thus do away with trusses. No straps, buckles or springs attached. Soft as velvet—easy to apply. PLAPAO LABORATORIES, Block 498 St. Louis, Mo., is sending free Trial Plapao to all who apply. Send Postal Card TODAY.

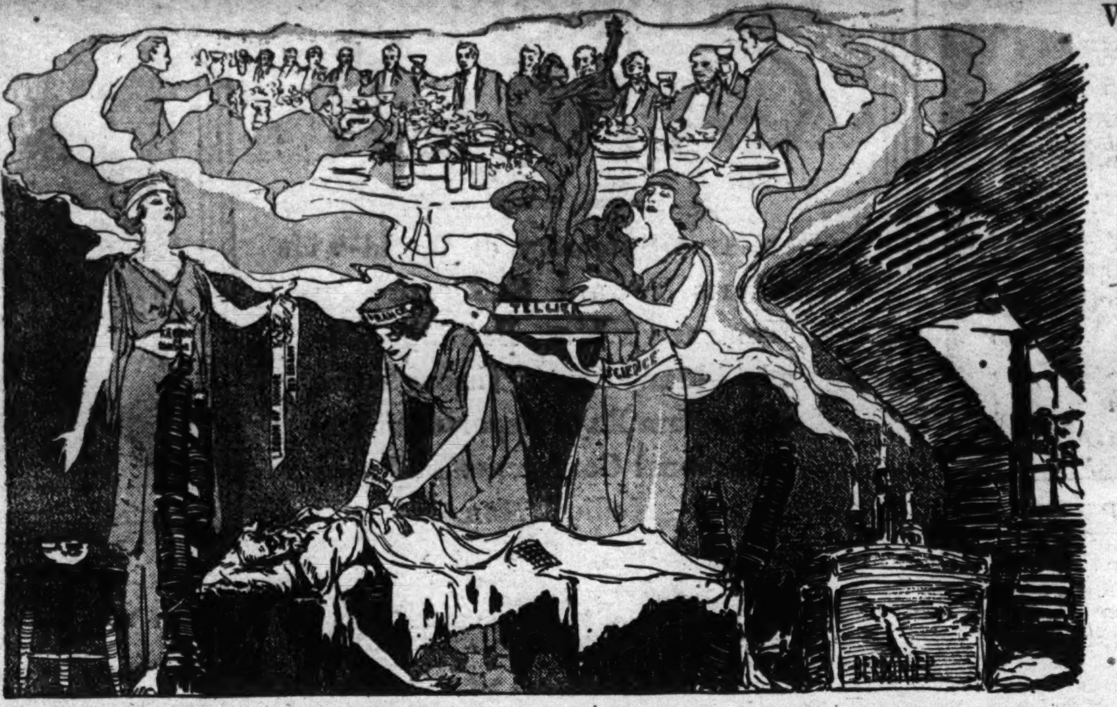
He Multiplied Mankind's Food and Died of Starvation, Penniless and Forsaken in a Garret

Charles Tellier's Invention of Cold Storage Annihilated Zones and Seasons, Made California a Truck Garden for Europe, Created Scores of New Industries and Piled Up Millions for Others.



When He Needed Bread the French Government Gave Him a Red Ribbon of the Legion of Honor, and After He Was Dead Bestowed on Him a Splendid Funeral and Will Raise a Monument to His Memory.

DEATH from starvation is the reward which ironical fate has just paid to Charles Tellier, whose invention of cold storage enormously multiplied the food resources of mankind. Abandoned and forgotten, the great benefactor and hero of science, whose experiments created millions for others, perished the other day in a sordid Paris attic at the age of 86 years.

At the hour of his death epicures in the famous restaurants of the capital of gastronomy were banqueting daintily on delicacies which, thanks to his genius, had been assembled from the four corners of the world. He was without bread; but it was owing to this penniless old man, dying of famine in a garret, that the larders of Paris were bounteously stocked with eggs from Australia, peaches from the Cape of Good Hope, strawberries from California, salmon from Alaska and meats from Argentina, New Zealand and Nebraska—all as fresh as on the day they left their native lands.

And after Tellier was dead, the French Government, whose imports his invention brought up to $2,000,000,000 last year, was abruptly stirred to remembrance, and slipped a belated 1000-franc note into the rigid fingers. Then the scientists whose profession he had adorned and the capitalists he had enriched united to give him a spectacular funeral. After the French fashion, a splendid monument is to be erected to his memory. But the prospect of posthumous honors can have done little to soothe the last sufferings of the man who, having helped feed the world, himself died foodless.

Tellier's distressing career is another proof of the fact that, in this proud "Age of Science," mankind too often treats its scientists like dogs. There are other examples. J. H. Fabre, the "Insects' Homer," has just won recognition at the age of 90. Dr. Rudolph Diesel, inventor of the epoch-making oil engine, died a bankrupt and possibly a suicide.

The inventor of commercially practicable refrigeration was born in Amiens, France, the eldest of a family of six. In 1845, at the age of 17, he started working in his father's silk mill at Conde-sur-Noireau. Then came the revolution of 1848, and M. Tellier, who had employed 200 workmen, went into bankruptcy. The family removed to Paris, and there, at the age of 20 years, Charles found himself depended upon for support by his mother and brothers and sisters.

To increase his income, he resorted to invention and made his first experiments with ammonia, which he was afterwards to make a world-wide servant of man. He constructed a boat in which the volatile liquid was used as motive power. But the contrivance did not rescue his family from want or prevent his being flung into prison for debt.

On his release, the potentialities of ammonia still impressed his mind. In 1869 he perfected the method of artificial freezing through the compression of ammonia, which is the chief system of refrigeration employed in the world today.

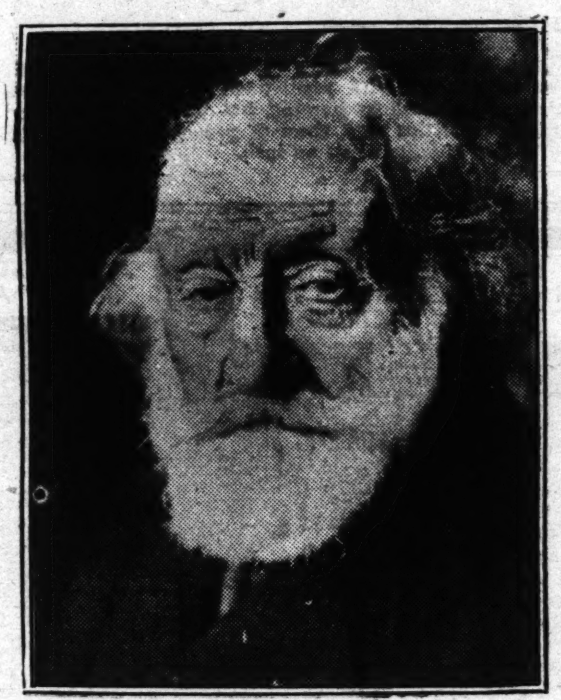
The principles, stated simply, are these: Anhydrous ammonia is condensed by mechanical pressure into liquid form; suddenly relieved of pressure and released into coils of pipes, the fluid instantly dilates into a vapor; this process of expansion, according to a law of physics requires heat; the necessary heat is taken from the pipes and the substance in contact with them which it is desired to cool; and the cycle is completed by again compressing the gas into a liquid.

Other systems of refrigeration had been contrived previously, but had indifferent success commercially. But by his process Tellier was able with ease and at small expense to preserve meats, fruits and vegetables in a temperature which kept them fresh indefinitely.

Armed with a model machine, Tellier presented himself before one of the most famous bankers of France, the Comte de Germiny of the Banque de France. The financier was keen enough to discern the merits of the invention and consented to become Tellier's patron. But fate was preparing another scurvy trick for the scientist. The Franco-Prussian War broke out in 1870, and the Comte de Germiny died of the agonies of that disastrous period for France. His loss was irreparable to Tellier.

Two years later he solicited the patronage of the Academy of Science. The academicians investigated his work, made a favorable report, congratulated him publicly—and then forgot all about him.

Still unbroken in spirit, Tellier devoted four years to forming a company which should show to the world on a sensational scale how his "invention of cold"—which may be compared with the prehistoric discovery of fire—was to revolutionize the supply of food.



CHARLES TELLIER.

An English steamer was purchased and named the "Frigorifique." It was equipped with a Tellier refrigerating plant and stocked with fresh foodstuffs. It sailed from Rouen on Sept. 24, 1876, for South America, the voyage being widely heralded as the first in history in which the attempt was made to carry fresh meats, fruits and vegetables unspoiled across the tropics. After 106 days on the ocean the ship reached La Plata, and its stores of provisions were found to be in as excellent condition as that in which they left Rouen.

The demonstration so impressively proved the value of Tellier's invention that it was appropriated all over the world without so much as by-your-leave to the inventor. Steamship lines hastened to install ammonia refrigeration plants. Cold storage houses sprang up everywhere to conserve for winter's use the products of the summer. Ice, from a rare luxury, grew into a universal necessity. An enormous new commerce was created through refrigerator cars and ships. The London citizen dined on a mutton chop from Australia, in the antipodes, and the Parisian gourmet, while snow fell outside, nibbled at fresh fruits from faraway California.

But what of the man who had made these miracles of transporting foodstuffs possible? Charles Tellier sank into oblivion and want. Others, more practical, seized credit for his invention, obtained patents and made fortunes. There are standard books on refrigeration and articles on the subject in great encyclopedias which do not even mention his name.

It was learned one day that Tellier was in want. The French Government exclaimed: "It can't be possible! But who is this man Tellier, anyway?"

The truth was that the inventor was starving. What he had that could be turned into cash was in pawn at the Mont de Piete. The Government decided to do something handsome for him. So they gave him a fine, red ribbon of the Legion of Honor—which he could not eat and which he could not and would not pawn.

What dreariness and misery afflicted the next few years of the aging scientist had best be left undescribed. Despite the pretty red ribbon of the Legion of Honor, he sank into chronic hunger, although the commerce in food which his genius had invented encircled the globe.

Again the Government was apprised of his plight, and it was decided with delicate tact to give in his honor—of all things!—a sumptuous banquet. This was held on Feb. 15 last. It was a most brilliant affair. Scientists, statesmen and merchants vied in eloquence to laud Tellier as one of the great benefactors of mankind. The silver bedecked tables groaned under luxurious dishes. Many of the viands had been transported by cold storage from distant parts of the world.

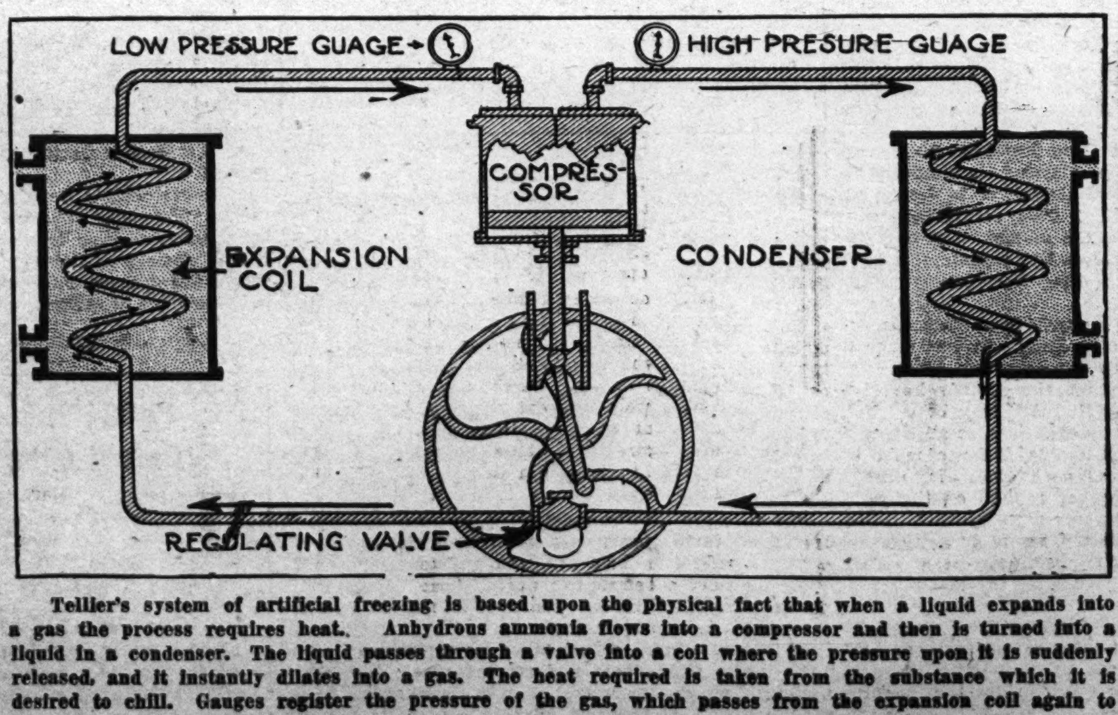
What a tragic spectacle must this mountain of food have been to the guest of honor, who had sometimes been compelled to sustain himself on crusts and scraps! What must have been his thoughts as the well-fed diners about him dallied with the successive courses, sending some away untasted? Before his eyes was enough food to nourish him for a year. Unfortunately, he could eat but one meal at a time.

There are those who say that, following the banquet, the International Cold Storage Association, for which his invention had earned millions, raised $20,000 for Tellier's benefit. The inventor was approached on the subject. Feeling death near, he said he did not want the money for himself, but asked that it be given to his son, an invalid youth. The money never reached Paris. Some say that the fund collected for him was embezzled.

The next thing heard of Tellier was that he was dying, that he was actually starving to death. A few days before the end came, his landlord threatened to put him out of his attic at Auteuil, where he lived with his son, for nonpayment of rent. The concierge, a good woman, drew 100 francs of her hard-earned savings from the bank, paid the rent and bought food and medicine. But it was too late to restore the long-wasted frame.

When Tellier was dead, the Government was all agitation. An official hastened to the son with a 1000-franc note ($193) to save the inventor from burial in potter's field. A splendid state funeral was organized and wonderful eulogies were spoken at the grave by eminent and well-fed orators. A costly monument was enthusiastically projected in memory of the inventor of refrigeration. By such means would the public soothe its conscience for having permitted a great man to starve.

But his monument has already been erected. On the foundation of his invention has arisen a commerce of towering millions. Every icebox in a private home is a memento, every refrigerating car is a souvenir of his genius.



Tellier's system of artificial freezing is based upon the physical fact that when a liquid expands into a gas the process requires heat. Anhydrous ammonia flows into a compressor and then is turned into a liquid in a condenser. The liquid passes through a valve into a coil where the pressure upon it is suddenly released, and it instantly dilates into a gas. The heat required is taken from the substance which it is desired to chill. Gauges register the pressure of the gas, which passes from the expansion coil again to the compressor, once more to be condensed and again to pass through the same cycle of work.

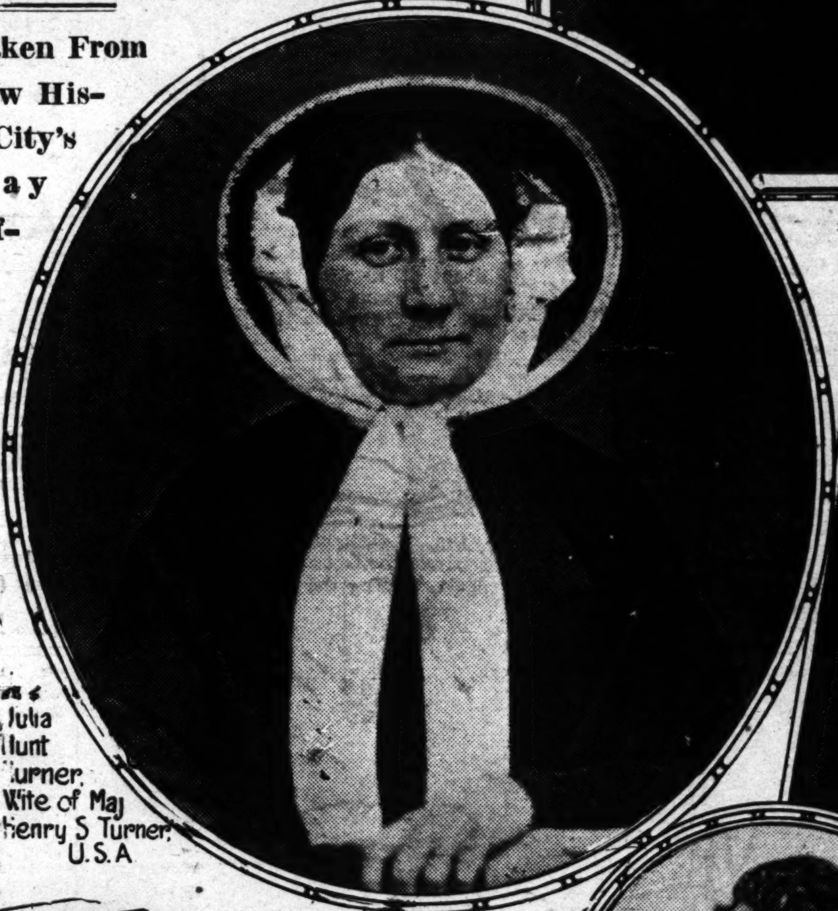
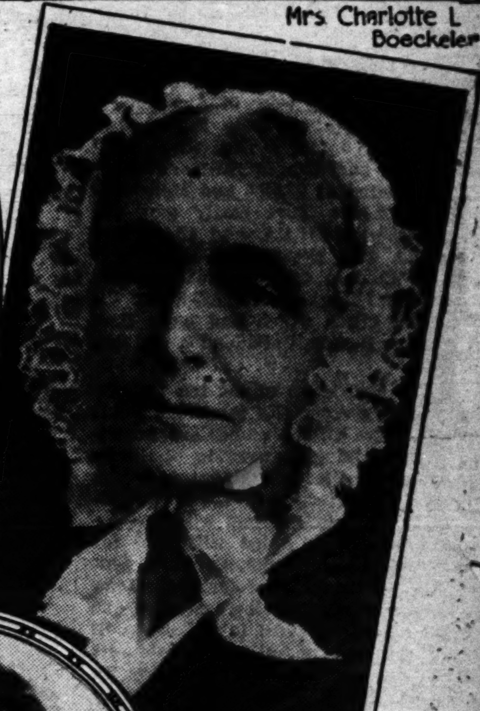
Old Daguerrotypes Taken From Family Records Show Historic Personages in City's Life, and Display Quaint Costumes Affected by Belles and Beaux of Generations Since

THIS page of reproductions of old daguerrotypes will carry the reader back as if by some illusion to the St. Louis of one, two and three generations ago. They are portraits of men, women and children whose families made local history and whose descendants are still names of power in the society of St. Louis and of other cities.

In addition to personal interest in the countenances of those who left a permanent impress upon the city's affairs, there is the general interest of noting the revolution in costume which has occurred during the years.



Mrs. Julia Hunt Turner, Wife of Maj Henry S Turner, U.S.A



Mrs. William M. Chauvenet, grandmother of Wm. M. Chauvenet.

John Lionberger, father of Isaac H. Lionberger

How quaint appear the women with their simple bonnets and ribbands tied under the chin, which were, no doubt, regarded in their day as triumphs of millinery! How simple seem the bands of hair combed down tight over the head when compared with the present-day architectural structures reared by the hair dresser! And how plain and rustic, to our sophisticated eyes, look the gowns in which the belles long since dead probably believed they had reached the acme of the modiste's art!

The most venerable of the portraits is that of Mrs. William M. Chauvenet, who was Miss Marie Carr of Boston. With her appears her distinguished son, William M. Chauvenet, who founded the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and served as Chancellor of Washington University. Her grandson is William M. Chauvenet of present-day St. Louis.

A firm and placid face, beneath its bonnet, is that of Mrs. Julia Hunt Turner, wife of Major Henry S. Turner, U. S. A., and mistress of the historic manor, "Shelter," at Normandy, St. Louis County. Her daughter, Mrs. William H. Lee, today resides on the old estate, which still bears the same name, although the big, rambling log house which four generations ago housed the Hunt family has given way to a modern country mansion.

An interesting family group represents the third generation of the well-known Lucas clan in St. Louis. In the city today are grandchildren of the children shown in the portrait. From left to right they are: James D., Elizabeth, Robert J., William, Jean Baptiste, Charles, Victoria and Nancy Lucas. They were grandchildren of J. B. C. Lucas, founder of the family in St. Louis.

Wm M Chauvenet, Founder of U S. Naval Academy at Annapolis and Chancellor of Washington University

Mrs. William Kennett, mother of Mrs. Hugh McKittrick.

The daguerrotypes of Mrs. Wm. Kennett, mother of Mrs. H. McKittrick, and Mrs. Charlotte Lassen Boeckeler, show bygone styles. Another portrait represents the youthful John Lionberger, father of I. H. Lionberger. The reproductions are from photographs of the original daguerrotypes by J. C. Strauss, St. Louis.

Here's Eugenette, First Eugenic Baby

She's the Daughter of Harold Bolce, American Writer, and His English Wife, Who Before Baby's Birth Visited Art Museums, Attended Selected Theaters and Read Comic Papers With a View to Prenatal Influence Toward Good Cheer and Culture—Metchnikoff and Other Scientists Show Interest in the Experiment.

Mrs. Harold Bolce and her eugenic baby, Eugenette.

HER name is Eugenette, and at the tender age of 7 months she has already an international reputation as a human document in support of the theories of the late Sir Francis Galton, who gave the name of "eugenics" to the practical application of scientific principles to prenatal influences exercised upon human infants.

Eugenette is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bolce, was born in London last spring and is being reared under special conditions of health-culture, mental suggestion, expert observation and newspaper publicity. Her parents—the father an American magazine writer and author of "The New Internationalism," the mother an English woman from Devonshire—are both, as may readily be inferred, ardent eugenists. Believing in cheerfulness and humor as the great panacea for life's ills, they prepared for the transmission and cultivation of their own sanguine and sunny dispositions in the child as yet unborn.

In the weeks and months immediately preceding Eugenette's debut, the mother-to-be was carefully guarded against all possible emotions or influences of fear, worry, inquietude, morbidness or depression. A sense of absolute tranquility and happiness was induced to pervade the home. Everything that made for mirth and joyousness and love of beauty was kept in evidence. Hard-luck stories, funereal society, vexatious problems and discussions, and misery-that-loves-company were strictly barred.

It was, in short, a case of literally living up to the cardinal principle of the theorists, namely: "That under existing human conditions the science of eugenics can only be first practically applied to the prenatal period, when every thought and influence for good in the future physical and mental culture of a child should radiate about the mother and her unborn infant."

The Bolces also traveled about rather extensively, in pursuit of their ideal atmosphere. They visited men of science and men of mirth—the former so that the father could discuss ideas, the latter in order to furnish the mother with some good laughs.

A constant change of scene and a mood ranging from eccentric wit to boisterous merriment seems to have been maintained by these fortune-favored parents almost up to the moment of their baby's birth. Whether parents in humbler circumstances could carry out the idea with anything like such thoroughness is more than doubtful. But, of course, that does not detract from the interest of the first perfect demonstration on record.

Wherever the hearty laugh and harmless jocularity—of the British brand—were on tap, there the progenitors of Baby Bolce made it a point to be present. They visited the music 'alls, where Harry Lauder and Wilkie Bard and George Robey deport themselves on the stage, and take nothing seriously. They bearded H. G. Wells and Jerome K. Jerome in their respective dens, and had some rollicking times discussing eugenics from the more or less facetious viewpoint of these eminent romancers. (Mr. Wells has subsequently disclaimed his particular part in this experiment—probably feeling a bit nervous as to his future responsibility in case little Eugenette should turn out a militant suffragette of the Pankhurst type.)

"Eugenette is a familiar figure in her all-white baby carriage."

They also made a specialty of reading funny books and chuckling over jokes and wheezes and pictures in the comic periodicals. Punch is not specifically mentioned, but there is reason to believe that Mr. and Mrs. Bolce—who hoped that their offspring should be born not knowing what fear or perplexity meant—wouldn't have hesitated to take a chance even on Punch.

The parents also visited art museums in the interest of the unborn's artistic possibilities.

"To furnish the mother with some good laughs."

Dr. C. W. Saleeby, whom the prospective parents consulted, probably in his professional capacity rather than as a humorist, perpetrated a sardonic pleasantry of his own by suggesting that the first girl baby brought into the world under the scientific teachings of Sir Francis Galton might appropriately be christened Eugenette. If the child really develops the keen sense of humor expected, she will probably come to regard this name as anything but a joke.

But Eugenette it is, and from the moment of her birth to the present writing her bonnie babyship seems to be having all the laughs on her side.

The first time they took her out in her snow-white perambulator for an airing on Hampstead Heath she was interviewed by a representative of the London Daily Sketch and made a tremendous hit.

"Eugenette's baby face crinkled into a radiant smile. Her big brown eyes held a gaze all friendly and fearless. Her velvety brown skin testified to the healthy, open-air life she leads."

For, you see, Eugenette spends almost all her waking and most of her sleeping time on merry Hempstead Heath, where "Bolce's baby," as the neighbors and the nursemaids and policemen who frequent the vicinity of Parliament Hill all call her, is a familiar figure in her all-white baby carriage "that is really a Belgian buggy." Eugenette, of course, is not a "bottle baby." Her mother nurses her.

Many prominent persons would be willing to make an affidavit that Eugenette, before she was 6 months old, showed a decided sense of humor, such as many of us never acquire in a lifetime; also an alertness extraordinary in an infant of such tender age, and an absolute fearlessness. Each of these conspicuous traits is attributed to some specific factor of an eugenic nature, exercised previous to the child's birth.

"The parents visited art museums in the interest of the unborn."

Sociologists, scientists and reformers alike are interested in the growth and development of this eerie experimental child. In fact, Eugenette is being reared practically by a board of eugenists, including besides those already mentioned the famous Dr. Elie Metchnikoff, Karl Pearson, the Marquis de Chamberay and others.

The eugenists, however, are not going to have things all their own way, even if this particular Eugenette should prove a permanent triumph. The experiment raises many questions, some protest, and not a little satire and ridicule. It is obvious that comparatively few parents are in circumstances that would enable them to apply the Bolce methods to their babies. On the other hand, certain practical hints are available to all, tending to secure healthful and happy conditions.

One of the most consistent and level-headed arguments opposed to the enthusiastic pronouncements of the eugenists is that Lady Mond, the wife of Sir Alfred Mond, a keen practical student of child nature and child life, must inevitably command a wide hearing on questions in this field, which she has made her own.

"My own humble opinion," Lady Mond declares bluntly, "is that eugenics as talked by the many in these days is most dangerous, and sometimes very indecent."

People forget, she observes, that when a child comes into the world it is inheriting not from two people, but from millions. Brothers and sisters in the same family, and brought up under similar conditions, live out widely differing careers. "Shakspeare was different from his brothers. Benjamin Franklin was one of 17, and Wagner of seven, brothers and sisters. The children of great men are seldom great, nor do great women have remarkable children. We understand very little about it. We can influence the race so little that up to now it is impossible to determine sex. How are we to say whether the being who comes into the world will be an asset or a burden to humanity?"

And yet, Lady Mond is ready to admit, one would do all possible to prevent a child from marrying an unhealthy mate, or one from a family of bad record:

"If children are brought up in happy, contented, honest, upright surroundings, in after life they will have the greater power of discriminating evil from good. If some forebear has handed down a microbe of meanness, lying, etc., the child will stand little chance.

"Nature works on the most extravagant lines, and makes thousands of beings to attain one or two perfect ones. If we could all have a hundred children, we might find a Napoleon, a Shakspeare, a Goethe or a Kelvin in the bunch.

"But who knows?"

Modern Historic Records

THE Modern Historic Records Association, of which W. H. Taft is honorary president and Herbert L. Bridgman president, has undertaken the interesting effort to preserve for posterity records of present-day life and progress by safeguarding original manuscripts on parchment and by reproducing facsimiles in permanent ink on the most indestructible paper obtainable. These reproduced records are circulated among the members of the association and given into guardianship of great libraries, colleges and societies throughout the world. The originals, written on parchment, are filed in the archives of the association. To determine exactly what future generations wish to know about men and women of today is somewhat difficult, and it may prove that posterity will wish that other records than these had been preserved; but if so we shall not be there to see the proof of our failure.

Among these first records thus preserved and reproduced by this association are statements by such leaders in the world's affairs as Mr. Taft, Col. Roosevelt, Admiral Peary, George Bernard Shaw, Andrew Carnegie, Capt. Amundsen, Capt. Rostrom and Maurice Maeterlinck. The value of the effort is to a degree already pathetically proved by the fact that the second of the records is a statement of the needs of Mexico and of his ideals in seeking to obtain them left for us by the murdered president, Madero. Of some contrary value is the statement contributed by the famous scientist, Alfred Russel Wallace, in which he declares "that vaccination is a gigantic delusion" which "will be classed among the greatest errors of an ignorant and prejudiced age."

HOP PILLOWS CURE INSOMNIA.

AN old-fashioned cure for insomnia rarely heard of in these days of sleep-producing drugs, but just as effective as any of them and absolutely harmless, is the hop pillow.

Stuff a small pillow with dried hops, place it upon the ordinary pillow and rest your face upon it in the attitude you find most comfortable.

Woman Novelist's Unique Rules For Matrimony

Commandments for a Married Woman

I. Thou shalt not nag.

II. Thou shalt keep thy temper to thyself.

III. Thou shalt not bore thy husband.

IV. Remember that thou keep unholy his many socks. Six days shalt thou frivol and do all the things thou lovest to do, but on the seventh—think! Remember his linen, to see that it is spotless. Provide thou the extra stud for the emergency that will come, and watch lest the suit that hath been pressed, is not returned to its accustomed nail, as it will be the one he asketh for.

V. Honor thy husband, and let him do exactly as he pleases, that thy praise may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

VI. Thou shalt not ask him any questions, neither in the morning, nor at the noonday hour, nor at night: for whatsoever a man wanteth thee to know, that will he tell thee unsolicited, and a question mark is a hook that catcheth who knows what.

VII. Thou shalt not complain: verily a complaining woman is worse than a shoe that pincheth.

VIII. Thou shalt not steel thy heart against his hobbies.

IX. Thou shalt obey him.—sometimes—uncertainty hath charms when minds are masculine.

X. Thou shalt be fresh and sweet, and dainty as a shower bouquet. For lingerie is more to be desired than rubies, and a good cook above government bonds!

Commandments for a Married Man

I. Thou shalt keep thy past unto thyself. This is the first and great commandment.

II. Thou shalt not scoff

III. Thou shalt be a careful kisser.

IV. Remember that thou keep holy thy marriage vows. Six days shalt thou vaguely dream of might have beens, but on the seventh—wake! Remember thy wife, to sing her praises. Give her freely of thy time and wit, for a dull husband is a discouragement to the gods, and a clever one,—almost human.

V. Honour thy wife, and all her bills, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

VI. Remember thy mother-in-law, to keep her guessing, for a wise mother-in-law loveth a cheerful liar, and a good excuse is better than none.

VII. Thou shalt not steal a march unto thy club

VIII. Thou shalt not toy with danger though verily a live impulse has low voltage domestic boredom beaten to a frazzle.

IX. Thou shalt choose thy brand of tobacco, likewise thy experience, according to thine income.

X. Thou shalt be a man: dependable as thy best investment; thoroughbred as a racer: mellow as old wine, constant as thy club dues: then of a surety, will favor cling to thee, as lichen to an old oak tree.

RENA CARY SHEFFIELD, novelist, author of "The Golden Hollow," has come down from the burning mountain of domestic unhappiness with a table of not only 10 commandments, but 20—10 for the wife and 10 for the husband—which she insures will save others from the family discord which has befallen her.

The "thou shalt nots" for husbands she has engraved in deep, tragic purple lettering, with somber frame of ebony. The mottoes are suitable to hang over the mantelpiece where unregenerate man keeps his horrid pipes and cigarettes. The "thou shalt nots" for women may be lettered in pathetic blue, with a touching pink frame, and may be hung in the boudoir, where fond memories finger of loving naggings and affectionate curtain lectures.

Mrs. Sheffield speaks as an authority, for does not a pilot whose own ship has been driven on a rock know better than anyone else where the fatal cliff lies?

Her commandment seven unto a married man is: "Thou shalt not steal a march unto thy club." She knows the efficacy of this ordainment, for her husband has broken it. He has departed to his clubs, the Harvard and Lambs', in New York, while she remains disconsolate, but with her sense of humor unimpaired, in her studio.

Not long ago Mrs. Sheffied had the thrill of writing "Finis" to her novel, "The Golden Hollow." Her husband is a lawyer. In reading over the proofs he discovered to his own satisfaction as a legal light, that the character of "Mac" in the book is a caricature of himself. So he "stole a march to his club" and served notice on the publishers that if they issued his wife's novel they would be issuing a libel on himself, for which he would hold them legally responsible.

More in sorrow than in anger, Mrs. Sheffield betook herself not to the law but to the pen, and turned herself into a sprightly Moses of matrimony. Wishing to be fair—or may it be a confession?—she first sets forth in negative style the fatal faults which a married woman may commit. Her ten commandments by which women may preserve the state of double blessedness are printed above.

These ordinances seem to Mrs. Sheffield so important in solving the enigma of domestic bliss that she has not shattered her tables of commandments against a rock, but has reserved them by obtaining a copyright. "Go thou and do otherwise!" is her injunction to those who would remind her that, for all her wisdom, her own matrimonial experiment has not been a glaring triumph.

'ROUND THE WORLD HONEYMOON FOR BRIDES OF BASEBALL HEROES

We're going around the world. You're going with us—me. Put on your hat and let's go and get married."

"You must tell them I'm coming and they'll have to wait," replied Miss Benz. She set the wedding a few days forward. When the day arrived their friends understood that the hour was to be 10 a. m. Before 6 o'clock Russell and his bride-to-be were in a taxicab on their way to St. Thomas Church on Wabash avenue, Chicago. A tire got a puncture. The chauffeur couldn't fix it. It was 6 o'clock already, and Father Mallon had promised to wed them at that hour. They jumped out of the taxi, walked the rest of the way to the church, and by 6:30 a. m. were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Russell, off on the round-the-world honeymoon tour.

The other baseball wives who accompany the honeymooners are Mrs. Hans Lobert, Mrs. Louis Comiskey, Mrs. John Moyers, Mrs. Al Demaree and Mrs. Larry Doyle. Mrs. Doyle really is such a newly-wed that she should be included in the really truly honeymooners, though as a matter of fact she and her husband had their honeymoon before the ball season closed.

Science Conquering Cancer

12 hours on two consecutive days. Within a month the growth had disappeared and there has been no sign of recurrence.

A woman, 35 years old, had an inoperable carcinoma of the thyroid gland. Three series of radium treatments between March and June, 1912, destroyed the growth. In September she resumed work as a school teacher.

Dr. Robert Abbe of New York, who has treated 750 individual cases of cancer in private, reports these cures:

Eight cases of papillomata of the vocal cords, one of which had existed 47 years and been removed not less than twice a year, cured with 100 milligrammes of strongest radium. While papillomata are, strictly speaking, not cancer, they are of a similar morbid nature.

Epithelioma of the skin is a potentially malignant ulceration, which, if not extirpated, goes on till it kills the patient. Every surgeon who has treated it with radium has, in the words of Dr. Abbe, "averred its infallible action."

A true malignant cancer at the root of the neck, which had grown so tightly to the carotid artery that only a part of it could be cut away, was treated with radium for eight hours, and the patient has had complete immunity for four years.

In serious cases of cancer of the tongue, esophagus and stomach, the application of radium has reduced the size of the tumor, greatly relieved the pain and in two or three cases of the tongue actually cured, as proved by nonrecurrence for several years.

In rectal cancer there are as yet no cures, but when large quantities of radium filtered through two millimeters of lead are applied for eight to twelve hours daily for days, there is relief from pain and life may be prolonged for several years.

Dr. Abbe reports several cases of uterine cancer in which the growth treated by radium has not returned, though from two to eight years have elapsed since treatment.

Sarcoma of the eyelid disappeared after four hours of radium and has remained cured for nine years.

In 1904 Dr. Abbe treated with radium a case of giant-cell sarcoma of the jawbone. The patient today has a solid jaw, with all the teeth healthy and firmly embedded in normal bone.

Dr. Abbe still has under treatment a man, the upper three inches of whose humerus (upper arm bone) had disintegrated into one large, soft, lemon-shaped tumor. Dr. Abbe embedded in the tumor four tubes containing in all 150 milligrammes of radium, and left them there for three days. During the eight weeks following gritty bone began to form in the tumor and then a bony shell formed. The bony tissue has continued to grow and the malignant growth to shrink.

Another case was that of a man 60 years old with more than a dozen tumors on his bald scalp. They were diagnosed by Prof. Fordyce and Dr. Abbe as hopelessly malignant. These were treated as follows: "One hundred and fifty milligrammes of pure radium bromide were placed in a pasteboard box covered by one and a half inches of loose cotton, thereby to maintain it at an even distance from the scalp. The box was placed over the main group of tumors and held there for an hour and a half. Then it was moved over the other groups in succession, each receiving lateral radiation all the time, while the gamma rays played vertically over the nearest tumors. The total exposure was seven hours, over six places." Twelve days later the man returned with the astonishing statement that the tumors had all gone. Prof. Fordyce and Dr. Abbe found a perfectly normal scalp. Two months later the scalp was still in perfect health.

The total production of radium bromide per year is between two and three grammes. In 1911 the Austrian Radiumpraeparatefabrik put out 14.1 grammes, containing 2.647 grammes of pure radium chloride, valued at $214,900.

Early this year radium bromide was selling in Germany at $105 a milligramme. In July, however, sales were made in Vienna at half that price.

There are probably not more than about twelve grammes, or less than half an ounce, of pure radium in the world. The Radium Institute in London possesses four grammes—about one-sixth of an ounce—presented to it by Lord Iveagh and Sir Ernest Cassell and worth today about $400,000.

The Radium Institute at Pittsburg receives about 100 tons a month of radium ores, from which it is extracting about one gramme of radium bromide, containing about one-fifth of a gramme of radium chloride. This ore comes from Colorado, where what are believed to be the greatest radium deposits in the world have recently been discovered. James Douglas of New York and Dr. Howard A. Kelly of Baltimore have just bought 27 claims of this mining land. They will sell no radium, but all they can get will be used by the National Radium Institute, under the supervision of the United States Bureau of Mines, for the benefit of humanity. Douglas and Kelly are starting clinics for the treatment of cancer by radium in the Memorial Hospital, New York, and in Dr. Kelly's hospital in Baltimore.

The mortality from cancer was 74.3 per 100,000 of population for the five years ending 1911; for the five years ending 1905 it was 67.9 per 100,000.

Doctors are not agreed as to whether this increase is real or only apparent. Some say that it is due to better methods of diagnosis.

NUMBER FIVE

Getting Settled

PA PERKINS has had a run of luck, so he buys a house and, as is usual in such cases, beats his income by a length every month. He is the kind of a man of New England ancestry who salves his conscience by saving string and wrapping paper, and occasionally soaking off a two-cent stamp from an envelope incorrectly addressed. This is what he calls "sterling qualities."

Tom has run in for a moment to see how they are getting on in the settlement of the new house. Mrs. Perkins is doing most of the work, as she has let the poor tired Swedes go to the matinee at the Hippodrome, when they would have much preferred seeing Mrs. Leslie Carter. And Brother Bill is wiring up the pictures—portraits of Past Perfect Perkinses—a creditable representation of a sick halibut by William Chase, and photos of the Forum and Baby Stuart.

He is saying to Dorothy in a brotherly or sarcastic tone: "Say, kid, I suppose you think you look like a magazine cover and all that. It would be a pity to disturb that pose, but as Tom is now properly impressed with your supreme pulchritude don't you think you might help your mother with the curtains!"

Mrs. Perkins, of course, says: "Leave her alone, William." (She doesn't like nicknames). "The poor child is tired!"

Bill returns: "Tired! Tired doing what? Gadding from morning to night. She gives me a swift stitch in the side."

Round the World Honeymoon for Brides of Baseball Heroes

Proud and Fortunate Girls Who Married Tesreau and Thorpe of the Giants and Russell of the White Sox Just Before the Trip Was Begun Will Travel Leisurely in Many Lands :: :: ::

THREE recent brides and five other young wives of baseball players hardly out of their honeymoon period are off on the round-the world tour of the White Sox and Giants. For weeks they have been touring the United States in a special car, and tomorrow they are to sail from Vancouver, B. C., in a ship chartered for the party. Their husbands, of course, are along, with other baseball players and managers and fans and friends, a party of about a hundred.

Before the baseball brides get back to America next March they will have made a honeymoon trip of much more than the circumference of the earth, touching all lands except South America. In the six months' voyage they will disembark and see their husbands play ball in Japan, China, the Philippine Islands, Australia, New Zealand, India, Egypt, Italy, Spain, Portugal, France, England, Ireland, Scotland—well, that's enough for any baseball bride.

The really truly brides in the party are Mrs. Jeff Tesreau, Mrs. Albert ("Tex") Russell and Mrs. James Thorpe. Mrs. Tesreau is a New York girl, Mrs. Russell a Chicagoan and Mrs. Thrope an Oklahoma Indian belle. The story of their courtship is just as romantic as their honeymoon promises to be.

Tesreau's bride was Miss Helen Blake, who lived on the upper West Side in New York, in easy access to the baseball grounds. Last spring the Giants' pitcher was invited to attend a little party up in Harlem.

"You'll meet a pretty girl there," he was told, "and she's just dying to meet you."

Tesreau had heard many times of girls—pretty ones too—who were just dying to meet him, but none of them had died suddenly, he had observed, at sight of him. So in this instance he felt that there would be no fatality on either side—not even temporary heart failure—should he consent to go to the party.

"Well, what's her name?" he inquired, languidly.

"Blake," he was informed.

Tesreau was standing by the piano when he heard a voice pronounce his name.

"Mr. Tesreau," said the voice, "permit me to present Mrs. Williams. She was Miss Mary Blake, you know."

Being a great hero, Tesreau, of course, was king and his subjects had to be presented to him instead of his being presented to them.

"I thought she wasn't married," was Tesreau's mental comment, as he remembered that the pretty girl dying to meet him was named Blake. He saluted Mrs. Williams, nee Blake.

"And this is her sister, Miss Helen Blake," resumed the voice.

Tesreau was pleased to know it. There was a Miss Blake, after all. And she was a pretty girl, too—no doubt as to that. The ballplayer glanced into the prettiest pair of brown eyes he ever had encountered. The owner of the eyes, like the lady in Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women," was divinely tall and most divinely fair. Tesreau rather liked Miss Blake on first sight, but he had no time then to dream of making a home run with her, for the introducer resumed:

"And this is her sister, Miss Josephine Blake."

She was tall and stately and fair, like Miss Helen Blake. Tesreau was delighted, but a trifle bewildered. The air seemed charged with beautiful Blakes. Clearly his friend had told the truth, but only a third or fourth of the truth.

"And this," the voice resumed, "is her sister, Miss Anna Blake."

"Gee! must be a Blake ladies' nine," mentally murmured Tesreau, as he acknowledged a shy, demure petite Miss Blake. But the voice was speaking again:

"And here is her sister, Miss Gertrude Blake." Tesreau looked into the frank eyes of a merry schoolgirl. He was glad she was so young, for a few more Miss Blakes of marriageable age might put him out of the game because of weak heart—weakened by division of devotion. Just then, after the sixth Blake girl had been presented, the words of an old ballad floated in from the adjoining room:

"Oh, I could be happy with either,
Were t'other dear charmer away."

Suddenly Jeff Tesreau found himself alone with the first Miss Blake, Miss Helen. She remarked that he seemed lonesome. Wouldn't he go in and hear her sisters sing and play? Yes, thank you, Miss Blake, he would.

Tesreau began calling at the Blake home, where he met "Muggsie," the French bulldog. Muggsie became a great baseball fan, like his six joint owners, the Blake girls. Tesreau, it is said by his friends, cultivated Muggsie's acquaintance until the dog recognized him as a big baseball hero and would bark joyously when Jeff made a batter fan out.

It required several weeks for Tesreau to make his choice from amongst the multitudinous Blakes, according to those who knew of his frequent calls. His choice was Helen, the statuesque. After the necessary preliminaries they went to the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, where the Rev. Father Martin A. Scanlon made them man and wife and thus gave the former Miss Blake a round-the-world honeymoon.

James Thorpe, the Oklahoma Indian who has been playing with the Giants since he quit Carlisle and football, met the maiden of his choice at a football game. She was Miss Margaret Iva Miller, a student at the Carlisle Indian School, as he was. She was from Oklahoma, too, his home State, and in her veins ran the blood of the aborigines. When she arose in the grand stand to greet him Thorpe's heart thumped. He had but just won a victory on the gridiron. Now before him was another victory to be won.

Thorpe won in the first half, making the supreme goal. Miss Miller stayed at school and Thorpe, who by his athletic triumphs in Olympian games and at other events had come to be known as the world's champion athlete, went into baseball. When the world-circling tour was announced he told his fiancee to make haste about the trousseau.

There was a wedding at St. Patrick's Church in Carlisle, and many of the students were there. The superintendent of the school gave the bride away. Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe hastened to New York for the start of the worldwide honeymoon.

"Tex" Russell's real name is Albert, if you wish to know. Joe Benz, a fellow twirler and teammate of the great White Sox twirler, had a pretty cousin. Her name was Charlotte Benz. Joe Benz liked Tex Russell mightily, so he invited Miss Charlotte to visit Chicago, where he made her acquainted with his brother pitcher. Miss Benz long had desired to know Russell, he being one of her heroes. With a cousin high up in the baseball fraternity a girl is to be expected to become something of a fan.

It was but a few hours after the world tour had been declared that Tex Russell appeared in the presence of Miss Benz and shouted—almost: "You'll have to hurry!

BUNNY'S BEAUTY HINTS

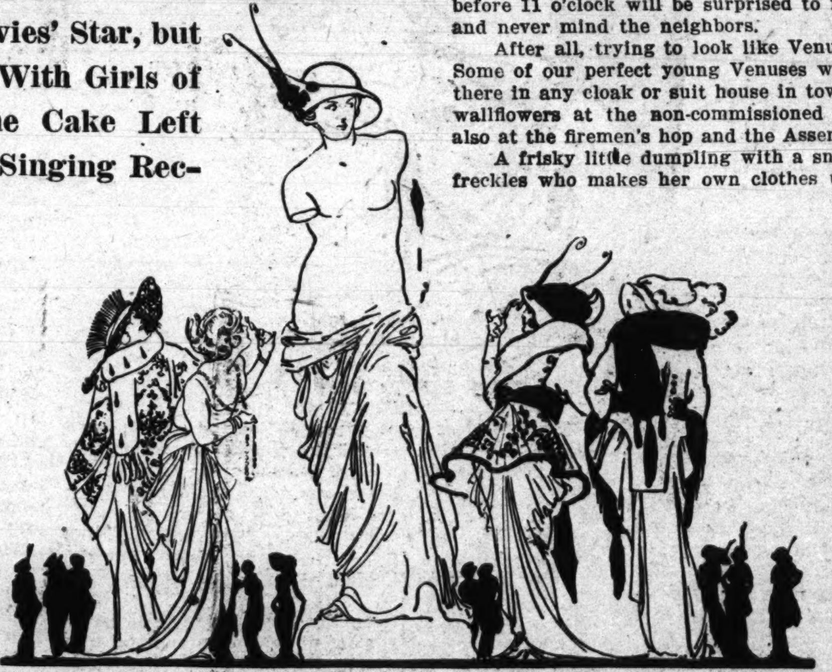
Venus Was a Trim Lass, Says Movies' Star, but She Wouldn't Have a Look-in With Girls of Today—Cake-Walking With the Cake Left Out, Rolling on the Floor and Singing Recommended as Methods for Putting It All Over the Ancient Goddess as a Beauty Model.

By BUNNY.

TAKING girls as one finds them here in St. Louis, East St. Louis, Kirkwood, Alton, Belleville and other important courting centers, not more than two out of five on an average may be called strictly perfect Venuses. Some girls lose out in being a regular Venus by simply an eyelash or a dimple and others by frequently as much as 45 pounds; still they shouldn't be twitted about it.

I have always felt that it is unfair to our girls that Venus should still be accepted as a standard of beauty after all these years. Nobody will deny that she was a trim, graceful lass. Nobody will deny that in her day she was what they called some good looker, or a queen, and that she has a lot of style; but she didn't have to ride a train and hang on the straps or stand for hours behind a counter or shop for hours in front of a counter. Besides, there's nothing in the record to show that she ever peeled a potato or cooked corned beef and cabbage, or worked a center piece for the dining room table, or that she was good at drawn work or drawn butter.



"Venus would have to have a majority of the judges with her to elbow some of our All-America girl entries out of first place."

Her time was occupied almost exclusively in posing and venusing around and looking her best. She probably had her coffee and rolls served in bed and then dressed leisurely for her chariot ride on the Olympian speedway. Everything came easy for Venus.

What if she were alive today? If she entered a beauty contest where points counted for millinery and hosiery, as well as for high neck and low neck gowns and general style, she'd have to have a majority of the judges with her to elbow some of our All-America girl entries out of first place.

The gold medal having been awarded to Miss Venus so very long ago on the grace of her lines and poetry of her curves with no marking at all for her trousseau, there's now no chance for jealousy. That's one good thing.

Now, how may a girl who is a little shy here or there, in one place or another, remold herself to conform to the centuries old standard of feminine perfection? How, for example, may a girl with a fine figure 1 and another with a superb figure 8 put on or take off until they have a Venus score card?

Exercise will help some. Then come dieting, bathing, massage, tennis and the correction of errors in standing, walking, tango dancing and riding in automobiles and on scenic railways.

The girl who is too thin to crochet without a tonic ought to avoid pickles, ices, lemonade, street cars, watermelon, cantaloupe and tobacco in every form, and begin such exercise as will gradually develop a new or increase an old appetite for buckwheat cakes and chocolate sodas.

Starting with light needlework it will not be long before she can use a darning needle without fatigue, and so on until knitting needles will be found none too heavy. As she takes on flesh it is well to change the hooks and eyes wherever needed.

Girls who sigh are apt to be nervous.

The stout miss will find it helpful to abstain from all lean fatty meats, all forms of vegetables, all breads, biscuits and pastries, as well as tea, coffee, chocolate, milk and other drinks. She must hold her appetite in check and the check should not be more than 10 cents. This will tend to prevent the formation of new double chins.

To reduce, there is no better way than rolling on the floor. The piano, all the chairs and tables and the pictures should be moved out of the parlor and the blinds closed and the curtains drawn.

Then, dressed in a bathing suit or a nice fitting union suit, she should roll in, close and lock the door and begin operations. If someone in the adjoining room will play a spirited march or barn dance she can have a music roll. Care should be taken not to bump the wall, the better way being to turn gracefully, following the pattern of the rug or carpet. At the end of half an hour—always at the late end—this exercise should be abandoned for the day.

The next movement in the series is a cake walk. A stout girl should permit herself to get no nearer to cake than this, and, of course, never even think of crullers. The next and final period should be devoted to standing squarely on the feet and bending forward without bending the knees and going through the motions of picking the flowers in the carpet and putting them in a basket which is supposed to be balanced on the head. This exercise should be continued until every flower and every bud has been picked. Then she may place them one by one in a vase set high on the mantel or put them all back in their original places on the carpet. A wine glass of lemon juice may be taken after the completion of the exercises.

Stand for hours behind a counter.

From such reports as have been handed down to us by the ancients regarding Venus' physical culture methods, it is generally believed that she followed the exercises here given, although in place of a bathing suit or a union suit it suited her better to wear 90 yards of batiste cut loose, and occasionally Egyptian earrings.

Deep breathing expands the chest, but sighing doesn't, so I would advise all girls who want to sing to fix a special time for it and do all their sighing at once. Girls who sigh are apt to be nervous and to magnify trifling little trifles, making them appear first a trifle larger and so on until theye're all out of shape.

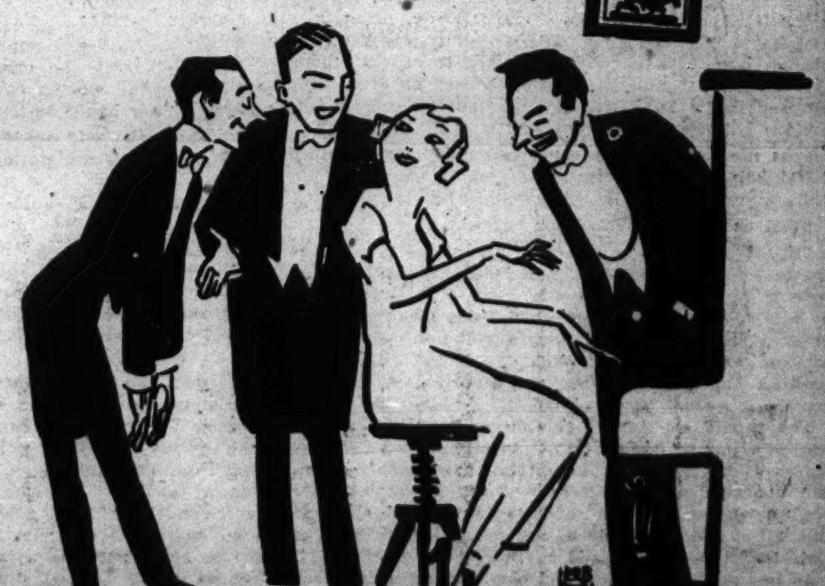
Singing also expands the chest. It strengthens the heart, the alto and soprano, helps the lungs and the music publishers. Any girl who will run through the score of a lively musical comedy in the evening before 11 o'clock will be surprised to find how much cheerier she feels and never mind the neighbors.

After all, trying to look like Venus isn't the big important matter. Some of our perfect young Venuses with measurements that would get there in any cloak or suit house in town, are among the most confirmed wallflowers at the non-commissioned officers' ball in the armory and also at the firemen's hop and the Assembly district skip.

A frisky little dumpling with a snub nose and a nice assortment of freckles who makes her own clothes usually gets more attention from the brokers' clerks at the soiree of the Jolly Eleven than the stately young princess in lavender silk who shakes hands on the upper level and refuses to smile right out loud for fear her beautiful face will slip.

And another thing: the luxurious young orchid in the girl garden who is all the time aware that her papa is one of the most prominent men on Easy street doesn't start in a winner, by any means. She is usually found sitting at the far end of the parlor in earnest conversation with grandmother, and wondering why she doesn't make a three-bag hit. With the girl who had to hurry home from the store and do a little fixing on her gown before she started for the party, it is usually different. You find her seated at the piano with a half circle of the finest young men in town standing near ready to turn the music for her. She isn't much on Chopin or the terribly high-class music, but even if her repertoire ranges no higher than the chopsticks waltz she has the party well in hand.

Nobody will deny that Venus was a trim, graceful lass, but she wouldn't have a look-in with our girls of today.



You find her seated at the piano.

The Lord is my Shepherd * * * He leadeth me beside the still waters.

—Psalms-XXIII: 1-2; Ezekiel XXXIV: 11-15; Matthew XXV: 32; Revelation VII: 17.

RAISING sheep is one of the chief means of getting a living in Palestine. This is true today, just as it was three thousand years ago, when the writer of the twenty-third Psalm found in this common kind of work a beautiful and reassuring reminder of God's care for blundering, ignorant humankind. This flock is feeding in "green pastures" on the plain of Jezreel. Sheep are timid creatures and will not drink from a swift or noisy running stream.

"BREAK O' DAY"

A story of two lovers and a woman

By JUSTUS MILES FORMAN

Copyright, 1913, by the Post-Dispatch.

SOMEONE across the table said something about romance, and Jimmy Rogers ceased to listen to the girl beside him and leaned forward in his chair. His manner was exactly that of a hostess who is trying to collect eyes at the end of dinner.

"Speaking of romance"—— he said loudly. Three or four of his friends looked up at him and grinned, and presently there was a little silence, broken by an old gentleman at the other end of the table, who said:

"Hey? What? Chance? Ah, speaking of chance, reminds me of something that happened to Arthur Benham and me in '61. No, I think it was in '60—the summer of '60. We were in Berlin and"——

Jimmy Rogers sat back in his chair, and the girl beside him gave a little giggle of delight.

"What's the use of trying to talk to this crowd of maniacs?" he demanded morosely. "They won't give you a chance—not a chance. And they're all my friends, too. I'm going to drink myself to death."

But when at last the old gentleman's long story about Arthur Benham and himself in the summer of '60 had come to a dull end, there fell another pause.

"Speaking of romance"—— said Jimmy Rogers in a determined tone, and his host grinned down at him and beat upon the table with his hand.

"Jimmy Rogers," said he, "is bursting with romance—as usual. Please, everybody, listen to him or he'll be cross all the evening. Viens donc, mon brave: qu'est ce que tu va chanter?"

"A long time ago," said Jimmy Rogers, "our little friend Sibyl Carteret—now engaged in making a hideous face at me across the table—mentioned the word romance. It reminded me of a gentleman I met this morning down on that old public pier at the Neck which nobody uses any more except to fish from. This gentleman struck me as having the truly romantic spirit. He was a weather-beaten gentleman with an experienced eye, and he was shabbily dressed. He looked like a rather superior tramp. What called my attention to him was the fact that he was not fishing, like the other tramps on the pier, or sleeping in the sun with a greasy newspaper over his face, but was lying on a pile of bags of something and looking out to sea. I asked him if he was watching for the new big liner, because it was Saturday morning, and I knew she'd be going out. Now here comes the romantic point of view. The shabby gentleman said he wasn't interested in liners. (He called them ferry boats.) He said:

"'I like to watch the tramps—the poor old rusty, ratty tramps. I like to watch 'em go sneaking out without anybody on the pier to wave handkerchiefs at 'em, and without any band to play. I like to wonder where they're going to and what'll happen to 'em before they come back again.'

"He said:

"'Think o' the ports they're bound for! Rio, like as not, or Buenos Aires'— (And he pronounced Buenos Aires right, too.) 'Or maybe round the Horn, or maybe round the Cape or Perth and Melbourne and Sydney; or right out East to Hongkong and Yokohama.

"'And maybe,' he said, 'they'll never get there at all. Maybe they'll break their poor cheap backs before they ever make a landfall. Lots of them do. Oh, yes, it's the tramps I like to watch.'

"I asked him if he'd ever been to sea, and he stared at me and said of course he had. Everybody had. He said he knew all the seas in the world and most of the lands, too, but that there were still some places left, and he was sure they'd be worth going to—like the others."

Mrs. Stanley, the hostess, gave a little laugh of delighted interest and clapped her hands together before her.

"Oh, what a charming person!" she cried. "Jimmy, dear, what a very charming person. If only I might have been with you! Tell us more. I adore that kind of a man, you know." She caught her husband's eye across the table and laughed again, and Stanley grinned back at her. He understood his enthusiastic wife rather better than most men do, and it was a never-ending satisfaction to him that he could be as badly in love with her as he was and at the same time derive so much amusement from her little ways, which were so much franker and more open than the ways of anybody else he knew. Her emotions were unusually near the surface, and it was difficult for her to conceal them. When she was embarrassed she blushed an even, deep crimson; when she was angry she sulked, exactly like a little child, and when she had a pain she wept.

Just now she clapped her small hands and beamed delightedly upon Jimmy Rogers as if she were not quite 6 years old and he were telling her fairy stories.

"Tell us more! More!" she begged.

"More?" said Jimmy Rogers. "Oh, yes, I have saved the best for the last—that is, it would be the best, I'm sure, if one could make it out. I asked this chap what he was doing here, and he said he was looking for the break o' day. Yes, just like that—the break o' day. And he wouldn't explain what he meant. It sounds poetical, but a bit obscure, and if anybody here can explain it I shall be very glad."

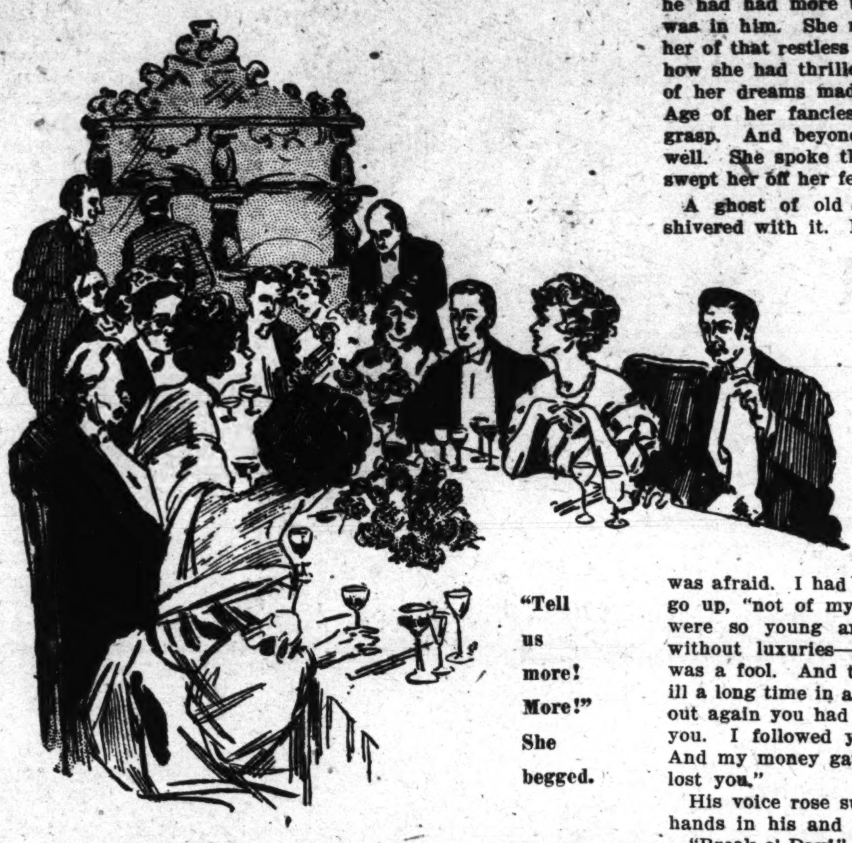
The people about the table began to laugh and to besiege Jimmy Rogers with questions, but Stanley observed that his wife did not laugh with the others. She had suddenly gone very white, and she bent her head down so that her face was in partial shadow; and, after a moment, he saw her lift her champagne glass to drink from it, and her hand was shaking.

As instinctively as he would have sprung to help her in another sort of danger, he came forward now to her aid, attracting the attention of Jimmy Rogers and his other guests by a rapid flow of comment and question.

"And, oh!" said that young man presently, "I almost forgot. This chap asked whose place this was. Said he'd seen the house on the hill. He seemed much interested in you, Tommy, so maybe he's a burglar. You'd best have everything locked up tight."

Stanley stole a quick glance across the table and sat back with a little sigh of relief, for his wife seemed quite herself again, so, after all, he thought, it might have been a moment's pain or faintness.

But late that night he heard her stirring about in her room long after the household was asleep. She seemed to be walking up and down, and once he thought he heard her sob. He was on the point of going in to comfort her, but he held back. He said that if she wanted him she would come to him of her own accord. Toward morning he rose and again listened at the door between the two rooms, but it was still there now, and so he went back to bed quite easy in his mind.



"Tell us more! More!" She begged.

About mid-afternoon of the following day Eleanor Stanley slipped out of the deserted house—for her husband had had to go up to town to see his lawyer people, and her guests were scattered about the countryside, motoring or playing golf—o. the house and down the long hill slope toward the shore. She passed the greenhouse, skirted for a way the high brick wall of the inclosed garden, passed through a narrow space of woodland, where firs and pine stood thinly over the rocky soil, and so came at last to the top of that bank which overhung the strip of beach and the private pier which her husband had had built for the convenience of his motor boats. There was a short flight of steps, down the bank and at their foot a sort of rustic pavilion with two wooden seats. Here not even the gables or chimneys of the house were visible, but the ascending path was in plain sight as far as the wood of firs.

Mrs. Stanley went down the steps to the little pavilion and at the same moment a young man with a brown face and singularly beautiful gray eyes came out of the shrubbery at one side and stood waiting for her. The woman gave a sort of gasping cry and stoppead short at the foot of the last step. So, for what seemed a very long time, the two were still, and there was no sound at all in the place save the regular whispering rush of the quiet sea upon the quiet sand.

It was the young man who spoke at last, and for some obscure reason he spoke in a whisper. He said:

"You got my letter, then?" And Mrs. Stanley nodded slowly, saying:

"Yes, Harry. Yes, I got it. This morning early."

"Break o' Day!" he cried all at once. "Break o' Day!" But the woman came forward a step or two, holding up her hands as if to check him.

"No! no!" she said quickly. She was breathing very fast and her face was quite white. "Please, not that!" she said. "I came here to meet you, Harry, as you begged me to do, because—well, because I owed you that, perhaps. But I have come to ask you to go away and not trouble me. If you have any—regard for me at all, you must see that that is the only thing you can do. I am married and I—love my husbond very much, and I am happy. Please don't disturb me in my happiness. If you are half I have always thought you, you will leave me in peace."

The man was young, but he had lived a great deal in a short time, and he was not altogether a fool. He looked from Mrs. Stanley's white face with its resolute eyes down to her hands, and the hands were trembling uncontrollably. So he knew that he was stronger than she. He came close to where she stood, very close before her, but his instinct warned him and he did not touch her. He looked down into her face, and she could not look away.

"What am I to you, then?" he cried. "And the vows we swore—the life we were to have together? What's all this to you, Break o' Day?"

"Oh!" said she piteously, "it's a memory. It's a sweet memory, Harry, of a few mad days when I was a child and you—came and carried me off my feet, talked to me as nobody else had ever talked, told me about beautiful things I'd only dreamed of. It was a sort of madness and you know it. But it's only a memory now. I'm happy here and at peace. Won't you please leave me so? Please?"

"Only a memory?" he demanded.

"Yes, only that," she said. "Only that."

"It's not true, my lady!" said the brown young man. And all at once she put her hands over her face and began to cry, for she was afraid, and the strange, mad intoxication of this man's presence was almost as fresh and as potent as it had been in those distant days—four years distant now. It was as if the sane intervening years had never been. She was back again on the slow Mediterranean liner, and the odd young man whom her brother had met in the smoke room and had presented to her as a sort of living curiosity was there too, the young man with the keen sunburnt face and the beautiful eyes—so very unlike the other smug, well-kept returning tourists who made up the ship's list. He walked beside her round the deck, and leaned with her over the rail in the evening after dinner; and on that last night before they landed he sat with her for a stolen, never-to-be-forgotten hour up on the hurricane deck hidden from all the world. He had long been a wanderer even at that time. She remembered what he had told her of his stormy boyhood and of how he had had more than once to fight for the life that was in him. She remembered every word he had told her of that restless Odyssey of his, and she remembered how she had thrilled to it. It was the Great Romance of her dreams made living and breathing—the Golden Age of her fancies brought near to hand within her grasp. And beyond doubt the young man had talked well. She spoke the truth when she said that he had swept her off her feet.

A ghost of old agony stirred in her so that she shivered with it. Between the hands that covered her face she cried out upon him:

"Why did you never come to me? Why didn't you come? I sat waiting day after day. And at night I—prayed. * * * But you never came. Why did you wake me to—something I had never known and then leave me so?"

The man seemed, for a moment, to have no answer to that, and she dropped her hands and stared at him. At last he said in a low voice:

"At first—for a little time—I was afraid. I had doubts. Oh"—— as he saw her head go up, "not of myself. Not of myself. Of you. You were so young and you'd never known what going without luxuries—comforts—meant. I had doubts. I was a fool. And then all at once I fell ill, and I was ill a long time in a hospital. * * * When I came out again you had gone abroad. * * * So I lost you. I followed you abroad, but I couldn't find you. And my money gave out and * * * Oh, well, I lost you."

His voice rose suddenly to a cry; and he caught her hands in his and held them against him.

"Break o' Day!" he cried out, "do you think I'm going to lose you again? Do you think I'm going to be twice a fool? I've found you at last. Oh, my dear! I've found you at last, and I shan't let you go again."

She strained weakly away from him, but he held her fast and she was helpless. Once more she began a sort of frightened sobbing:

"Won't you please go away, and let me alone?" she begged. "I'm so happy here! I tell you I love my husband. Truly, I'm quite, quite happy. Please won't you go?"

"Happy!" he cried with a great scorn. "My lady, you don't know what happiness is, you thought you were happy before we first met on that ship? Didn't you? Didn't you? * * * What did you think of that sort of happiness after a week's time? After you knew what true happiness might be? I tell you you're a prisoner here. A prisoner to your own blindness and to a set of conventions that dull people have hedged you in with. * * * Break o' Day! there's all the great free world out yonder, and it's full of sunlight and roses and rest and love—the sort of love you don't even know the outside of. You're a prisoner here. Come away from prison! You belonged to me first. Come with me now. Come out of prison, Break o' Day!"

An instant's desperate strength came to the woman. She wrenched her hands from his grasp and stumbled backward until she was at arm's length. Her eyes stared upon him with a bewildered horror.

"Do you realize what you are saying?" she demanded. "What am I letting you say? Be still, Harry! For my sake, if you have no shame for yourself, be still! I think we've—been a little mad. * * * Memories and the sight of you * * * after so long! Oh, I've been mad, I think. Why, if I could give you the slightest little ghost of an idea of how I love my—of how happy I am and have been for three years, you would never"—— She broke off suddenly, hiding her face in her hands, and for a little while the man stood still before her, watching her under his brows. Once more his long-trained instinct warned him and he did not speak. But when at last she looked up it was to meet his steady eyes that had won her so surely four years back. They were the same eyes now. They held her as they had used to hold her, in a sort of golden spell, and the strength began to go out of her little by little. With the last vestige of it she tore her eyes from his, as, before, she had torn her hands from his hold.

Then she gave a sudden low cry, and caught at the man's arm.

"Look! Look!" she whispered. "My husbahd is coming—down the hill. What shall I do?" She began to tremble very violently. "Oh, what shall I do, Harry?" she cried. "I cannot face him—here—after this. I cannot. What shall I do?"

HUGO'S VALET PROVES A BETTER DETECTIVE THAN HIS BROTHER

"Camilla has fallen in love with me," said Darcy, "that's what I am driving at." All Hugo's despairs were as nothing to the black mood which came upon him come malevolent.

Hugo perceived that he must go down to the vault. No! He dare not go himself. The sight of that vault, after yesterday's emotions, would surely be beyond his power to bear!

"Albert," he said, "go to the safe deposit."

"Yes, sir."

"And inquire if anyone named"—

Hugo stopped.

"Named what, sir?"

"Never mind. I'll go myself. By the way," he said, "I must run over to Belgium tonight. Perhaps I may take you with me."

"Take this telegram," he said, suddenly inspired; and he scribbled out the following:

Darcy, 16, Boulevard des Italiens, Paris.
Please come instantly; urgent case.
Hugo, London.

And then, collecting his powers of self-control, he went slowly down to the safe deposit and entered those steely and dreadful portals.

"Getting on all right?" he said to the manager.

"Oh, yes," Mr. Hugo.

"Any new customers?"

He trembled for the reply.

"Yes, sir. Two gentlemen came as soon as we opened this morning and took Vault 39. They paid a year's rent in advance. Two hundred pounds."

"What did they want a whole vault for?"

"I can't say, sir. There was a lot of going to and fro with parcels and things, sir, and a lot of telephoning in the waiting room. And one of them asked for a glass and some water. They were here a long time, sir."

"When did they go?"

"It was about 10:30, sir, when one of the two gentlemen called me to bring my key to lock up the vault. The vault was properly locked, first with his key, and then with mine, and then he left. Perhaps it might be a quarter to 11, sir."

"But the other gentleman?"

"Oh, he must have slipped off earlier, sir. I didn't see him go."

"What did he look like?"

"Oldish man, Mr. Hugo. Gray."

The manager was somewhat mystified by this cross-examination.

"And the name?"

"The name? Let me see. Callear. Yes, Callear, sir."

"What?"

"C-a-l-l-e-a-r."

"What was the address?"

"Hotel Cecil. He said he would send a permament address in a day or two."

In half an hour Hugo had ascertained that no person named Callear was staying at the Hotel Cecil.

He understood now, understood too clearly, the meaning of Ravengar's strange utterances on the telephone.

CHAPTER XX.

Darcy.

THAT night, when he was just writing out some checks in aid of charities conducted by Lady Brice (nee Kentucky-Webster), Simon entered with a card. The hour was past 11.

Hugo read on the card "Dr. Darcy."

He had nearly forgotten that he had sent for Darcy; in fact, he was no longer quite sure why he had sent for him, since he meant, in any case, to hasten to Belgium at the earliest moment.

"You are exceedingly prompt, doctor," he said, when Darcy came into the dome. "I thank you."

"Not at all," said Darcy; "it is due to an extreme desire on my part to talk to you."

Darcy had become suddenly nervous, and he burst out, interrupting Hugo:

"The suicide of Mr. Ravengar was in this morning's Paris papers. And I may tell you at once that it's in connection with that affair that I'm here."

"And now tell me about her—about her. She is well?"

"She is well—I hope and believe," answered Darcy.

"You don't see her often?"

"On the contrary, I see her every day nearly."

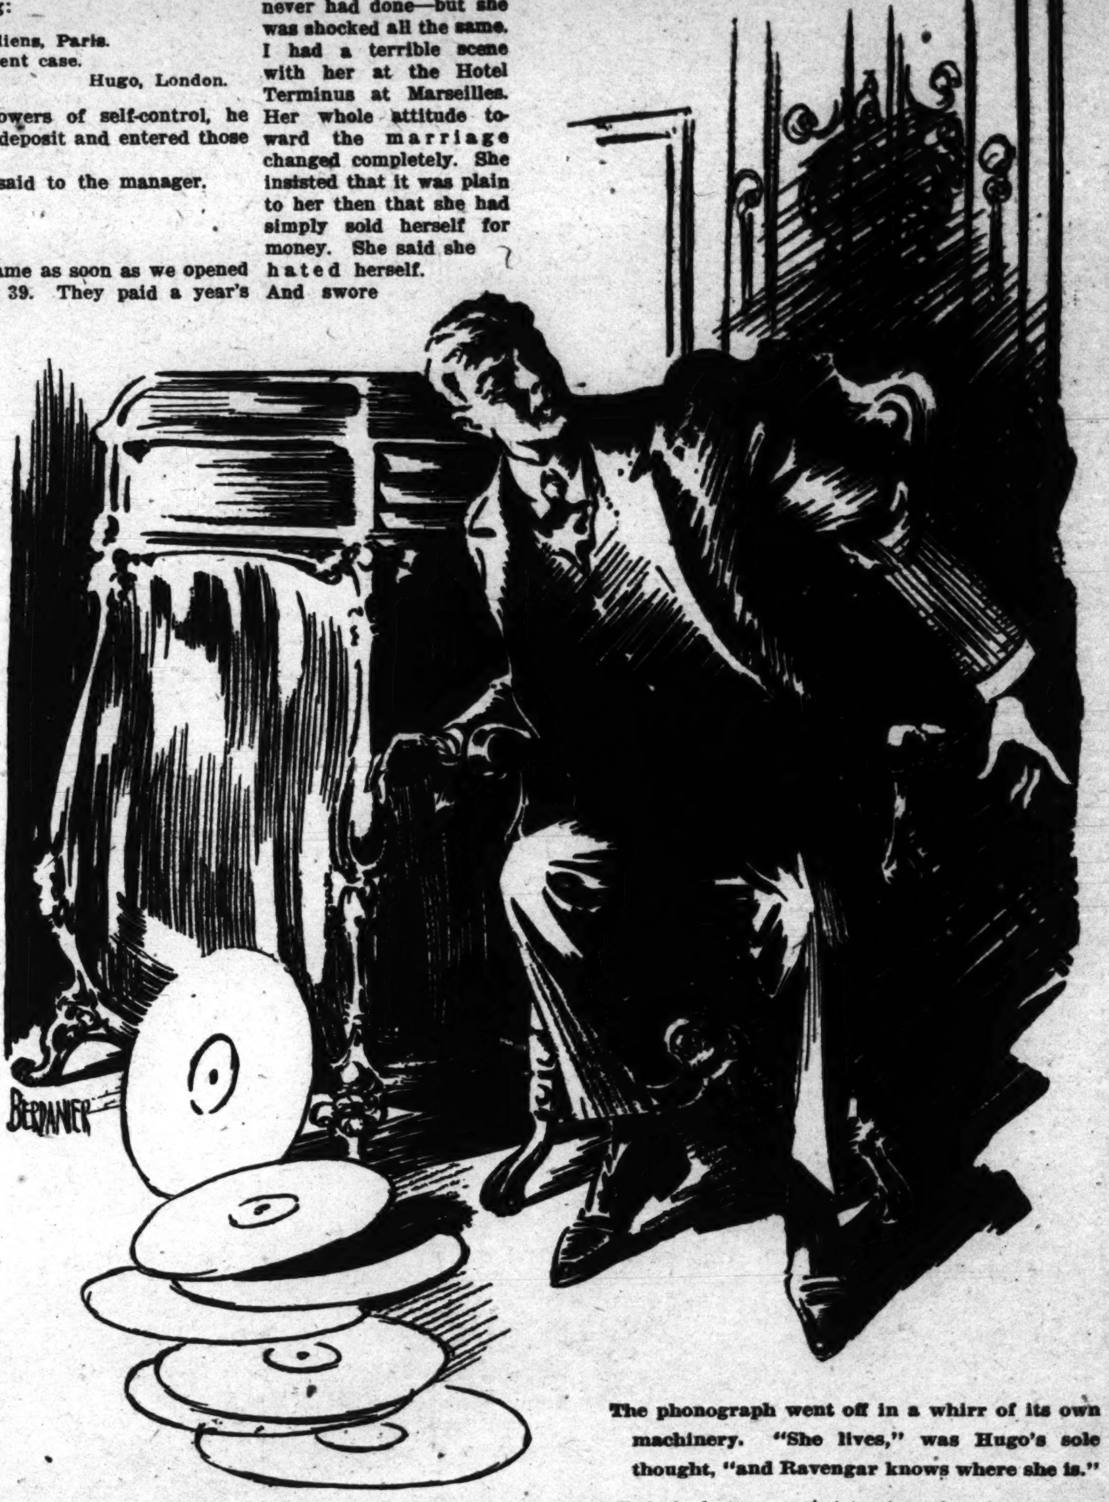
"But if she lives at Burges and you are in Paris"——

Darcy thought for a second.

"So it's you who have been on the track," he murmured. Well, Mr. Hugo, I have had an infinity of trouble with that girl."

Hugo's expression gave pause to the doctor.

"I mean with Mrs. Tudor," he added correctively. "I'll begin at the beginning. After the disappearance—the typhoid disappearance, you know—she went to Algiers. Tudor had taken a villa at Mustapha Superieure, the healthiest suburb of the town. After Tudor's sudden death I telegraphed to her to come back to me in Paris. I couldn't bring myself to wire that Tudor was dead. I only said he was ill. And at first she wouldn't come. She thought it was a ruse of Ravengar's. She thought Ravengar had discovered her hiding place and all sorts of things. However, in the end she came. I met her at Marseilles. You wouldn't believe, Mr. Hugo, how shocked she was by the news of her husband's death. Possibly I didn't break it to her too neatly. She didn't pretend to love him—never had done—but she was shocked all the same. I had a terrible scene with her at the Hotel Terminus at Marseilles. Her whole attitude toward the marriage changed completely. She insisted that it was plain to her then that she had simply sold herself for money. She said she hated herself. And swore she would never touch a cent of Tudor's fortune—not even if the fortune went to the crown in default of legal representatives."



The phonograph went off in a whirr of its own machinery. "She lives," was Hugo's sole thought, "and Ravengar knows where she is."

"Poor creature!" Hugo breathed. "And there is no further obstacle to her coming to England?"

"None whatever. That is to say—except one."

"What do you mean?" Hugo demanded.

Darcy had flushed.

"I'm in a very delicate position," said Darcy. "I've got to explain to you something that a man can't explain without looking an ass. The fact is—of course, you see, Mr. Hugo, I did all I could for her all the time. Not out of any special regard for her, but for Tudor's sake, you understand. She's awfully beautiful, and all that. I've nothing against her. But I believe I told you last year that I had been in love once. That 'once' was enough. I've done with women, Mr. Hugo."

"But how does this affect"—— Hugo began to inquire, rather inimically.

"Can't you see? She doesn't want to leave Paris. I did all I could for her all the time. I've been her friend in adversity, and so on, and so on, and she's—she's"——

"What on earth are you driving at, man?"

"She's fallen in love with me. That's what I'm driving at. And now you know."

"My dear sir," said Hugo earnestly. "If she is in love with you, you must marry her and make her happy."

He did not desire to say this, but some instinct within him compelled him to utter the words.

"You told me that you loved her," Darcy retorted.

"I told you the truth. I do."

A silence ensued. All Hugo's previous discouragements, sadnesses, preoccupations, despairs, were as nothing in comparison with the black mood which came upon him when he learned this simple fact—that Camilla had fallen in love with Darcy.

"She is still in Paris?" he asked, to end the silence.

"I—I don't know. I called at her lodging at noon, and she had gone and left no address."

Hugo jumped up.

"She can't have disappeared again?"

"Oh, no; rest assured. Doubtless a mere change of rooms. When I return I shall certainly find a letter awaiting me."

"Why did you come to me?"

"Well," Darcy said, "you told me you loved her, and I thought—I thought perhaps you'd come over to Paris, and see—see what could be done. That's why I came. The thing's on my mind, you know."

"Just so," Hugo answered, "and I will come."

CHAPTER XXI.

First Triumph of Simon.

A WEEK later, Simon and Albert stood talking together in Simon's room adjoining the dome

Simon had the air of absolute spruceness and freshness which in persons who have stayed at home is so extremely offensive to persons who have just arrived exhausted and unclean from a tiresome journey. It was Albert who, with Hugo, had arrived from the journey.

"Had a good time, Alb?" Simon asked.

"So-so," said Albert cautiously.

"By the way, what did you go to Paris for?"

"The governor wanted me to find that girl of his."

"You mean Mrs. Tudor?"

"Yes."

"It seems to me, Alb," said Simon, "that you aren't shining very brilliantly just now as a detective. And I'm rather surprised, because I've been doing a bit of detective work myself, and it's nothing but just using my eyes."

"What have you been up to?" Albert inquired.

"Oh, nothing. Never mind. It's purely unofficial. You see, I'm not a detective. I'm only a servant that gets left at home. I've found a thing or two that you'd give your eyes to know, my son."

"What?"

"You get along home to your little wife," Simon enjoined him. "You're a professional detective, you are. No doubt when you've recovered from Paris and got into your stride, you'll find out all that I know and a bit over in about two seconds. Off you go!"

And later, when he was giving Hugo the last ministrations for the night, Simon looked at his lord as a cat looks at the mouse it is playing with—humorously, viciously, sarcastically.

"I'll give him a night to lie awake in," said Simon's eyes.

But he only allowed his eyes to make this speech while Hugo's back was turned.

The next morning Hugo's mood was desolating. To speak to him was to play with fire. Obviously, Hugo had heard the clock strike all the hours.

Nevertheless, Simon permitted himself to be blithe, even offensively blithe. And when Hugo had finished with him he ventured to linger.

"You needn't wait," said Hugo, in a voice of sulfuric acid.

"So you didn't find Mrs. Francis Tudor, sir?" responded Simon, with calm and beautiful insolence.

It was insolence because, though few of Hugo's secrets were hid from Simon, the intercourse between master and servant was conducted on the basis of a convention that Simon's ignorance of Hugo's affairs was complete. And if the convention was ignored, as it sometimes was, Hugo alone had the right to begin the ignoring of it.

"What's that you said?" Hugo demanded.

"You didn't find Mrs. Francis Tudor, sir?" Simon blandly repeated.

"Mind your own business, my friend," he said.

"Certainly, sir," said Simon. "But I had intended to add that possibly you had not been searching for Mrs. Tudor in the right city."

Hugo stared at Simon, who retreated to the door.

"What in thunder do you mean?" Hugo asked.

At last Simon felt a tremor.

"I mean, sir, that I think I know where she is. At least, I know where she will be in a couple of hours' time."

"Where?"

"In Department 42—her old department, sir."

(To Be Continued Next Sunday.)

"YOU OFFER WHAT WE ALL DREAM OF AND LONG FOR—ROMANCE!"

"I have life to offer," cried the other man passionately, "I mean life lived close to the good earth, as men were meant to live it, free of conventional things and people" . . . . . .

"There's but one thing to do," said he. "Stay here and face it out! Tell him the truth. Or at least, let me tell him the truth. I'm not going to lose you now. Stay here with me."

Quite suddenly she darted aside to the tall shrubbery which stood thick there, but the man was as quick as she, and caught her before she had gone more than a step or two.

"You'll come back when he's gone?" he demanded, you'll come back to me, Break o' Day? You won't throw me over now—after all?" The woman was almost beside herself with fear. She pulled at the hand he held, nodding her head desperately.

"Yes, oh yes!" she whispered. "Let me go, Harry! Oh, for Heaven's sake, let me go! Yes, I'll come back. I promise. Let me go. Oh, won't you let me go? I promise. I promise anything!" She broke from him and fled into the cover of the pine shrubs, and the man watched her go. She could escape easily, he said to himself, for the thick fringe of shrubs turned a corner of the high bank just a little way beyond and disappeared from sight. What he did not know and what Mrs. Stanley in her panic had forgotten, was that the shrubbery came to an abrupt end just round that corner, and that the terrace upon which it had root ended, too, with a sheer fall of six or eight feet to the rocks and water below. Above, the bank rose high and precipitous. There was no possible way out except the way by which the woman entered. In short, she was in a sort of trap.

Stanley came down the steps and nodded pleasantly to the man who was there. If he cast one swift glance round the place as if looking for something, the other did not see it.

"This is a private pier," he said. "I use it sometimes for my motorboats. It's nearer the house than the other landing in the cove yonder. Of course," he hastened to add, "I don't mean that I object to your being here. A good many people from the Neck walk along our beach, and if they don't steal the pier or scatter egg shells and banana skins about, we don't mind in the least."

His eye wandered in a circle round the place and fell at last, thoughtfully, upon that thick patch of shrubbery. The shadow of a smile came for an instant to his lips and passed.

"Stranger here?" he inquired.

"Yes," said the other man. "In a way—yes."

He, for his part, was thinking very swiftly, and he came to a bold conclusion. The woman was by now, he said to himself, far away and safe. Would she come back to him? He knew that he had no more than shaken her with the recalling of an old spell, no more than stirred her ready emotions with old pictures and old appeals. If he would have her now he must in some way commit her beyond all retreat. And he saw the way before him—a desperate way, if you like, but the man was a gambler in life, as are most of his kind. He drew a little quick breath of decision and came a step forward.

"Some years ago," said he, "I met a woman—a girl—and she loved me. She was going to leave th silly, conventional, marionette-show life she'd always lived and come away with me to—freedom. I knew what real life was, and she was coming to me to learn. Then things came between—illness—circumstances—it doesn't matter what. So I lost her. Well, I've found her again and she hasn't forgotten. She's coming with me now." He paused and drew another quick breath. "It's your wife," he said. "She's going away with me."

Stanley gave a short laugh, which seemed to express pure amusement and nothing else.

"Oh, is she though!" said he. He sat down upon a wooden bench and took one knee between his hands, smiling cheerfully up at the man who stood before him.

"Yes," said the other, "she is. You might as well know it. Of course," he explained, "I could have taken her away in secret without your knowing anything about it. That's the usual thing, I believe. But I don't do things in the dark. Well," he demanded after a moment's pause, "what are you going to do about it?"

"I?" said the man on the bench. "What am I going to do?" His eyes turned imperceptibly toward that nearby patch of stunted pine shrubs, and it seemed to him that something white gleamed among them. He smiled slowly. "Why," said he, "I suppose the conventional thing would be to throw you off the pier yonder and watch you swim ashore—or perhaps to beat you half to death and then have you locked up. But," he said, smiling still, "I'm like you. I don't always do the conventional thing. Let's talk it over a bit. You may sit down if you like. No? Very well, stand up, then! Tell me more about this plan of yours. Why take my—take the lady you mention away? She seems very well here. What have you to offer that I have not?"

"I have life to offer!" cried the other man passionately. "I have to offer something that you have never known—and that she has never known either—except in dreams. I know what it is to live, and you don't know it. Big houses and motorcars and balls and thousand-dollar dresses aren't life. Diamonds and pearls and lapdogs aren't life. This foolish race for amusement isn't life, either, but it's all you and your kind know. I tell you you're starving her here. She's being starved to death for what I can give her."

"You're a bit vague," complained Mr. Stanley, his eyes upon the thick pine shrubbery. "Just what do you mean by this 'life' of yours?"

"I mean," cried the other man, "a life lived close to the good earth—a life warmed by the sun and sweetened by the things that grow—wet with the rain sometimes (for the rain is good), a life lived as men were meant to live it, free over the world—free to come and go without question or tie—free of conventional things and people. That's what real life is. You've never known it, but that's what it is."

Stanley nodded his head, and he was no longer smiling.

"I see," said he. "I see what you mean. You come offering, in place of ties and duties, Romance. The Great Romance."

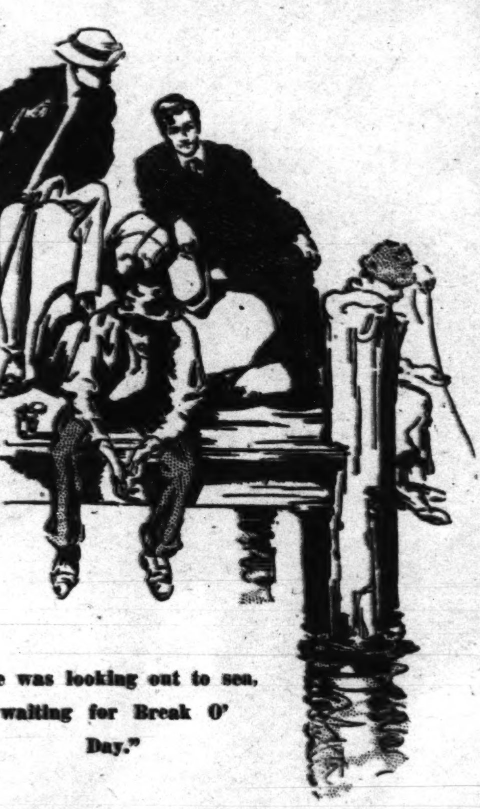
And the other man said: "Yes."

"I understand," said the man on the bench again. "You tempt shrewdly, my friend, because you offer—or think you offer—what we all dream of and, in our varying degrees, long for—Romance. It's the great lure. Oh, yes, you come with a shrewd plea."

He gave another gentle smile, looking up from where he sat, his hands clasped about one up-cocked knee.

"I think I understand it all rather well," he said nodding. "You and my—and this lady you speak of, had some sort of a flirtation—love affair, if you want to give it a big name—long ago. You told her about all this living-next-the-earth and the rest of it, and, having never lived next the earth, she was entranced with the idea. It was just like the novels she had read, the poems she knew by heart. Then circumstances stepped in and the whole thing came to nothing.

"Ah!" said he in a new and tender tone—smiling away across the quiet sea, "Ah, these idyllic love affairs that have come to nothing! They stick in the memory. Gad, how they stick in the memory! And how sweet they are there! The point is, you see, that they have come to nothing. That's why they haunt one so much more than the ones that have come to the logical conclusion, one way or the other. It's the thwarted sweet that's so delicious—not the eaten one.



"He was looking out to sea, waiting for Break O' Day."

"I don't wonder," said he, "that you were able to turn her head a bit when you appeared again after all this time, with the same old lure. Jove, not I!" he laughed.

"You know," he said, "I should hate to have one or two little girls whom I haven't quite forgotten turn up here suddenly and remind me of what was to have happened long ago—what heavens were to have descended upon earth just for two exceedingly foolish and romantic young people. I can't say that even my thick head wouldn't spin just a bit. * * * The Great Romance! * * * The Great Romance!"

He was silent for a little space then, and the younger man stared across at him frowning, for he felt that the situation was in some way being taken out of his hands, and he was anxious and uncomfortable.

But when at length Stanley looked up again his face was stern.

"I have said that I understand this thing on her side," said he. "Your side is different. You come on the stage as a common adventurer and, I don't doubt, with the usual adventurous motive. The lady may be supposed to have a fortune of her own."

"For that," said the other man in a low voice, "it would give me great pleasure to beat you until you couldn't stand—and I think I shall do it." But Mr. Stanley shook a scornful head.

"Oh, this isn't where you climb up on your dignity," said he. "Not at all. You have no dignity. You're just a common, cheap thief, a burglar who has tried to break into my house and steal. You have no dignity to stand on." Abruptly he rose to his feet. He was a big man and looked dangerous. The other would have had a poor chance with him.

"Don't presume," said he, "on the fact that I haven't thrown you off this bank as you deserve! I may do it yet!" He took a turn back and forth across the circular space as if he wanted time to get his rising temper under control.

"I wish she were here now," he said after a little. He spoke to the man before him, but he was turned partly toward the pine shrubbery. "I wish all the foolish women were here who take their happiness in their hands and play with danger because of something they call romance. I should say to them all: 'There is no life of romance. No one ever knowingly lived in this world a life of romance. Romance is a dream, a fancy, a mirage—something we see from a long distance, but never will touch so long as we live. We say that life at this or that stage of history was romantic. It was not. Put yourself in that age and you will find people pointing back a few centuries further and saying that romance is there. We say that romance exists here or there nowadays. Go to such places and it has fled before you. I tell you again, it's a dream, a mirage." He wheeled savagely upon the younger man.

"And you with your life-next-to-the-ground!" he cried. "You make me sick! You never had the slightest intention of trying to take a gentle-born and bred women to such an existence. She couldn't stand it for a week, and you know it. She'd loathe it and you in two days. Why, she couldn't even be clean. She couldn't even be decently clean—to say nothing of going without the most elementary comforts— * * * And you talk rot like that to a woman who has never even dressed herself alone since she was born! You make me sick!" He threw himself down again on his bench, but after a moment he looked up and his tone was milder, less angry.

"Why," said he, "she and I have together come closer to the true romance than you in your squalid restless wandering up and down the earth have ever come or ever will come. We have been happy. Have you?

"Yes," said the other man at length, but there was no ring of truth in his tone, and Stanley said calmly:

"That's a lie. You haven't."

"She and I," he went on, "wander over the world, too, but we go in comfort—luxury, if you like—with or without our friends, as pleases us—not furtively, and in hiding from the respectable world, as she'd have to go with you. We see all the beautiful things the world has to offer, and we see them without the bodily discomfort that robs things of their beauty. We hear beautiful music, and we hear it together, and it brings us closer together still. There are certain operas which mean so much to us that we always go to them alone together, and we sit there in the dark and hold each other's hands and the music makes us one—one where two were before. That's nearer the true romance than you ever reach, my friend.

"Why we—we do everything together. We feel everything together. When somebody says something that's particularly pat, or makes a little joke, she looks up to see if I've got it, and I nod at her, and we laugh like two children.

"Oh, come! I'm getting tired of this. I think you'd better go home now before I get too tired."

"And yet," said the younger man, standing his ground, "yet all this is only the outside of things. It's no more than a simple friendship. And, besides, you're only talking for yourself. You're showing only your own side of the thing. The point is that she doesn't love you. She loves me and she's going away with me."

Stanley leaped to his feet and his eyes blazed very fiercely.

"Why, you blamed adventurer!" he cried. "Do you mean to say you're taking yourself seriously in all this? Do you think I don't know my wife after three years? Do you think I doubt her for one little fraction of a second? Love you! You make me laugh. You're so funny that you're not even insulting."

The younger man seemed for the first time to lose control of himself. He raised his fist and shook it in the air.

"You'll see whether I'm funny or not!" he cried shrilly. "You'll see whether I'm a joke or not! You wait a few hours and see!"

Stanley sprang at him without a word and caught him by the throat with his two hands. He did not strike the man, but he shook him as a terrier shakes a rat. It has been said that he was a big man, and he was as strong as he looked. He shook him until the younger man's arms tossed and flapped helpless at his sides, and his head weakly rolled upon his shoulders.

But there came a cry from behind, and the two stood still. Mr. Stanley turned his head and his wife was there, her hands pressed together over her heart, her face white and full of terror.

"Let him go, Tommy!" she said. "Oh, let him go! It's not all his fault. It's partly mine. "I'll—explain to you. Only let him go first."

"I want to throw him off the pier," said Stanley. "Let me throw him off the pier! Come on and see him swim!" The woman gave a sudden nervous overwrought laugh that was half a sob, but she came and touched his arm and Stanley's hands fell beside him.

"Please!" she said. "For my sake!" Her husband gave a sort of reluctant growl, and the man he had held staggered a few steps away and stood there breathing hard, his clothes all awry about him. He stared under his brows at the other two and his mouth moved and twisted, but no words came.

"I'm sorry," the woman said to him. "It was partly my fault. Yes, a great deal my fault. I seem—I seem to have lost my head. But please go now and don't come back. Everything my husband has said is true—true. Ah, please go!"

The man looked at her for a moment longer and he seemed to be about to speak, but no words came to him. Then he turned away. He stumbled down to the sandy beach and moved off toward the west. And so he disappeared and they saw no more of him.

But when he was gone Mrs. Stanley laid her face upon her husband's breast and began to cry there quite comfortably.

"Oh, Tommy," she said, in a little wail, "I've been such a fool! I've been very bad again, Tommy. I think, perhaps, you ought to beat me."

"Oh, well," said he, as one who tries to find something good in the world, "you haven't been bad before for a long time. It was due, I expect. Yes, I expect you've been rather a fool."

"And, Tommy," she said, with her face hidden, "I—I think you were splendid. Oh, splendid! I heard it all. I was in those shrubs."

Mr. Stanley started dramatically.

"No!" he cried. "I won't believe it. Listening?"

"Yes," she confessed without shame. "I listened. And I'm glad. You were splendid. I was so proud of you, Tommy."

But abruptly she stiffened in his arms and looked up.

"Who is that girl?" she demanded. "Who is the girl you said might come here and make your head spin? That's what I want to know. Who is she?"

HUGO — By Arnold Bennett

The voice of the dead Francis Tudor reveals to Hugo that Camilla is still alive and menaced by Ravengar

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

HUGO owns the most remarkable department store in London; it occupies a large block and part of the building is devoted to luxurious apartments. Hugo lives in a' tower. His mother, who is dead, married the father of Louis Ravengar, a great London company promoter and enemy of Hugo. After the death of Hugo's mother the elder Ravengar married a woman who deserted him and married another man after an American divorce. Francis Tudor, who occupied one of Hugo's apartments, was born of that marriage. Camilla Payne was Louis Ravengar's secretary. She left him and became a milliner in Hugo's. She is the only woman Hugo ever loved. She marries Tudor and is pursued by Ravengar, who desires her. Four months after the marriage her death is announced and Francis Tudor dies suddenly. The apartment is sealed by Senior Polycarp, Tulor's executor. Ravengar tries to destroy Hugo by causing riots in his store during a sale and locking him up in one of his own safe deposit vaults; but he escapes and beguiles Ravengar into his tower where he intends to kill him. Hugo foregoes this revenge when Ravengar tells him Camilla is not dead and to solve the mystery he breaks into Francis Tudor's sealed flat where he finds Albert Shawn, his detective; a detective employed by Ravengar, and Polycarp. He also finds a pile of gramaphone disks which prove to have on them a confession by the dead Tudor of how he beguiled Camilla into marrying him and how she suddenly disappeared from his flat and Ravengar appeared. Tudor's confession continues:

CHAPTER XVII—Continued

I NEEDN'T describe my surprise at all that. Ravengar was beside himself with rage. I gathered, after a time, that he claimed Camilla as his own. He said I had stolen her from him.

I couldn't tell exactly what he was driving at, but I parleyed with him a little until I could get my revolver out of a drawer in my escritoire. He jumped at me. I thrust him back without firing, and we stood each of us ready for murder. I couldn't say how long that lasted.

Suddenly he glanced across the room, and his eyes faltered, and I became aware that Camilla had entered silently. I was so startled at her appearance and by the transformation in Ravengar that I let off the revolver involuntarily.

I heard Camilla order him, in a sharp, low voice, to leave instantly.

He defied her for a second, and then went. Before leaving he stuttered, in a dreadful voice: "I shall kill you"—meaning her. "I may as well hang for one thing as for another."

I said to Camilla, gasping: "What is it all? What does it mean?"

She then told me, after confessing that she had caught Ravengar hiding in the dressing room, and had actually suspected that I had been in league with him against her, that long ago she had by accident seen Ravengar commit a crime.

She would not tell me what crime; she would give me no particulars. Still, I gathered that, if not actually murder, it was at least homicide. After that Ravengar had pestered her to marry him—had even said that he would be content with a purely formal marriage; had offered her enormous sums to agree to his proposal; and had been constantly repulsed by her.

I urged her to communicate with the police. She refused absolutely.

"Then one day you will be killed," I said.

She gazed at me, and said: "Can't you hit on some plan to keep me safe for a year?"

I demanded: "Why a year?"

I thought she was thinking of my short shrift.

She said: "Because in a year Mr. Ravengar will probably have—passed away."

Not another word of explanation would she add.

"Yes," I said; "I can hit on a plan."

And, as a matter of fact, a scheme had suddenly flashed into my head.

She asked me what the scheme was. And I murmured that it began with our marriage on the following day. I had in my possession a license which would enable us to go through the ceremony at once.

"Trust me," I said. "You have trusted me enough to agree to marry me. Trust me in everything."

I did not venture to tell her just then what my scheme was.

Then you will remember I sent for you, Polycarp, made my will, and accompanied you to my safe in your private vault, in order to deposit there some secret instructions. I shall not soon forget your mystification, and how you chafed under my imperative commands.

Camilla and I departed to Paris, my brain full of my scheme, and full of happiness, too. We went to a private hotel to which Darcy had recommended us, suitable for honeymoons.

The following morning I was, perhaps, inclined to smile a little at our terror of Ravengar; but, peeping out of the window early, I saw Ravengar himself standing on the pavement in the Rue St. Augustin.

I told Camilla I was going out, and that she must not leave that room, nor admit anyone into it, until I returned. I felt that Ravengar, what with disappointed love, and jealousy, and fear of the consequences of a past crime, had developed into a sort of monomaniac in respect to Camilla.

It was quite early. However, I walked up the Rue de Grammont, and so to Darcy's, and I routed him out of bed. I gave him the entire history of the case. I convinced him of its desperateness, and I unfolded to him my scheme.

At first he fought shy of it. He said it might ruin him. He said such things could not be done in London. I had meant to carry out the scheme in this flat. Hence the reason, Polycarp, of the clause in my will which provides for the sealing up of the flat in case I die within two months of my wedding. You see, I feared that I might be cut off before the plan was carried out or before all traces of it were cleared away, and I wanted to keep the place safe from prying eyes. As it happened, there was no need for such a precaution, as you will see, and I shall make a new will tomorrow.

Darcy said suddenly: "Why not carry our your plan here in Paris, and now?"

The superior advantages of this alternative were instantly plain. It would be safer for Camilla, since it would operate at once; and also Darcy said that the formal details could be arranged much better in Paris than in London, as doctors could be found there who would sign anything, and clever sculptors, who did not mind a peculiar commission, were more easily obtainable in the Quartier Montparnasse than in the neighborhood of the Six Bells and the Arts Club, Chelsea.

We found the doctor and the sculptor.

The hotel was informed that Camilla was ill and that the symptoms pointed to typhoid fever. Naturally, she kept her room.

That day the sculptor, a young American, who said that a thing was "bully" when he meant it was good, arrived, and took a mask of Camilla's head.

By the way, this was a most tedious and annoying process. The two straws through which the poor girl had to breathe while her face was covered with that white stuff—Oh, well, I needn't go into that.

The next day typhoid fever was definitely announced. Hotels generally prefer these things to be kept secret, but we published it everywhere—it was part of our plan.

In a few hours the entire Rue St. Augustin was aware that the English bride, recently arrived from London, was down with typhoid fever.

The disease ran its course. Sometimes Camilla was better, sometimes worse. Then all of a sudden a hemorrhage supervened, and the young wife died, and the young husband was stricken with trouble and grief.

The whole street mourned. The death even got into the Paris dailies, and the correspondence column of the Paris edition of the New York Herald was filled with outcries against the impurities of Parisian water.

It was colossal. I laughed, Polycarp.

My mind unhinged by sorrow, I insisted on taking the corpse to London for burial. I had a particular affection for the Brompton Cemetery, though neither her ancestors nor mine had been buried there.

The coffin contained a really wonderful imitation of her outward form, modeled and colored by the American sculptor in a composition consisting largely of wax. The widower's one grief was that he was forced to separate himself from his life's companion for a period of, at least, a week.

A pretty enough scheme, wasn't it, Polycarp? We shall shortly bury the wax effigy in Brompton Cemetery, with the assistance of Hugo's undertakers, and a parson or so, and grave diggers, and registrars of deaths, and so on, and so on.

Louis Ravengar will breathe again, thankful that typhoid fever has relieved him of an unpleasant incubus, and since Camilla is underground, he will speedily forget all about her. She will be absolutely safe from him.

I can hear you say that I am mad, Polycarp, that Francis Tudor was always a little "wrong." But I am not mad. It is only that my brain is too agile, too fanciful. I am a great deal more sane than you, Polycarp.

And I am trying to put some heart into myself. I am trying to make ready to enjoy the brief ecstatic future where Camilla awaits me. But I am so tired, Polycarp.

And there's no disguising the fact that it's an awful nuisance never to be quite sure whether you won't fall down dead the next minute or the next second.

I must go in and have another glance at that singular swindle of a coffin.

The phonograph went off into an inarticulate whir of its own machinery. The recital was over.

Tudor must have died immediately after securing the record in the safe in his bedroom, where Hugo had just listened to it.

"She lives!" was Hugo's sole thought. "She lives! Ravengar probably knows where she is, and I do not know! And Ravengar is at large! I have set him at large."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Are you there.

THERE were 15 lines of telephone in the Hugo building, and one of them ran to the dome.

And as he got out of bed to go across to the telephone, his great joy resumed possession of him, and he was rather glad than otherwise that the telephone had forced him to wake.

"Well, well, well?" he cried comically, lifting the earpiece off the hook and stopping the bell.

"Are you there?" the still small voice of the telephone whispered in his ear.

"I should think I was here!" he cried. "Who are you?"

"I just want to say goodby to you," said the voice.

"It isn't"—something prompted him to use a Christian name—"it isn't Louis?"

"Yes."

"Where are you, then?" Hugo demanded.

"Not far off," replied the mysterious voice in the telephone.

It was unmistakably the voice of Louis Ravengar, but apparently touched with some new quality, some quality of resigned and dignified despair.

"I'm saying goodby," said the voice once more. "I suppose you mean to have the police after me, and so I mean to get out of their way. See? But first I wished to tell you—crrrck cluck—Eh? What?"

"I didn't speak."

"It's these exchange hussies, then. I wanted to tell you I've thought a lot about our interview last night. What you said was true enought, Owen. I admit that, and so I'm going to end it. Eh? Are you there? That girl keeps putting me off."

"End what?"

"End it—it—it! I'm not making anybody happy, not even myself, and so I'm going to end it. But I'll tell you her address first. I know it."

"Whose address?"

"Hers—Camilla's. If I tell you, will you promise not to say a word about me speaking to you on the telephone this morning?"

"Yes."

"Not a word under any circumstances?"

"Certainly."

"Well, it's 17, Place Saint-Etienne, Bruges Belgium."

"Seventeen, Place Saint-Etienne, Bruges. That's all right. I can't forget. Look here, Louis, you'd better clear out of England. Go to America. Do you hear? I don't understand this about 'ending it.' You surely aren't thinking of"——

He felt quite magnanimous toward Ravengar. And he was aware that he could get to Bruges in six hours or so.

"That idea of yours about chloroform," said the voice, "and going into the vault, and being shut up there, is a very good one. Nobody would know, except the person whom one paid to shut the door after one."

"I say, where are you?" Hugo asked curtly. He was at a loss how to treat these singular confidences.

"And so is that idea good about merely ending one incarnation and beginning another. That's much better than calling it death."

"I shall ring you off," said Hugo.

"Wait a moment," said the voice, still patiently. "If you should hear the name Callear"——

There was a pause.

"Well?" Hugo inquired, "what name?"

"Callear—C-a-l-l-e-a-r. If you should hear that name soon"——

"What then?"

"Remember your promise of secrecy—that's all. Goodby."

"I wish you'd tell me where you are."

"Not far off," said the voice. "I shall never be far off, I think. When you've found Camilla and brought her here"—the tone of the voice changed and grew almost malignant, despite its reticence—"you'd like to know that I was always near to, somewhere underneath, moldering, wouldn't you?"

"What did you say?"

"I said moldering. Goodby."

"But look here"——

Hugo tried in vain to resume communication with him. He could not even get any sort of reply from the exchange.

"It's a queer world," he soliloquized, as he returned to bed. "What does the man mean?"

He was still happy in the prospect of finding Camilla, but it was as though his happiness were a pool in a private ground, and some tresspasser had troubled it with a stone.

The clock struck 10, and Simon entered with tea and the paper.

CHAPTER XIX.

Suicide.

THE paper contained a whole-page advertisement of Hugo's great annual sale, and also a special half-page advertisement headed "Hugo's Apology and Promise"—a message to the public, asking pardon of the public for the confusion, inconvenience and disappointment of the previous day, hinting that the mystery of the affair would probably be elucidated in a criminal court, and stating that a prodigious number of silvered fox-stoles would positively be available from 9 o'colck that morning at a price even lower than the figure named in the original announcement.

In addition to Hugo's advertisements, there were several columns of news describing the singular phenomena of the sale, concluding with what a facetious reporter had entitled "Interviews With Survivors."

As he read the detailed accounts, Hugo knew, perhaps for the first time in his life, what it was "to go hot and cold all over."

However, he was decidedly inclined to be optimistic. "Anyhow," he said, "it's the best ad I ever had. Still, it's a mercy there were no deaths."

While he was lunching under the dome, Albert Shawn came in with the early edition of the Evening Herald, containing a prominent item headed "Feared Suicide of Mr. Louis Ravengar."

The paper stated that Mr. Ravengar had gone to Dover on the previous evening, had been seen to board the Calais steamer, and had been missed soon after the boat had left the harbor. His hat, umbrella, rug and bag had been found on deck.

As the night was quite calm, there could be no other explanation than that of suicide. The Evening Herald gave a sympathetic biography of Mr. Ravengar ("one of our proprietors"), and attributed his suicide to a fit of depression caused by the entirely groundless rumors which had circulated during the late afternoon connecting him with the scandalous disturbances at Hugo's sale. Hugo dropped the organ of public opinion.

"H-m!" he observed to Albert.

"I'm not surprised, sir," said Albert.

"Aren't you?" said Hugo. "Then, there's nothing more to be said."

Since Louis Ravengar had certainly been talking with Hugo that selfsame morning, it was obviously impossible that he should have committed suicide in the English Channel some 12 hours earlier.

Why, then, had he arranged for this elaborate deception to be practised? What was his scheme? His voice through the telephone had been so quiet, so resigned, so pathetic; only toward the end had it be-
